Hopkins to Head Board in Control Of Relief Billions

FERA Head Is Expected to Begin His Task on Return From South.

Ickes and Tugwell To Get Key Posts

Others Slated to Serve Include Admr. Peoples and Gen. Wood.

By Felix Bruner.

Harry L. Hopkins, now Federal Emergency Relief administrator, will be the big boss of the new $4,880,000,000 work-relief program.

Hurrying back to Washington, after riding to Florida with President Roosevelt, Hopkins is expected to start the program moving immediately, anticipating early agreement on the works bill.

Hopkins is expected to head a works board, either as chairman or as a coordinator.

Prominent on the board will be Secretary Ickes and Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture. Other members probably will include Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., who will represent business interests, and Admiral Christian J. Peoples, director of the procurement division of the Treasury.

Secretary Ickes is expected to continue the Public Works Administration with its many uncompleted projects. Tugwell, it is anticipated, will have charge of rural rehabilitation, the vast problem created by the drought and dust storms, and soil erosion problems, all of which are expected to put more men to work immediately than any of the other works projects.

Jobs for 3,500,000.

In this manner, the Administration is expected to conduct the huge program, planned to put 3,500,000 men to work directly and an equal number indirectly, with existing set-ups.

Hopkins at present is spending $5,000,000 daily on work and direct relief. Under his direction are 2,250,000 men on work relief, representing, with their dependents, half the relief burden of the country. They will be gradually switched to work relief under the new law.

The relief administration at present has sufficient money to last until April 1. It is expected the works bill will become law by that time. Under its provisions, Hopkins will be given $880,000,000 for direct and work relief under the present program. Expenditures from this sum will diminish gradually as the new program gets under way.

The organization now in process of formation follows the suggestion of President Roosevelt's original message to Congress, in which he indicated the works projects would be under direction of a newly formed "authority." Incidentally, the plan is the same as that forecast by The Post on January 5.

Housing to Be Stressed.

One of the principal projects provided under the works bill is housing. There have been reports Hopkins would take direct charge of this work. Secretary Ickes who sat in his office yesterday while Hopkins traveled to Florida with the President, indicated he would like to have charge of the housing work.

Ickes has made no secret of the fact he would like to have a leading part in the new works program. He has had charge of the PWA, the principal works relief project up to this time, while Hopkins has had charge of direct relief.

The Interior Secretary yesterday in commenting on the proposal of Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, to introduce a bill calling for an appropriation of $800,000,000 for housing, said that he would not "close the door" to the proposal.

"I am very keen about low cost housing," he said. "People in the

$51,000,000 in Work Provided by HOLC

More than $51,000,000 has been spent or awarded in contracts for repairs on borrowers' homes during mortgage refinancing operations, the Home Owners Loan Corporation announced yesterday. The aggregate volume of loans by the corporation up to March 14 reached $2,506,226.13.

Almost 42,000,000 man-hours of employment have been provided by contracts let to date, it was estimated. About 125,000 contractors were awarded jobs.

Contracts executed number 298,577. An additional 180,000 cases are pending, which will bring the total of disbursements for repairs to approximately $81,000,000.

Midwest G.O.P. To Open Fight On Roosevelt

Kansas City Rally Set for May by Group Seeking to Lead '36 Attack.

By Raymond Clapper.

Middle Western Republicans are assuming leadership in an effort to revive the party so as to present formidable opposition to President Roosevelt in the presidential election next year.

Party leaders from a dozen Middle Western States are being asked to gather at Kansas City in May to discuss both organization and a statement of principles which, they hope, will serve as a pacesetter for the Republican national convention next year.

William Allen White, it is understood, has agreed to serve as chairman of the resolutions committee which will prepare this statement. A veteran wheelhorse of the first Roosevelt in the Progressive Party movement, the Emporia editor represents the moderately progressive brand of Republican who has accepted certain parts of the New Deal program but has vigorously opposed tendencies toward regimentation, curtailment of liberty, and overdevelopment of regulatory controls at Washington. If his views dominate the conference, it should take a position somewhere between those of the Hoover-Ogden Mills conservatives and the New Deal.

71,000 to Attend.

The conference will be attended by more than 1,000 party representatives, selected by Republican county committees throughout the Middle West. The position taken by such a representative party group is likely to have a profound effect in shaping the attitude of the party at the national convention a year hence and for this reason the forthcoming conference is regarded as the most significant party development since the crash of 1932.

Plans for the meeting were discussed here recently between Republican National Chairman Fletcher and John Hamilton, Kansas national committeeman, who is one of the organizers of the proposed gathering.

It was suggested originally by Richard Lloyd Jones, publisher of the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune, to a group of Republican leaders at the Kansas Day dinner last January.

Eastern Leaders Unpopular.

The significance of the movement lies in the fact that in the Middle West, Republican leaders feel it desirable to take the lead in restoration of the party rather than to follow the Eastern leadership, which has lost popularity through the Middle West. To that extent this

Press Codes, NRA Is Told By Roosevelt

White House Urges Full Power Be Exerted to Obtain Compliance.

Swift Action on New Law Also Sought to End Uncertainty.

President Roosevelt yesterday asked that the "full power" of the NRA be exerted to obtain compliance with codes.

In a letter to Donald R. Richberg, Recovery Board chairman, the President declared there was no justification for industry to lengthen hours or reduce wages contrary to code provisions.

At the same time he asked that the Recovery Board present to Senate and House committees facts showing the necessity for accelerating action on the proposed new NRA law. Speed was urged to end uncertainty, which the President said is having a retarding effect on industry.

Coincident with the President's letter, the Administration blocked a Supreme Court test of the constitutionality of the recovery act.

Dismissing the Belcher case, in which the Federal District Court of Alabama declared the act unconstitutional, the Department of Justice effectively prevented any ruling on the present law before it expires June 16.

Text of Letter to Richberg.

The President's letter to Richberg, in reply to a request as to his desires concerning code enforcement, said:

"Before leaving Washington I wish to answer your letter of today (Monday) and to express to the National Industrial Recovery Board my desire that the full power of the National Industrial Recovery Administration shall be exerted to insist upon and to obtain compliance with the requirements of approved codes of fair competition. There is no excuse whatsoever at the present time for members of trade and industry who have sponsored and are subject to these codes to fail to give them wholehearted support. Nor can there be any justification for the bad faith involved in attempting to lengthen hours or reduce wages contrary to code requirements.

"I am particularly requesting the Department of Justice to give every assistance in maintaining compliance with the codes and in advising the district attorneys throughout the country to take prompt and vigorous action to prevent or to punish such violations.

"Let me also suggest that the National Industrial Recovery Board should bring the facts of this situation to the attention of the appropriate committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives so that they may understand the importance of accelerating action to extend the national industrial recovery act and to end a period of uncertainty as to the provisions and the extension of the law which has a retarding effect upon industrial recovery and tends to unsettle commercial and labor relations."

Government Blocks Appeal.

While the President insisted that district attorneys "crack down" upon code violators, codes have effectively been suspended by Federal court decisions in Alabama, Kentucky, Missouri and elsewhere, while the Government blocks appeal. It was upon the Government's own motion that the Supreme Court consented to hear the Belcher case directly on appeal from the district court instead of waiting for review by a circuit court of appeals.

The explanation given officially was that the NRA admitted the lumber code was defective and it did not wish to bring a decisive case before the Supreme Court under such a code. The original decision, however, went further than the provisions of the specific code and held the principle of NRA, as it affects intrastate commerce, unconstitutional.

Meanwhile, the resident committee of the Lumber Code Authority announced last night it had wired its administrative divisions throughout the country a recommendation

'Blood Group Tests' Enacted in New York

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., March 26.—New York courts, burdened with heavy calendars, were authorized today to employ "blood grouping tests" as a scientific way of determining when New Yorkers are innocent of certain crimes and civil offenses charged against them.

While a group of physicians and scientists looked on, Gov. Albert H. Lehman signed three laws authorizing judges to compare the blood of suspects with other evidence.

A pin prick in a prisoner's flesh, a chemical process and a microscopic examination — and some men can be set free, under the plan described to the Governor.

Supreme Court Justice Meier Steinbrink predicted many legal abuses growing out of paternity and assault cases will disappear because an innocent man can prove his innocence.

Witness Gets His Raid Tip 'From the Air'

Doesn't Know Who Told Him or How, Fred Testifies at Crime Inquiry.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

Hugh W. Fred, the citizen whose reputed statements threatened to become a gibbet for the reputations and official lives of valorous policemen, yesterday told the House District Crime Committee he had got advance information of a raid "from the air."

He told the committee he did not know whether one or two men made the statement. He told the committee he didn't know whether he was standing still or walking when he heard the advance tip. He didn't know whether there were any policemen present when it was made. He didn't know whether the men were white or colored, poorly dressed or well dressed. He did not know who made the statement.

No, he told the committee, he was not joking when he told Capt. Joseph E. Morgan, commander of the Fifth Police Precinct, he had heard at 10 o'clock one morning that 113 B street southeast was to be raided at 2 o'clock that afternoon. He hadn't heard just that, he said. It was only after the raid that he had put two and two together and concluded that the statement he had heard at 10 a. m. applied to the 2 p. m. raid, he said.

Denies Giving Tip.

Twice the committee had heard the bulky detective, Watson Salkeld, of the Fifth Precinct, who has been commended for bravery, swear he had not given an advance tip. He had sworn his denial in such broad words and sweeping gestures as to challenge anyone to pick a flaw in it. He meant his denial to cover every contingency, the committee understood.

Testimony of Mr. Fred, on whose statement Capt. Morgan based his assertion Mr. Salkeld was the only man who could have given the tip-off, was in marked contrast to the spontaneous and ready answers of the detective. Mr. Fred, who conducts the Ugly Duckling Tea Room, at 115 B street southeast, wanted to be suave. His suavity was encompassed in the answer: "I don't know."

"Do you know Capt. Morgan?" Mr. Fred was asked when he took the stand.

"I went to the station once in my life."

"Did you have a conversation

Senate Votes Alcohol Unit Back Salary

Plan by Byrnes Would Insure Jobs to All Except 450.

1,300 Workers Will Get $1,385,864 if House Approves Rider.

Employes of the alcohol tax unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau, who have been working without pay since last December 1, yesterday were rewarded. The Senate moved to make partial amends for the injustice done them by the McKellar "patronage rider."

The Senate adopted an amendment to the Treasury-Post Office appropriations bill which will, if accepted by the House, insure all of the 1300 workers payment of salaries to May 15, retroactive to December 1, and will require only about 450 of them to take non-competitive examinations to retain their jobs after that date.

The non-competitive examination feature was an amendment to the appropriations committee compromise, which had proposed open competitive tests, and was offered by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina.

McKellar Criticized.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, tried to justify his "patronage rider," aimed at dismissing "Hoover Republicans," formerly prohibition agents, later admitted into the alcohol tax unit of the Treasury Department. He was subjected to criticism, however, from both sides of the chamber.

A bitter clash between McKellar and Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, enlivened the debate.

Senator Ashurst opened with a statement that he had voted for the rider last year under a misapprehension and that he apologized to the Senate and to the country.

"I believe I have a right to say that the Senator from Tennessee himself did not know what he was doing or he would not have done it," Ashurst said. "He is too able and fair a man."

Ashurst Apologizes.

McKellar jumped immediately to his feet and protested that he had been done an injustice.

"I have not done the Senator an injustice," Ashurst continued. "If he says he has done this wilfully, then he has done himself an injustice as this rider came very near disrupting the whole law-enforcement program of the Government."

Subsequently, Senator Ashurst tendered an apology to McKellar by explaining that it is not unjust to state that any man is "grossly ignorant" on certain subjects. He said that he stood by his original observation, but was sorry that the Tennessee Senator had misinterpreted his remarks.

Senator McKellar, obviously nettled, said that he did not consider Ashurst's secondary remarks an apology.

Senators Couldn't Pass.

Protesting Senators finally ended the argument, and the Senate turned its attention to other matters.

The examination which a large majority of the Internal Revenue Bureau investigators failed came in for much sarcastic criticism by the Senate.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, asserted no Senator could have passed the examination drawn up by the Civil Service Commission and he lamented that it barred experienced detectives and policemen and Texas rangers by a condition

Hitler's Equality Issue Wrecks Berlin Parley; 4 Nazi Plotters to Die

Memel Separatists Convicted, With 83 Sentenced to Prison

35 Acquitted at Trial; Convictions Forward Plebiscite Move.

By the United Press.

Kovno, Lithuania, March 26.—Lithuania today smashed with an armed fist a Nazi movement to return the Province of Memel to the German Fatherland, from which it was wrenched in the post-war reshuffling of boundaries.

Four separatists were condemned to death for high treason, 83 sentenced to long prison terms and 35 were acquitted.

German desire for a plebiscite on return of Memel to the homeland was intensified by the harsh verdicts of the courts-martial.

It is a tragedy of the peace treaty, which Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler has just abrogated by openly announcing Germany's rearmament. Lithuania, one of the little Baltic states set up by the peacemakers to check Germany's eastward influence, was given the German Province of Memel. The population is mostly German.

Outlawing of the two leading Memel political parties, both with Nazi leanings, in February, 1934, drove the separatist movement underground but apparently only added fuel to the fires of opposition to Lithuanian rule.

One Georg Jessutis was slain after reportedly revealing secrets of the separatist plotters to the Lithuanian government. Arrest of the 122 whose fate was announced today followed.

Those sentenced to die are Walter

Belgian Devaluation Now Seems Probable

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, March 26.—Probable devaluation of the Belgian currency and possible recognition of Soviet Russia and the Japanese-advised State of Manchukuo were forecast in informed circles tonight while the new cabinet was taking the oath of office before King Leopold.

Premier Paul Van Zeeland was regarded as almost certain to call for devaluation of the Belga in announcing the program of his government before the Belgian Parliament.

A suggestion to the premier for an international currency stabilization conference was expected to be part of the new government's program.

It was believed likely in political circles that Van Zeeland would recommend recognition of Manchukuo and the U. S. S. R.

League Receives Japan's Farewell

Dern Urges Big Navy; Pittman Defends U.S. Fleet Maneuvers.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 26.—Anglo-German security discussions ended late today apparently without providing solution for any of the major problems imperiling Europe's peace.

Britain's representatives were obviously disappointed, while the Germans seemed as determined as ever in their old demand for complete equality among nations.

A brief, vaguely-phrased official communique revealed little other than the bare fact that the conversations, held "in the frankest and friendliest spirit," took up the matters "set out in the London communique of February 3."

Highlights of Last Day.

Authoritative sources, however, said the highlights of the last day's parley between Sir John Simon and Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary and lord privy seal, and Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and Baron Konstantin von Neurath, foreign minister, were these:

The Germans insisted that their rearmament be treated as an accomplished fact, held details of their arms program in abeyance, turned arms accusations against Germany's neighbors and hence caused the conversations to deal largely with "armies rather than disarmament."

The Reich's representatives again declined to consider reentering the League of Nations until all related problems have been settled.

Hitler's pet theory that bilateral nonaggression pacts are the most effective instruments of peace was presented to the British, while large international gatherings and multi-lateral pacts were criticized as ineffective.

Navy Barely Mentioned.

The Germans objected to the proposed Danubian "noninterference" pact on the grounds that it might mean perpetuation of an Austrian regime to which the Austrian people itself is hostile.

A reported German desire to increase her navy to 400,000 tons received bare mention in the course of the conversations.

A British spokesman, after reading the brief communique, said the question of the proposed six-power meeting, in which Germany was to have participated, "is left entirely for the future."

He further frankly admitted that "it is obvious to any one that there is a curious difference of viewpoint between our two countries."

"You will notice," he said, "that the communique does not suggest that we have reached a common point of view. We are nevertheless quite convinced that this direct method of meeting was the right thing and we are justified in bilateral meetings."

NRA Instructs Textile Mills To Cut Output

Edict Blames AAA for Market Glut Requiring 25% Cut in Hours.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Acting to alleviate the glut in the cotton textile market, the NRA yesterday authorized a reduction in production of cotton goods for the next three months and inferentially laid the blame on the New Deal farm program.

An order was issued by the NIRB empowering the Cotton Textile Industry Committee, the code authority, to curtail by as much as 25 per cent the present hours of mill operation and the number of machines in service during this "emergency" period.

In explanation of this action, the NRA mentioned the doubling of the price of cotton, the cotton processing tax—both features of the AAA farm program—the dwindling of exports, and the "unprecedented increase in imports."

This situation, threatening the jobs of thousands in the cotton textile industry, is drawing increasing attention on Capitol Hill, and last night was the basis for a caustic radio attack on the Administration by Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York.

Japanese Imports Rising.

American imports of Japanese cotton cloth have been increasing by leaps and bounds, Department of Commerce figures show. For the first two months of this year, more cotton cloth has been imported from Nippon than for the whole of last year, it is disclosed.

As a result, a new drive against the cotton processing tax, which is jointly blamed with the NRA for raising the price of American cotton goods, is gathering momentum on the Hill. An effort is also un-

U. S. Considers Loan Embargo In Case of War

Nye Committee to Decide on Making Our Neutrality Impregnable.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Proposals to authorize the President, in case of war breaking out abroad, to embargo loans to all the belligerent nations is being seriously studied by members of the Nye munitions investigating committee.

It has not yet been decided to seek legislation on this point. Legislation, however, is being drafted by the committee to empower the President to restrict or prohibit, if he deems it necessary, foreign travel and trade by American citizens in the event of a foreign conflict.

Many students of the problem of making this country's neutrality impregnable in the event of a major war consider an embargo on loans to the belligerent countries as of as much importance as withdrawing the Government's protection from travelers and shippers who venture into the war zone. But the former is a more difficult problem to deal with than the latter.

Inquiry Impends.

The Nye committee will not make a final decision regarding legislation to prevent nations at war borrowing huge sums and perhaps by that fact subsequently involving the United States in the conflict until after an inquiry into American banking practices in relation to the World War, scheduled for early next month.

The committee is nearing completion of its inquiry into the profits and activities of munitions makers. It will hear today Bernard M. Baruch, former chairman of the War Industries Board and ever since an advocate of legislation designed to take the profit out of war. The committee has prepared a 12-point

The Post's Exclusive Rights To Six Features Reaffirmed

'The Gumps,' 'Dick Tracy,' 'Gasoline Alley' and 'Winnie Winkle' to Appear Solely in This Newspaper After Execution of Order.

The Washington Post's exclusive right to publish in this city the four comic strips known as "The Gumps," "Dick Tracy," "Gasoline Alley" and "Winnie Winkle" was further confirmed yesterday when the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia denied a motion of the Washington Times Co., publishers of the Herald, for a stay of its mandate.

The court also denied a motion for rehearing of the case in which it decided two weeks ago that The Washington Post is entitled to an injunction restraining the Washington Times Co. from publishing in the Herald, or Times, these four comic strips, as well as two syndicated feature articles.

The court's mandate to this effect is expected to go down to the lower court for execution on Friday. This represents another step in litigation in which The Post sought, and was granted by the Court of Appeals, the injunction to provide for exclusive local publication of the four comics and two feature articles in The Post and to prohibit further publication in the Herald.

Suit was filed by The Post to assure performance of a contract with The Tribune Co. of Chicago, by which concern these comics and features are syndicated. The contract was among assets acquired by The Post in the receivership sale confirmed by the District of Columbia Supreme Court on June 12, 1933. The following day The Washington Times Co., although its representative had attended the receivership sale, closed a contract with the syndicate firm to supply these comics and features to it, regardless of The Post's contract for exclusive publication rights in Washington.

Justice Bailey, before whom the case was heard in the District Supreme Court, denied an injunction and dismissed the suit, but this decision was reversed on appeal to the Court of Appeals which held that The Post was entitled to the injunction prohibiting The Washington Times Co. from continuing publication of the comics and features in the Herald. By its further action yesterday, the Court of Appeals denied motions of the Washington Times Co. for a stay of its mandate and for a rehearing of the case. The mandate is thus due to go down to the lower court on Friday for issuance of the injunction. Upon the final issuance of this injunction the four comics and the two features will appear exclusively in Washington in The Post.

Mine Head Found Frozen to Death

Canadian Died Seeking Aid After Forced Landing.

By the Associated Press.

Senneterre, Quebec, March 26.—The frozen body of Stanley E. Siscoe, wealthy mining executive missing since his plane was forced down in the wilderness a week ago, was found today near Lake Matchimanitou.

A Canadian Airways plane, piloted by S. J. McRorie, found the body.

Siscoe and Thomas Wrathall, pilot, were forced down during a blinding snowstorm last Tuesday. Wrathall was found yesterday alive and in good physical condition.

He said he was unable to get the craft into the air again after the storm subsided. The two men then set up camp in a trapper's shack until Sunday, when their food was exhausted. Siscoe set out for aid in a northwesterly direction, Wrathall said, against his advice.

The body, crumpled in the snow, was spotted from the air just two or three half miles from the little trapper's camp.

Roosevelt Wears Tired Smile Boarding Boat on Fishing Trip

By Edward T. Folliard.

A Staff Correspondent.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 26.—President Roosevelt was out on the Atlantic tonight, seeking barracuda, the "tiger of the sea."

The President seemed tired when he arrived. Perhaps the grueling bouts with Congress had told on him. Nevertheless, he managed a characteristic smile as he was being whisked through the streets and as he was shoving out into the Atlantic.

On his way down from Washington, the President spent six hours with Harry L. Hopkins, head of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. They talked about the administration of the $4,880,000,000 relief bill now emerging from Congress.

The President will not be free to devote his entire time to barracuda for the next ten days, as he had hoped. Some day this week, it is expected, the $4,880,000,000 relief bill will come out of conference and be approved by both House and Senate.

Then the indorsed bill will be rushed southward and sent down to the President by seaplane for his signature.

What the President and Hopkins actually accomplished was to complete the set-up of the new works relief program.

The presence of Hopkins was taken by some to mean that he will have a leading part in the Administration of the new program.

The White House announced some time ago the President was going to keep personal control over the relief fund.

It was added at the same time that the President would be assisted by Hopkins, by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, by Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell, and Admiral Peoples, who has been loaned by the Navy.

President Roosevelt arrived here about 2:30.

2 Elated D.C. Men Win $3,975, Chance at $150,000 in Sweeps

Americans, to the number of 286, at least, are going around with broad smiles today as a result of being informed that they had drawn horses in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes, thus insuring each of them at least $3,785, with a chance to cop the top purse of $150,000 which goes to the holder of the ticket on the winning horse.

One of the lucky ticket holders is Lester B. Teed, 27-year-old linotype operator at the Government Printing Office, and another is J. Harry Cunningham, vice president of the Lanham Engraving Co., in the Printcraft Building.

Mr. Cunningham showed little more than a broad grin on receiving the news that he had drawn a ticket on Lazy Boots and, despite the fact that offers to buy part of the ticket were coming at him from all directions, he stood fast for all or $3,795.

Mr. Cunningham is widely known in Washington business circles and for many years has been secretary of the Gridiron Club. He resides at 214 East Thornapple St., Chevy Chase, Md.

Teed, who lives at Rogers Heights, Md., drew Tapinois, one of the favorites in the race to be run on Friday at Aintree, England, Associated Press dispatches said. His reaction on learning of his luck was "Most everyone seems to be more excited about this than I am."

The printer refused to make any forecasts as to what he will do with the money. "I am going to wait until I get the money before I express my enthusiasm," he said. When informed at his office that he had drawn Tapinois, Teed fumbled through his pockets and failed to find the ticket. He then remembered that he left it home with his wife.

Teed confessed that he buys chances on "everything that comes along." He and another Marylander, Clarence Weihrauch, of Catonsville, who also drew Tapinois, stand to win $150,000 if that horse is the first to cross the finish line, $75,000 if second, and $50,000 if third.

"I'm just lucky," was Weihrauch's

Failure Feared For Social Bill In This Session

Move to Split Measure and Give Pensions Right of Way Is Begun.

Listing of the Administration's vast social security program on the President's "must" list of legislation yesterday caused wide misgivings among Senators, who believe the omnibus bill is headed into a storm of controversy that will overshadow the nine-week works bill dispute.

This view is shared by a majority of the Senate Finance Committee, which will handle the legislation after it is whipped through the House probably next week. A movement already has gained headway in the committee to split the bill into four separate measures, with old-age pensions given right of way.

One member of the committee, Senator William H. King (Democrat) of Utah, last night ventured a prediction that only old-age pensions will win through Congress this session, and the rest of the program will go over for more deliberate consideration.

House Body Report Near.

Meantime, the House Ways and Means Committee is planning to report favorably its revamped social security measure in the next day or two, Chairman Robert L. Doughton said last night. He said it may be taken up in the House next week.

To guard against riddling of the measure by a host of amendments, including motions to split the bill and even the Townsend $200-a-month old-age pension plan, the House bill probably will be brought into that chamber under a close rule, restricting both debate and amendments.

As no such debate limitation is possible without cloture proceedings in the Senate, deliberation in that body is expected to be bitter and protracted, even after the Senate Finance Committe hurdle is taken. That overworked committee has completed hearings on the bill, but has yet to begin to write its provisions.

State Enabling Legislation.

Of the two score State Legislatures that have been in session in recent weeks, less than half a dozen have adopted enabling legislation which would permit their States to take advantage of Federal old-age pension, unemployment insurance, and health aid projects.

Most of the rest will have adjourned by April 15, and will not reconvene for another two years, unless summoned back into special session. This is one of the principal arguments being used by Senators who favor passing over the major phases of the legislation until next year anyway.

While the House Ways and Means Committee already has made wide changes in the bill, stripping the Labor Department of jurisdiction over the administrative board and strengthening the control of cooperating State administrations, these are not expected to satisfy the Senate Finance Committee. That group is expected to write a new bill, from beginning to end, with broad possibility of a break-down into three or four distinct measures.

Tangled Legislative Program; Questioning The Cabinet; The Belcher Case.

By Raymond Clapper

IF Congress enacts the program desired by President Roosevelt, it will be here several months, well into summer. Before going South Mr. Roosevelt made out his preferred list and gave it to congressional leaders. On a good deal of it they have done little or no work.

Here is the outlook for the measures on the preferred list:

NRA extension—Senate hearings continuing; no action for several weeks; House still further behind; looks like a race against June 16 deadline when NRA expires.

Social security—House Ways and Means Committee in final stages of redrafting; giving more authority to States and placing administration under a separate board instead of under Labor Department; House leaders planning tight rule to keep Townsendites and other left wingers from voting in more liberal pensions than Administration favors. Senate threatening to split bill taking out old age pensions for early passage and letting remainder slide. Final action a considerable time in future.

Utility holding companies—House hearings still going on; Administration to insist on original bill; hard fight to modify more drastic features in prospect; no Senate action of any kind and lengthy committee hearings still to be held.

HOLC—Bill to increase loaning power by $1,750,000,000 and to expand powers of Federal Housing Administration passed House; pending in Senate committee; action expected in near future.

Taxes—Extension of nuisance taxes which expire June 30 certain; action being delayed in event Congress approves expenditures outside of budget requiring increased revenues.

Banking act—House hearings still going on; Senate hearing yet to be held; long fight in prospect.

Thus it is clear that even to enact the "white list" measures alone Congress faces weeks of committee work and floor dsicussion.

* * * *

In addition there are two other measures upon which the Administration would like action, but which may be deferred until next winter for lack of time—transportation and new food and drug legislation. Nothing has been done in either house on transportation. Food and drug legislation has been put in shape for consideration in the Senate and may be taken up shortly. The House has done nothing.

* * * *

Omitted from the preferred list is a considerable budget of important measures, some highly controversial and certain to require extended debate. These include:

War profits—The Nye Senate Munitions Committee is shortly to report its drastic measure to curb munitions profits, featuring a provision limiting all private salaries to $10,000 a year in war time. It is likely to come up for consideration soon. The House expects to pass the McSwain bill to limit war profits through taxation, a milder measure than the Senate bill. Final action by both houses on any such legislation highly doubtful.

Ship subsidies—House hearings being held; Senate experts making preliminary study; no action in sight.

Pink slip repeal—House passed; Senate action imminent.

Wagner Disputes Bill — Long fight ahead in Senate but given a 50-50 chance; no action in House; ultimate fate likely to depend on bargaining involving NRA extension and 30-hour week legislation.

Thirty-Hour Week — Reported out of Senate committee and on calendar awaiting action; Senate passed similar measure two years ago and House scrapped it when NRA was offered as a substitute; labor pushing hard but measure is regarded more in the light of a black-jack to force action on Wagner disputes bill, and to keep NRA policies more satisfactory to labor.

Air-Mail Contracts — House passed Mead bill increasing rates 20 per cent; no action in Senate; strong pressure from aviation interests may force it through despite Senate jam.

Bonus—House passed Patman inflationary bill; Senate committee hearings to start in week or two; final enactment of some bonus measure expected with probably Presidential veto and subsequent struggle to override veto.

Inflation—No chance of direct inflation legislation but inflationists are prepared to make trouble; Senator Elmer Thomas has nine speeches in his pocket discussing silver inflation and may deliver most of them when the works bill comes back from conference without his silver amendment; the Patman bonus bill and other inflationary proposals may be trotted out as riders on various other measures.

AAA amendments—House hearings continuing with strong opposition from manufacturers and processors; AAA pressing for action, but apathy in Congress makes final action uncertain.

* * * *

The Administration has sent word to the Capitol that it does not want the bill to permit Cabinet officers to appear on the floors of Congress for questioning and explanation of Administration policies. The reason is that President Roosevelt receives advice from a great many persons both in private and official life. Cabinet officers are only part of the Government team now with dozens of emergency agencies, some of which far overshadow most Cabinet officers. Therefore, it would mean little for Congress to call Cabinet officers. If they wanted to find out about the works bill policies, for instance, they would have to call Hopkins, who isn't in the Cabinet.

* * * *

The decision of the Administration to take a licking in the courts on the Belcher case, involving the constitutionality of NRA, has more behind it than appears on the surface. In this case, arising out of the lumber code, the lower court held that NRA could not regulate intrastate commerce. Originally the Government intended to carry the case to the Supreme Court. Now it has abandoned the fight ostensibly on the ground that the lumber code is defective and not a sound basis on which to make the test.

However, by abandoning the appeal, the Government has eliminated the possibility of the Supreme Court passing on NRA before next winter. By that time the new extension of the recovery act will be in effect, unless the Administration is greatly disappointed by Congress, and according to present plans it will have pulled out of intrastate regulation except where it feels that previous Supreme Court decisions give it a sound footing.

NRA authorities do not share the view of the lower courts with regard to narrow construction of what constitutes interstate commerce. NRA officials insist that Supreme Court precedents give a broader construction than most of the lower courts have given.

They wouldn't say it out loud but they think a good deal of their court trouble comes from judges appointed by the two previous Republican Presidents.

Works Piloted To Conference; Danger Ahead

Long, Thomas Pledge Fight as House Moves for Death of Rider.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Pilots of the Administration's works bill weathered a gale in the House yesterday and sailed on toward possible trouble in the person of Huey Long and other Senate rainmakers.

Inflationists were silenced as the House approved a gag resolution by 186 to 70 and sent the measure to conference. Then Speaker Byrns named conferees who will kill the Thomas silver amendment.

As House Democrats jumped at the crack of the whip Senators Long and Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, shouted threats of filibusters and delays on acceptance of the conference report.

Thomas smiled broadly and listed nine set speeches he plans to make in the Senate to hold up action on the bill and perhaps cause collapse of the Civilian Conservation Corps program, due to expire Monday unless the President can sign the works measure.

The Oklahoma Senator said he was undecided whether he would deliver the talks at once or drag them out over a week or two. The titles suggested boundless oratory. They ranged from "Silver, Cotton and the South" to "The World Monetary System."

Those Appointed.

House conferees named by Byrns were Representatives Buchanan, Texas; Oliver, Alabama; Arnold, Illinois, and Taylor, Colorado, Democrats; Taber and Bacon, both New York Republicans.

Managers for the Senate chosen earlier were Senators Carter Glass, Virginia; McKellar, Tennessee, and Copeland, New York, Democrats; and Hale, Maine, and Keys, New Hampshire, Republicans.

Though obviously whipped, the silver bloc didn't quit scrapping when the first test vote in the House went against them, 263 to 108. The Administration drew support from 197 Democrats and 66 Republicans. Eighty Democrats deserted and voted with 19 Republicans, 7 Progressives and 2 Farmer-Laborites.

The 186-to-70 vote on passage which followed was a teller's count, because the inflationists were unable to force a second roll call.

Wild cheers frequently interrupted Chairman O'Connor of the Rules Committee when he assailed the Kingfish by innuendo.

"This House," he cried, "can legislate in an orderly and expeditious manner without fear of any one man coming to town by airplane or train.

"We don't rush things through to get under the wire before somebody gets to town. We legislate by majority vote and not as a minority tells us we should. And we don't match demagoguery against demagoguery."

Thomas Smiles.

Even Senator Thomas, who sat in the rear, smiled at O'Connor's biting sarcasm, which resulted from Senate passage of the bill Saturday after Long threatened to rush here by plane from South Carolina.

Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, sought to win votes for the inflationists with a sharp attack on the tactics of the floor leadership.

"When this bill was before the House," he stormed, "those in charge did not give us time to offer an amendment. They said the bill must be hurried through. It was.

"Then the Senate debated it for two months. Now those in charge of it wish to get rid of some of the Senate amendments and have brought in this rule. It would do more good if we adopted those amendments than if we sent the bill to conference."

Taber, the chief Republican speaker, said the whole bill constituted fraud, but he would rather see it go to conference than to permit "inflation to make it any worse."

Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, an outspoken silverite, urged his colleagues not to "sacrifice the dignity of the House" by "swallowing" the gag rule.

Buchanan said the bill should be sent to conference because the Senate passed amendments which were "impractical of administration."

He listed as unsound the Thomas amendment, which would require the Treasury to issue currency against silver at its statutory value of $1.29 an ounce; the McCarran amendment, to require Senate confirmation of works fund employes receiving $5,000 or more a year, and the George amendment, which would permit diversion of works funds to the AAA.

Morro Castle Survivors Fight Liability Limit

New York, March 26 (AP).—Silas B. Axtell, attorney for 30 victims and administrators for victims of the Morro Castle disaster of September 8, 1934, today filed an answer to and asked dismissal of the petition of the Ward Line seeking limitation of liability to not more than the value of their interest in the vessel and cargo at the end of the voyage, estimated at $14,248. Claims filed approximate $2,000,000.

"The Morro Castle sailed in an unseaworthy, unsafe and dangerous condition," states the answer, "was improperly equipped and designed and was constituted without proper regard for fire prevention, fire fighting and protection from fire."

development can be regarded as an insurgent movement, although it is not such in the usual sense of the term, the promoters of the conference being all regular party men of mildly progressive views at most. It has no connection with insurgents of the Norris-La Follette-Nye progressive wing.

Hamilton and National Committeeman Spangler, of Iowa, are doing most of the preparatory organization work. All connected with the movement emphasize that it is not in any way concerned with promoting the fortunes of any individual presidential aspirant.

Plans for the conference became known coincident with the visit here of Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas, which, however, was concerned entirely with obtaining funds from the Administration for discing and furrowing western Kansas farm land to check dust storms.

Landon a Candidate?

Landon, one of the few Republican Governors to survive the Democratic landslides of 1932 and 1934, is mentioned as a potential candidate along with Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago; Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa. All of these States are expected to have delegates at the Kansas City meeting. Delegates also are expected from Oklahoma, Missouri, Ohio, Nebraska, Colorado, and possibly New Mexico and several other States.

Organizers say that the Republican party was born in the Middle West and that this is the logical place for its rebirth. One of them, Hamilton, was the runner-up for the post of Republican national chairman last June when Henry P. Fletcher was selected. Throughout the group is the feeling that the Eastern leadership which has dominated the party organization is out of touch with the spirit of the Middle West and can not appeal effectively to it. Therefore it is hoped that out of this meeting will grow a permanent Middle Western party headquarters. An effort will be made to hold the national convention next year in one of the Middle Western cities.

Kansas G. O. P. Hopeful.

While every effort will be made to keep discussion of individual candidates out of the picture, strong sectional feeling in favor of picking a nominee from the Middle West is developing. This, it is felt, offers the best chance of Republican victory in view of the potential candidacy of Huey Long as an independent.

Kansas Republican leaders estimate that Long could poll upward of 100,000 votes in Kansas, some putting the figure at 200,000, based on the fact that Kansas has always been easy picking for the wild man. For instance "Goat Gland" Brinkley, who was something of a local Huey Long, polled 180,000 votes for governor on a "write-in" campaign in 1930 and two years later polled 244,000 votes, again as an independent candidate. Roosevelt carried the State by 75,000. Republicans figure that 75 per cent of Long's votes would come out of votes which went to Roosevelt in 1932 so that if he drew 100,000 votes or more, Roosevelt would have difficulty carrying the State. Similar calculations are going on in the minds of Republicans in other States.

But as to the Republican who could take this situation and convert it into a national victory, opinion is totally uncrystallized and probably will continue so for some time to come.

Senate Chiefs Hold Pink Slip Repeal Likely

Publicity Measure Seen Doomed as New Tax Efforts Collapse.

By Robert C. Albright.

Repeal of the controverted "pink slip" income tax publicity was forecast last night by Senate leaders, following collapse of efforts to tie $600,000,000 in new taxes to the measure.

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, flatly predicted the repealer will be voted by the Senate today. The House already has approved the bill, 302 to 98.

Back in the fray again, Senator Huey Pierce Long, of Louisiana, jumped into yesterday's Senate debate long enough to oppose repeal, disclose a personal income last year of $25,000, and launch a few more shafts at the Administration.

Long's Income Put at $25,000.

Long's harrangue for full income tax publicity was interrupted by Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, with the blunt question:

"How much did you make last year?"

Huey stalled a bit, and then confessed he made $25,000, including his $9,000 salary as Senator and lawyer fees on the side.

"I spent it on brass bands, football games and drinks for my friends," he responded to a question by Senator Matthew M. Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia.

In forecasting Senate approval of "pink slip" repeal, Senator Harrison said chances were improved by withdrawal of tax amendments proposed by Senators James Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, and Robert La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

Couzens had proposed an excess-profits tax ranging from 5 to 40 per cent on adjusted declared value of corporation capital stock, while La Follette asked the normal income tax be increased from 4 to 6 per cent, and the surtax range be lifted from 1 to 59, to from 6 to 71 per cent. The Senators estimated both amendments would yield $600,000,000 additional annually.

Parliamentarians raised a question whether tax legislation, normally originating in the House, could be offered in the Senate, even as a rider on revenue legislation of the "pink slip" type. No ruling was made, but Harrison was informed the two Senators would not go forward with their amendments at this time.

La Follette, however, offered a mandatory tax publicity amendment, much stiffer than the existing "pink slip" law, which merely requires that gross income, net income, deductibles and tax paid be listed on a separate slip for public inspection. The La Follette amendment makes full publicity mandatory. A vote probably will be reached on his amendment early today, before the final vote on "pink slip" repeal.

If this fails, another publicity substitute may be offered by Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), of Colorado.

La Follette for Publicity.

La Follette insisted a strong tax publicity law aids revenue collections. He denied publicity plays in the hands of kidnapers and racketeers, citing the crime record of Wisconsin, where tax publicity has long been the law, in support of his argument.

Opposing wider publicity, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, declared the "pink slip" law is "un-American and indecent."

"To give out this information for people to gossip about serves no good purpose," he said.

If "pink slip" requirements are repealed, the old law, under which the Treasury Secretary has discretionary authority to make rules and regulations for publication of tax data, would prevail.

Swinging into the chamber, Long entered the Senate debate by interrupting Copeland and branding the "pink slip" law "a sop to conservatives."

He was not swift to answer Tydings' personal inquiry, replying at first that he "made as much as I spent in the Government Printing Office and for taxes."

Tydings observed that he must have "a pretty good law practice."

Long replied that the fees were paid by persons "who didn't have the sense that I have, and hired me as their lawyer."

He said he was "astonished" that the President sent no special message to Congress on the "pink slip" law before he left on his cruise.

Catholics Debate NRA At Economic Parley

Cincinnati, March 26 (AP).—Debate entered the Catholic conference on economic problems today as A. B. Kelley, Greensburg, Pa., coal company official, asserted the bituminous coal industry can not survive without price fixing. But when he suggested both minimum and maximum prices for coal "to maintain a substantial wage level" he encountered sharp opposition.

"I believe in the NRA, but there is some question as to the wisdom of price fixing," interposed Mgr. John A. Ryan, of Washington. Ernest F. De Brul, Cincinnati consulting engineer, called price fixing "one of the worst curses of the codes."

Hopkins' Relief Aid Ousts 16 in Ohio

Stillman's Dismissal List Grows to 87.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, March 26.—C. C. Stillman, Federal Relief Administrator for Ohio, opened war on relief roll "chiselers" today and dismissed 16 more persons from the relief division pay roll.

Stillman has fired 87 workers since he took command of the State relief administration ten days ago after the dispute between Gov. Martin L. Davey and Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. Prosecution of all persons who have obtained relief funds by misrepresentation was ordered by Stillman.

An investigating committee of the Ohio Legislature prepared to start its inquiry Wednesday into Hopkins' charges that firms doing business with the relief division were asked to contribute to the State Democratic campaign fund. It will investigate Davey's charges that the administration of relief in Ohio has often been "inefficient, wasteful and inhuman."

Roosevelt Urges NRA Exert Full Power to Enforce Codes

that "for reasons of equity" and administration should be requested to suspend the Lumber Code.

The decision of the Justice Department to withdraw the Belcher case was termed by the committee a "bitter disappointment."

In announcing the decision to dismiss the Belcher case, the Department of Justice said:

"The case arises under an indictment charging violation of provisions of the lumber and timber products code. This code was among the first approved at a time when the lumber industry was in great distress and the NRA was in the early stage of its development. Consequently, while sound in general substance and in purpose, this code contains administrative provisions peculiar to itself with respect to the extension of discretionary powers to nongovernmental agencies—a fact which was emphasized many times in the recent Senate committee hearings and which sets this code in a class by itself.

To Eliminate Feature.

"Revision of this situation is, the department is informed, now under consideration by the National Industrial Recovery Board. In any event, this feature is expected to be eliminated under the new legislation as recommended by the Administration.

"A further unsatisfactory feature of this case is that, due to the nature of the action, no findings could be made by the lower court. The department feels that the fundamental questions involved in the national industrial recovery act should be presented to the Supreme Court in a case in which full evidence of the facts has been given. Other cases in which these objections do not exist are being pressed in several of the circuits in order that decisions of the appellate courts may be secured as soon as possible.

"Meanwhile and pending desirable amendments to the lumber and timber products code, there will be no relaxation of the enforcement of other codes. United States attorneys are being so instructed."

Among the cases now pending on appeal to appellate courts are the Weirton case, in which Section 7(a) of the recovery act was declared unconstitutional, and the Kentucky coal case, in which the court held that mining could not be controlled by the Government because it was not an interstate function. Neither of these cases can possibly reach the Supreme Court before next winter, when the present act will have expired.

Enforcement Hampered.

A deluge of adverse court decisions has hampered enforcement of NRA and brought about the relaxation in compliance referred to by President Roosevelt. The Government pushed the Belcher case in the Supreme Court ostensibly to obtain a favorable decision that would force compliance. There was no indication of the cause for complete reversal of the plan to risk a decision.

Richberg has asked that Congress give NRA authority only over business affecting interstate commerce. This would effectively forestall an adverse decision on this point, in view of the fact that a decision affecting the present law would be pointless after the law had been replaced by a new act.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee worked at its task of trying to find out what should be in the new law. It finished hearing Francis M. Curlee, representing a group of clothing manufacturers opposed to NRA.

Curlee complained that NRA was a bureaucracy with its "bureaucratic finger in every pie."

"There can't be a thing done in industry without coming to Washington to get permission," he said.

Simses Boost Lead in Bridge To 4,730 Points

Culbertson Takes Set of 1,400; Annoyed, Dubs Mrs. Sims' 'Tootsie.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 26.—Ely Culbertson carried off the name-calling laurels with "Tootsie," but P. Hal Sims was ahead on points tonight as the Culbertsons and the Simses battled through the ninth rubber of their epic bridge match.

As the two couples sat down for the second evening's session of their 150-rubber contract match, which is supposed to decide the relative merits of their respective abilities and systems, the Simses led by 4,730 points.

Culbertson, however, had the satisfaction of having produced the appellation "Tootsie" as a climax to a saccharine round of such honeyed terms as "my darling, "my love," "my dear" and "my angel."

Culbertson Annoyed.

Apparently annoyed by the exchange of affectionate pleasantries passing back and forth between the big, burly Sims and his trim little wife, Culbertson had suggested the term to vary the routine.

After seeing his opponents pile up 2,530 points during the afternoon, to add to their 2,200 plus of last night, Culbertson emerged for the dinner recess to find he had another fight on his hands.

Oswald Jacoby issued a statement declaring he had been "illegally" voted out of membership in the exclusive Crockford Club, where the match is being played, and which was founded and is owned by Culbertson.

Jacoby ascribed the action against him to "business rivalry."

Culbertsons Set.

On the first rubber, which ran for more than an hour and a half, Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson were set five times and piled up a loss which gave the Simses a cumulative lead of 4,020 points.

On the second they lost 200 more points, but o nthe third the Culbertsons picked up 820 points on one hand alone by making a difficult six diamond bid.

The fourth rubber ended with the Simses leading by 3,830, and on the next they increased the lead to 4,730. Then they quit for dinner.

Sms Profits on Double.

Once Culbertsons went down 4 spades, doubled for a loss of 1,400 points. They were bidding to a part score of 60 to make rubber, while Sims, rather than play a doubtful three diamond bid, chose to double. The Sims team had a part score of 40. Both sides were vulnerable.

Senate Votes Pay For Alcohol Unit

that the test was open only to graduate lawyers or investigators of five years' experience in the Government service.

Senator Carter Glass, chairman of the committee, explained that the committee has reached the conclusion that the investigators involved were "innocent victims of the rider."

He explained that the effect of the rider had been more far-reaching than intended, affecting almost twice as many Treasury employes as the 750 who had been aimed at in the legislation.

About 30 per cent of these 750 had passed the examination required by the rider, he said, and between 450 and 500 of them will be compelled to take another test to hold their jobs after May 15.

The Senate amendment, involving salary restorations amounting to $1,385,864.04, represents a compromise between the original rider and the Administration's proposed amendment.

Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau, who had decried the McKellar proviso as "ruining" the efforts of his department to stamp out bootlegging, had asked that all employes be reinstated with salaries restored without any qualifications. His amendment was approved by President Roosevelt and the Budget Bureau.

Three Fail to Win Cotton Posts Back

Three former members of the Cotton Garment Code Authority were refused reinstatement yesterday when Justice Oscar R. Luhring, in the District Supreme Court, held that since they were serving without pay, they did not have a sufficient legal interest to maintain a suit in which they sought a court order directing their reappointment.

The three, W. E. Stevens, representative of the Work Shirt Manufacturers National Association; E. M. Joplin, of New York City, his alternate, and Lee H. Jones, of Nashville, Tenn., representative of the Southern Garment Manufacturers Association, were ousted several months ago because their corporate positions conflicted with their posts on the Cotton Authority.

Assistant United States Attorneys David A. Pine and John J. Wilson, appearing on behalf of the National Industrial Recovery Board, the defendant, asked dismissal of the suit on the ground that it was a proper exercise of authority by the Recovery Administration.

Eastman Gets Call to Testify On Rails Probe

Senate Group on Wheeler Plan Hears Coordinator at Session Today.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday called Joseph B. Eastman, transportation coordinator, to testify today on the Wheeler proposal for an investigation of railroad financing, after hearing Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Corporation, say such an inquiry "might serve a good purpose."

Eastman's examination will conclude the hearings, at which testimony has been offered in favor of legislation to prevent bankers controlling the railroad systems and using their funds for stock speculation.

Denial Power Only.

Jones, a big Texan with a voice barely audible in the committee room, said the RFC's authority over the railroads was summed up in the power to deny them loans if their condition was unsound or the security inadequate.

He appeared after Charles D. Mahaffie, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, said under questioning that the commission's control over needless expenditures of roads was limited to giving publicity to them.

He favored a law to prohibit one road's investing in another without commission approval.

Asserting he believed "that our railroads are dominated by bankers," Jones said this control had "not always been to the detriment of the roads and not always in the interest of the roads."

He said the RFC had loaned $450,000,000 thus far to railroads, of which $70,000,000 had been repaid. He added 14 loans totaling about $50,000,000 were in default, but the corporation thought it would "not lose much money."

Couzens Makes Query.

"You are a natural optimist, aren't you?" asked Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan.

"Yes, I am," Jones replied.

Couzens then recalled a statement attributed to the Texan that the corporation would not lose anything on the $90,000,000 "Dawes bank loan."

"If I said that I was pretty optimistic," Jones replied, smiling.

Asked about the Van Sweringen proposal for a reorganization of the Missouri Pacific, Jones said there had been no complete plan presented.

"If and when we do cooperate in a plan for that road, we'd have a clean first mortgage for the new and old money," he said.

CCC Is Restoring Yorktown of 1781

By the Associated Press.

Yorktown, Va., March 26 (AP).—By the end of the year visitors to Yorktown will be able to get a "clear picture" of the area as it was in colonial times by completion of a number of monument projects, B. Floyd Flickinger, superintendent of the Colonial National Monument, said today.

CCC workers are reconstructing a section of the French fortifications in the 1781 siege and a British fort. The replicas will be complete in every detail, including cannon. Roads and bridle paths are being reopened and marked.

Three museum projects are under construction, one at Jamestown, reproducing the first permanent English settlement in America, and two here. One of these, in the kitchen of the Swan Tavern, will portray the social life of the colonists, and the one in the State will depict the military history of the area.

Mrs. Simpson's Fitness to Rear Children Is Queried in Court Counsel for Museum Aid Offers Data in Action Over Girl's Custody.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., March 26.—Fitness of Mrs. Lydia Simpson to rear her children was questioned today in a district court hearing to determine whether she or her husband, Dr. G. G. Simpson, of New York, should have custody of Patricia Gaylord, their 8-year-old daughter. Dr. Simpson is assistant curator of the Museum of Natural History.

Depositions containing testimony as to the state of the health of the four children of the coupe, both before and after they were under Mrs. Simpson's care, were introduced by Roland Boynton, attorney for Dr. Simpson and Mrs. Simpson's mother, Mrs. Mary Pedroja, who is opposed to her daughter in the case.

The depositions were made by Dr. Simpson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Simpson, of Washington, who now are caring for three of the children, and Dr. Joseph Jefferies, of Washington, who has cared for them through several illnesses.

All testimony was to the effect the children were sickly, undisciplined and ill-mannered when they first went to live with their grandparents, but that both their health and obedience had improved since.

Mrs. Pedroja, called to the stand late today, also testified Patricia was in poor health and nervous when she first came to the Pedroja home two years ago, and that she is in much better condition now.

Mrs. Simpson took Patricia from school in Buffalo, Kans., last month while the child was living with Mrs. Pedroja. Both Mrs. Pedroja and Dr. Simpson sought to have the child taken from the mother by court order, the application now under hearing.

Dr. Jefferies said Patricia was suffering from a heart ailment that had been present since birth.

Boynton also read an affidavit by simpson concerning divorce proceedings in which he accused his wife of "framing" evidence of adultery. Dr. Simpson stated he had been enticed to a New York hotel by his wife nad while talking to hre in a private room, a scantily-clad woman came out of a closet. The next day he said, he was served with a divorce summons.

The throng, which included avowed Epics, Communists, Utopians and "just plain unemployed," threatened to "sit it out" until the board of supervisors agreed to hear their demands for representation on the citizens relief committee.

Move to Show Sunday Movies In Laurel Hit

Delegation of 8 Protests Before Meeting of Town Council.

Vigorous protests against the proposed introduction of Sunday moving picture shows in Laurel, Md., have been registered by ministers and church workers of that town, it was announced yesterday.

A delegation of eight persons appeared before a special meeting of the town council Monday night to raise their voices against the proposition which, they said, would be "a great catastrophe to the town."

The delegation consisted of the Rev. John Labrides, pastor of the Baptist Church; the Rev. Royal Rice of the Southern Methodist Church; the Rev. Adolph Baker, of the Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. J. Showacre, of the Centenary Methodist Church. Layworkers in the delegation were Mrs. J. H. Hopkins, Mrs. W. E. Beall, Mrs. Albert Roussel and Mrs. B. Beaver.

They were told that the legislative bill to give the town authority to hold the shows could not be introduced at Annapolis. It was held up by the law requiring public referenda on changes of local ordinances.

Since there will be no regular election in the town until April, 1936, the question could be voted on only if those backing the proposed change pay the expenses of a special referendum, the delegation was told.

For several years the so-called "progressive" element in Laurel has been working to have Sunday movies. They contend there are a great many people in the town and nearby country who desire Sunday recreation and who are now obliged to drive 10 or 15 miles to get it.

They also contend there is no reason why the Laurel Theater should not have the same privilege of being open on Sunday as do the theaters of the National Capital.

Rasputin Kidnap Threat Seen as Publicity 'Gag'

Peru, Ind., March 26 (AP).—In spring the circus press agent's thoughts lightly turn to almost anything that will hit page one.

From the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus winter quarters today came a call to police to protect Marie Rasputin, daughter of the assassinated lay monk of Russia, from kidnapers.

Edward Hobbs, chief of police, said that while it sounded rather mysterious, officers would watch her hotel for suspicious strangers.

Miss Cherrill Wins Divorce From Actor

Girl Starred by Chaplin Charges Cary Grant Was Quarrelsome.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, March 26.—The legal finis to the domestic life story of the man on the flying trapeze was written in superior court today.

It ended with Virginia Cherrill, blonde screen actress, winning an interlocutory decree of divorce from Cary Grant (Archibald Leach), who started as an acrobat and then became Mae West's leading man.

Miss Cherrill's description of her domestic life with Grant, as given Judge Charles Haas, was much less explosive than the two complaints she originally preferred against him when she told of choking, kicking and beating episodes.

Today, she merely said he was quarrelsome and sullen.

"He would argue with me on every point," she said.

Judge Haas asked for some particular points and the actress replied:

"He said I was lazy and ought to go to work. He refused to pay my bills because he said I could earn my money, but when I tried to get work he discouraged me and refused to let me work."

All this, Miss Cherrill testified, culminated in the actor's confession he was tired of her and did not want to live with her any more.

"Was he addicted to liquor" Judge Haas queried.

"Yes," Miss Cherrill replied. "He drank steadily and in large quantities."

She was on the stand five minutes and her mother, Mrs. Blanche W. Cherrill, two minutes.

Her attorney said a property settlement had been effected out of court. She did not ask for alimony.

Miss Cherrill's debut in motion pictures came as a result of a dinner-party introduction to Charles Chaplin, film comedian, several years ago. She said she will attempt to restore her health, which she asserted was worn down by her unhappy marriage to Grant, and will "start where I left off when I married."

Board to Select College President

West Virginia Governors to Meet Saturday.

By the Associated Press.

Morgantown, W. Va., March 25. The board of governors of West Virginia University will meet Saturday to consider the election of a permanent university president.

Dr. Robert A. Armstrong is acting president of the university. He was appointed to serve until July 1, after the retirement January 1 of Dr. John Roscoe Turner.

The board also will consider the status of the university's school of medicine, and may decide upon the course to be pursued about the report of an accrediting committee from the American Medical Association which recommends that its class A rating be dropped.

The report, which will be submitted to the council of the medical association and hospitals of the association in October, states the medical school does not have the equipment or a large enough faculty to care properly for the large number of students in the class. There were 132 medical students last year.

Detroit Bankers' Trial Opens in Federal Court

Detroit, March 26 (AP).—Trial of three of the 34 bankers indicted as a result of Michigan's banking troubles of 1933 began in rapid-fire order in Federal court today, with the first witness on the stand less than six hours after selection of a jury was started.

Nine women and five men were sworn in as jurors or alternates to hear the evidence by which the Government will seek to show that Herbert L. Chittenden, John Ballantyne, and John H. Hart—all former officers of the First National Bank-Detroit—made false reports of the bank's condition to the Comptroller of Currency.

Sanity Test Urged For Alleged Killer

By the Associated Press.

Independence, Va., March 26.—Dr. George A. Wright, superintendent of Southwestern Hospital, today told a Grayson County Circuit Court he believed Howard Delp, charged with killing Police Chief P. C. Martin at Galax, should be studied under "proper conditions" for 30 days to determine whether he is sane.

The hospital head was one of 12 witnesses heard by a jury who will decide whether the alleged slayer should be committed to an institution for the mentally diseased or should be tried for murder. Dr. Wright examined Delp in the Wytheville Jail, but said he had not had sufficient time to form an opinion.

Martin was stabbed as he opened a cell door to release Delp's cellmate. Both youths had been held for drunkenness.

Attorneys Sift Birth of Firm In Mellon Case

Details of $44,000,000 Construction Concern Are Discussed.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 26 (AP).—The scene in the $3,089,000 Mellon income tax case shifted late today to details of the $44,000,000 Union Construction Co. formed in 1930 from assets of the McClintic-Marshall Corporation in which Andrew W. Mellon had a 30 per cent interest.

It was a final phase in clearing up testimony regarding McClintic-Marshall, in connection with which the Government claims more than $1,000,000 in back taxes is due from Mellon.

The testimony has shown Union Construction took from McClintic-Marshall all properties not engaged in steel fabricating 40 days before the Bethlehem Steel Corporation acquired the remaining $21,000,000 worth of McClintic-Marshall assets.

Amount of Bills.

Ralph S. Pittinger, a former official of McClintic-Marchall, testified today there was approximately $97,300 in bills owed by McClintic-Marshall stockholders in connection with the Bethlehem deal, which Union Construction paid.

These included a $75,000 legal fee paid the firm of Smith, Buchanan, Scott & Gordon, of Pittsburgh, for services in connection with the Bethlehem merger, and $10,000 for State and Federal transfer stamps.

In addition, Pittinger said Union Construction paid a settlement of $465,250 to the etsate of George W. Corbett, a former official of McClintic-Marshall for 500 shares of preferred stock which the estate had refused to "turn in" in 1929 on call.

Government's Claim.

The Government, in its pleadings, claimed the payment of these accounts by Union actually were the same as cash dividends paid to stockholders and therefore was taxable as income.

Frank J. Hogan, chief Mellon counsel, contended that even with only $3,000,000 in tangible assets in 1913, the "basing date" for income tax purposes, McClintic-Marshall as a going concern had a market value of approximately $15,000,000. The Government says the company was worth only about $5,000,000 at that time.

Giant Flying Boat Off to West Today

Pan-American Clipper Delayed by Smoke Blanket.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., March 26.—Delayed today by a blanket of Everglades smoke and the faulty pitch of a propeller, the Pan-American Clipper, great flying boat, will take off again tomorrow for San Diego, Calif., to tackle the job of "breaking in" a commercial air route over the Pacific Ocean to China.

Capt. Edwin Musick ordered a second start at daybreak. This morning he and his crew were delayed nearly three hours by thick smoke carried down from muck fires in the Everglades, which cut visibility on Biscayne Bay to 100 yards.

They finally took-off in a sunlit haze at 8:47, but Capt. Musick brought the huge ship back to port six minutes later and ordered adjustment of the pitch of the propeller on No. 3, of his four engines.

The fund, expected to total about $1,000, will pay traveling and living expenses of Jimmy and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Neilson.

Mexico Seeks to Solve Paris Kidnap Story

Aguas Calientes, Mexico, March 26 (AP).—Military and civil authorities, determined to clear up several points in the stories of the kidnaping of Mark Fowler and Louis Vremsak, of California, questioned the men and several others today. Federal troops searched the mountains of Zacatecas for the kidnapers.

Fowler arrived last night from Jalapa, Zacatecas, site of a mining camp from which he said he and Diaz De Leon, an assistant, were kidnaped March 15 by a band which also had taken Vremsak.

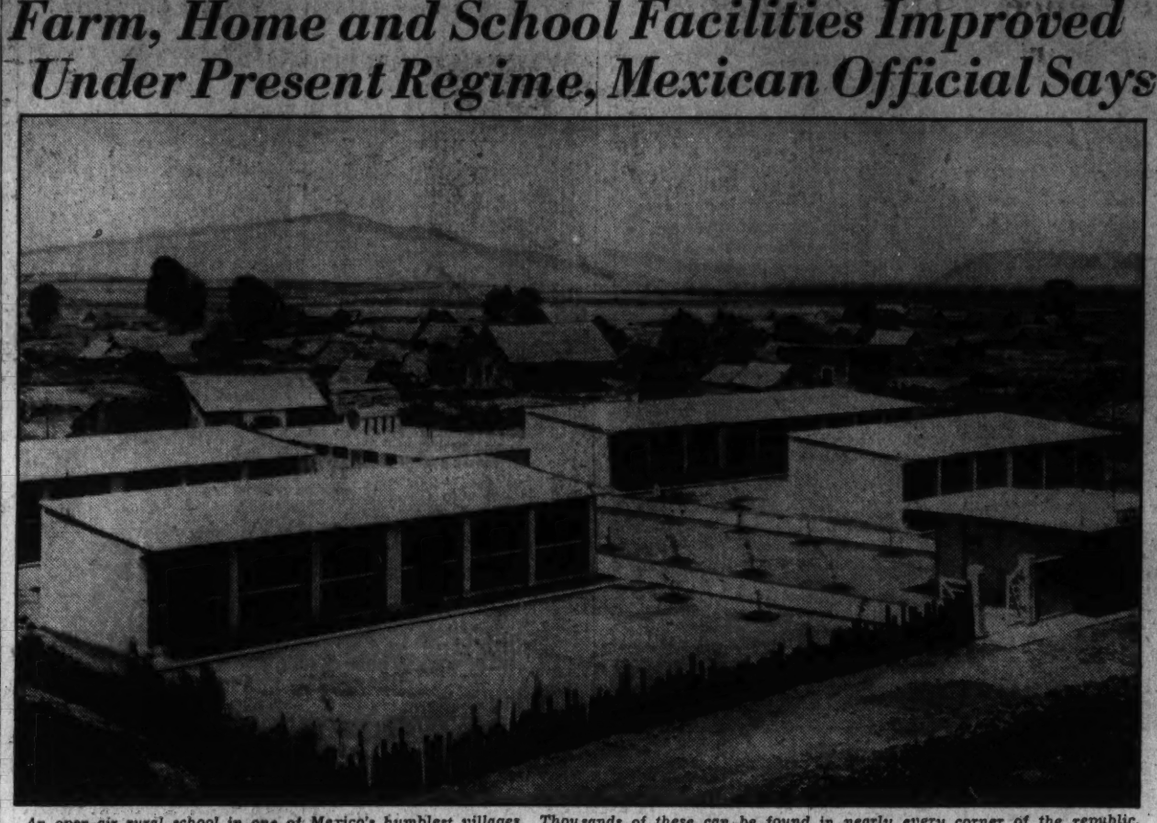
Farm, Home and School Facilities Improved Under Present Regime, Mexican Official Says



An open-air rural school in one of Mexico's humblest villages. Thousands of these can be found in nearly every corner of the republic, the government element claims.

This is the sixth of a series of seven articles in reply to a series written for The Post by Frederick Vincent Williams. The Williams articles gave a Catholic viewpoint of conditions in Mexico. The article below and others in the present series reflect the official Mexican viewpoint. Where expressions appear in blacker type, the emphasis was indicated by the author. Dr. Quintanilla has been in the employ of the Mexican government for 15 years.

Holds 1917 Constitution Crystallizes Ideals of Revolution.

By Dr. Luis Quintanilla of the Mexican Foreign Service.

Mexico and revolution! These two words have become associated in the minds of most readers.

The nation-wide movement heralded by Madero in 1910 was in fact of such vital importance to the building of modern Mexico that its achievements cannot be overestimated.

Independence under Hidalgo had given Mexico territorial freedom. Reform under Juarez gave the state political freedom. The third movement, led by Madero in 1910, was to open for the Mexican masses the way to economic emancipation.

I have dealt in my previous articles with the bitter fight of the Catholic heirarchy against independence and reform. Catholic opposition to the social ideals of the Mexican revolution is a matter of current history as shown by the present campaign led by the heirarchy.

The ideals of the Mexican revolution crystallized in the constitution of 1917, which is now in force. This constitution followed mainly the lines drawn up by the Liberals of 1857. Moreover, the reform laws affecting the church were incorporated in the constitution of 1917.

Nationalization of Mexican subsoil, land distribution to the peasants and liberal education for the workers are also new features of the 1917 chart.

Catholic Campaign Of 1926 Recalled.

However, the church and educational provisions are better known to the American public of today because of the propaganda that the hierarchy has led against them. Everyone remembers the Catholic campaign of 1926 against President Calles' administration. Calles began the hard task of strictly enforcing the provisions of the constitution. Regulations were enacted for article 130, which call upon the members of the clergy to enter their names in an official register and to draw up inventories of church property. This seemed sufficient to the Mexican clergy to incite Catholics to disobedience and rebellion.

You all know the audacity of that world-wide campaign which tried in vain for three years to bring about foreign pressure in order to modify the provisions affecting the Catholic Church.

All the usual methods were then put into practice; distortion of facts, atrocity-stories and even trick photographs were used. Abuse was poured freely on individuals, in place of analyzing their doctrine. The tactics are being used today.

Mr. Williams, in one of his articles, writes that Gen. Calles' "one time bartender and minister of education," "paid 20,000 dollars for his bathtub . . ."

I do not know how much "Gen. Calles' bathtub" is worth—and of course neither does Mr. Williams. But I do know, as every one in Mexico does—and as the many biographers of the great Mexican leaders have recorded it—that Gen. Calles, before entering politics and joining the ranks of the revolution to which he has consecrated his life, started as a teacher in his home town, and has never been minister of education.

So much has been written on the distressful conditions of workers and peons under the Diaz regime that it seems unnecessary to add any comment in this article. I wish only to remind the reader that during the 30 years' clerical dictatorship of Diaz, the working masses of Mexico were kept in penury and ignorance.

Estimate Made Of Church Wealth.

On the other hand, during the period of his administration, which set aside the liberal provisions of the reform, the church accumulated a wealth which has been reckoned by Dr. Portes Gil, in his essay mentioned before, at 800,000,000 pesos.

The masses were suffering, but the church was satisfied. Therefore it supported Diaz and opposed any political change.

"As all authority is derived from God, the Christian workman should sanctify and make sublime his obedience by serving God in the persons of his masters. In this way, obedience is neither humiliating nor difficult. We do not serve the man, we serve God." . . . I quote this from a pastoral letter addressed by Archbishop Orozco, that very same "Cristero" leader whom Mr. Williams went to interview in the mountains of Mexico. And this prelate further says in his same pastoral: "Poor, love your homeless state and your work. Turn your gaze toward Heaven. There is the true wealth. Only one thing I ask: Of the rich, love; of the poor, resignation." That is what the hierarchy offered to the Mexican workers. Revolution, instead, gave them schools and homes . . . while he was still alive.

In the first article of this amazing series, Mr. Williams says that "in destroying the church, the revolution has also destroyed the schools." How can anyone write such things when a whole nation knows that this statement is untrue.

I take pleasure, however, in finding such concrete assertions because they afford me an opportunity to expose the true value of all this material used today by unscrupulous propagandists pretending to inform American readers of conditions in Mexico.

According to the official statistics of 1932, just published, there were in that year 13,719 rural schools, 5,733 city schools and 405 kindergartens, making a total of 19,857 schools open for primary education. The record shows that there were, in 1932, 2,892 private schools. Only 14.57 per cent of the primary schools were private, while 38.84 per cent were federal and 46.79 per cent were supported by the several states. These 19,857 primary schools, belonging, as we have seen, almost entirely to the government, were attended by 1,907,650 children under 39,709 teachers.

More Figures Cited On Education.

The same statistics show that in 1932 there also were 523 institutions of secondary education, attended by 80,194 students under 6,169 professors. We have thus a total of 20,380 schools, 45,878 teachers and 1,987,844 pupils. No statistics are available, of course, for 1935; but considering the policy of the Mexican Government, which has greatly increased its budget for education, a conservative estimate would bring the number of schools to more than 21,000 and the number of pupils above the 2,000,000 mark.

If one considers that before the revolution of 1910 Mexico was among the most illiterate countries of the world, one understands the admiration of foreign educators for the work carried on by the governments born of the revolution.

So many articles and books have been published concerning the achievements of the Mexican revolution in the line of education that I really do not know which recent American writers I should quote in this article.

"No outcome of the Mexican revolution is more significant than the rural education movement that has grown from it. The educational undertaking is profoundly creative . . . It attempts to reach deep into the spirit of the people and open the modern world to them . . . It is the most modern, yet the most delicate and sensitive large-scale movement of cultural stimulus and social awakening that can be recorded in America and perhaps in the world."

This emphatic statement by Frank Tannenbaum in his book "Peace by Revolution," an interpretation of Mexico, published by the Columbia University Press in 1933, is completed by lengthy pages dealing in detail with the subject. "The educational movement is the broadest effort of the revolution. Its aim is to reach even the most isolated communities. I have seen schools among the fire-worshipping Huicholes in the Sierra de Nayarit, among the Maya Indians in the tropical forests of southern Yucatan and among the Trique Indians in Oaxaca. Everywhere, in mountain and dale, in the tropics and in the wind-blown Sierras, we may find a little school. It may be poor, it may be inadequate, it may be an incomplete sampling of the deal, but it is there."

And Mr. Williams says: "In destroying the church, the revolution has also destroyed the schools." .

Erna Fergusson, in her book, "Fiesta in Mexico," published by Knopf in 1934, says; "Modern Mexico is trying to break this pattern and to substitute something else for it . . . Men high in the councils of the government . . . High-minded and idealistic men filled with zeal to make Mexico a homogeneous country for the first time, know this for one of their greatest problems, and they have an answer for it. This policy, as honestly as I can state it, is to free the people from the domination of the church, not by suppression of freedom to worship, but by education."

Reply Made to Writer On Agrarian Policy.

In his vain attempt to hide from the American people the fact that the present administration of Mexico is backed by the great majority of the Mexican masses, Mr. Williams erroneously asserts that the "agrarians have not been given the land." The Mexican agrarian policy has been so often commented by so many eminent foreign scholars that I am really amazed by the audacity of Catholic propagandists when they write such concrete and utterly false statements.

Up to 1933 not less than 25,000,000 acres had been granted to 956,726 peasant families, who, before the revolution, so bitterly attacked by the church, had neither schools nor homes.

Since Mr. Williams' purpose in writing his atrocity serial was mainly to stir up the feelings of the American people against the Church policy of the Mexican government, I have set aside all consideration of the new constitutional amendment establishing that "education imparted by the State will be socialistic, and furthermore will exclude all religious doctrines and combat fanaticism and prejudices . . . so as to imbue in the young a rational and exact concept of the universe and society."

Is "religion" synonymous of fanaticism and prejudice? Catholics, answer: "Yes," whenever they declare that the above provisions of the Mexican constitution imply an attack on religion itself.

Besides, can anyone be a Socialist without being called a murderer by the Church, just because one believes in working for the welfare of the people rather than for the benefit of the hierarchy? Is the stand taken by the Catholic propagandists so weak that it has to resort to slander and libel in place of logical criticisms of a government's doctrine?

Carleton Beals, who, like Gruening and Tannenbaum, is far from being a propagandist of the Mexican administration, writes in the issue of the New Republic, for March 13, 1935:

"I hold no brief for the present regime in Mexico. But in all fairness, it should be clearly stated that it is a product of many years of revolution which have freed nearly 10,000,000 serfs . . . Much land has been restored to the villages. For the first time in Mexico's history, fairly well generalized programs of education and public health—the budgets for which have been greatly increased by the present Cardenas administration—have been instituted. For 15 years the Mexican government has lived within its budget, and from current revenues has promoted noteworthy public works, roads, railroads, irrigation, etc. Mexico has a sound, managed currency and the government has fostered some rural credit and has broken the monopoly of the foreign banks. Today Mexico is one of the few relatively prosperous countries in the world that have practically no unemployment."

I will deal in my next and last article with what I consider the real motives that have prompted Mr. Williams, president of the Serra Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, to hide the truth from the American public.

Brothers and Sisters to Share In Plan for Quintuplets' Care

Wants of Entire Family to Be Met, Ontario Minister Reveals.

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, March 26.—David A. Croll, Ontario minister of public welfare, today said the government has under consideration extensive plans looking toward the care of the entire family of Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne as well as their quintuplet daughters.

The minister, who piloted the guardianship bill respecting the quintuplets through the Legislature, said much improvement on the present Dionne home was planned.

He said all wants of the family such as food and clothing would be provided and Dionne would receive a monthly allowance sufficient to take care of incidental expenses.

The government also has under consideration means to provide educational facilities for the five older children. During the past winter those of school age were unable to attend school because of snow-covered roads. The children now speak only French and it is planned to teach them both English and French.

The government is also considering improvements to the Dafoe Hospital that may include a large glass-covered solarium where tourists and visitors would be able to see the quintuplets.

Wind-Ravaged Colorado Lands Recall Warning

Cattlemen Predicted Plight of Homesteaders; Dust Storms Resume.

By the Associated Press.

Lamar, Colo., March 26.—Fifty years ago resentful cattlemen told the Southeastern Colorado homesteader: "This buffalo grass should never be plowed. The land will just dry up and the wind will blow it away, and you with it."

Farmers thought of that prediction today. The wind had blown part of the land away, but the homesteaders, many of them now substantial citizens, stood with their feet firmly planted on their wind battered property and prepared for rehabilitation.

Modern agricultural experts side with the old timers and agree much of the land never should have been plowed.

A. J. Hammond, county agent of Prowers County, today described a complete "rest cure" for two or three years as the only hope for the dry farm lands of this region whose top soils have been hurled as high as 3 miles into the air by terrific winds for three weeks.

After a lull in the storm last night and early today, the wind started again. It brought the now familiar yellow cast to the usually brilliant blue sky.

Denver was plunged into comparative darkness for a time today when the wind changed suddenly and carried a cloud of dust into the city. North Dakota and part of South Dakota were enveloped in a cloud of dust which swept in from Montana.

The death of a Wyoming trainmaster, J. H. Brunsvier, was attributed to the storm. He was killed near Hanna when he stepped in front of a train he failed to see because of swirling dust.

Dunn Named West European Division Chief

Succeeds Moffat in Area Threatened by War; Visits Ambassador.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday announced the appointment of James Clement Dunn as chief of the Division of Western European Affairs, effective July 1, next, to succeed Jay Pierrepont Moffat. The latter will be assigned to the foreign service, but his exact post has not been determined.

Western European affairs is one of the major divisions of the State Department and has been regarded as particularly important in recent years because of the unsettled condition of Europe and the possibilities which exist for the outbreak of war in that area.

Mr. Dunn is now serving as a special assistant to the Secretary of State. He left for New York yesterday with Mrs. Dunn for a brief visit with Breckinridge Long, American Ambassador at Rome. His trip was said to have no official significance. Nevertheless, it is believed it will afford him a first-hand view of the European situation before he assumes his new duties.

Born 44 years ago, Mr. Dunn has been in the State Department and foreign service since 1919, serving in Spain, Haiti, Belgium, England and France, as well as in the department here. He was first secretary of embassy at Brussels, Paris and London; served as counselor to the Forbes Commission to Haiti and as secretary general to the American delegations at the first disarmament conference, the London economic and monetary conference and the Montevideo Pan-American conference. For several years he was chief of the Division of International Conferences and Protocol.

Mr. Moffat has been in the foreign service since 1917 and has seen service around the globe. He has attended a number of disarmament conferences and meetings at Geneva and is regarded as the department's premier expert on military and naval disarmament. His tour of duty in the department expires in July.

40 Communist Leaders Are Seized in Ireland

Dublin, March 26 (AP).—A police clean-up, inspired by recent violence in the Irish Free State, landed 40 Republican Communist Congress leaders in jail tonight, all of them being held without formal preferment of charges. A number was released.

Last Saturday night's shootings, in which two police were wounded, were believed to have inspired the raids, coupled with the recent threat of the Irish Republican army to intervene in the tram and bus strike, which has paralyzed Dublin's transport facilities.

HOLC Gets Cash, But Must Trace Payers

By the Associated Press.

Holders of home owners' loans who make payments without identifying themselves have added to the difficulties of the HOLC.

"At one time last fall," Chairman John H. Fahey told a Senate Banking sub-committee yesterday, "we had $2,000,000 in cash and checks that wasn't credited."

Preston Delano, general manager of the corporation, explained that this "floating" sum has been reduced to $500,000.

Delano said clerks and "even detectives" have been used to trace the identities of persons making payments. He cited one occasion where a letter containing a $20 cash payment was received with no identification except the postmark on the envelope.

The other four favorites in the race are Reynoldstown, Tapinois, Thomand 2d and Castle Irwell.

Americans who drew tickets on Renyoldstown included Ray Gold, New York; Ann Goldberg, Philadelphia; Mabel Letzelman, Olney, Ill., and "Five Glasses," Philadelphia.

Dern Opposes Civil Rule Over Military Hotel

War Secretary Urges U. S. Measure as Alternative to Curb Liquor Flow.

By the Associated Press.

Flat disapproval by Secretary Dern of the Byrd-Bland resolution to give Virginia jurisdiction over the Chamberlin-Vanderbilt Hotel at Old Point Comfort, Va., was communicated yesterday to the measure's authors.

The War Secretary's recommendation was made in a letter to Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, and proposed in place of the resolution an amendment to the criminal code. Dern said he thought the interests of the United States and of Virginia could be taken care of in that way.

The resolution was drafted by Senator Byrd and Representative Bland, of Newport News, at the request of State officials and was aimed at stopping the hotel, located on the Fort Monroe Military Reservation, from selling liquors. Only the State dispensaries are permitted to sell liquor under Virginia law.

The resolution would have given back to Virginia authority over a portion of the Fort Monroe property, which originally was ceded to the United States by Virginia "for military purposes." In later years, Virginia authorized the Government to lease part of the land for erection and operation of a hotel.

Dern's recommendation was communicated not only to Byrd and Bland, but to Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, chairman of a subcommittee handling the measure. The sub-committee, at its pleasure, may rule against Dern and report the bill, but usually the recommendations of a department carry great weight with congressional committees.

"This resolution," Dern said, "if enacted into law, would operate to create in the very heart of a small and congested military post an island of civil authority subject to all existing laws of the State of Virginia, as well as such laws as may be passed in the future."

Hopkins to Be Head of Board To Control Billions for Relief lower wage groups should have decent houses. Anything that will bring that about will be welcome."

Ickes added that he believed the PWA to be better qualified than any other Government unit to handle the housing program. The new works bill earmarks $450,000,000 for this purpose. The PWA housing division is ready to go ahead with numerous projects and has enough in reserve to use much of the appropriation. It is expected Ickes will continue to administer this division, or that it will be transferred more or less intact to some other organization.

Hopkins is generally looked upon as a "go-getter." Ickes is noted for his caution. President Roosevelt has indicated he wishes the works relief program accomplished with speed. He has said he wants to get away from direct relief as ropidly as possible.

Rural electrification, for which $100,000,000 is earmarked, could be fitted nicely in with the Tugwell program. The $900,000,000 for public projects of States and political subdivisions could well become a part of the PWA program. Under the rural program also could come the appropriation of $500,000,000 for rural relief and rehabilitation and $350,000,000 for reforestation, flood control and soil erosion prevention. The $40,000,000 to be advanced for school improvement would fall naturally under direction of the Interior Department.

Expansion for CCC.

This leaves $800,000,000 for highway, grade crossing and street improvements, $600,000,000 for the Civilian Conservation Corps and $300,000,000 for "white collar" workers. The CCC already is set up under direction of Robert Fechtner, and the problem would be one only of expansion, which probably could be accomplished immediately. The question of what is to be done with "white collar" workers remains something of a mystery. They are gathered mostly in cities, where projects are not particularly plentiful. Peoples' place in the organization would concern erection of public buildings, of which he already has charge.

Both the Relief Administration and the PWA have extensive inventories of possible projects. The PWA has listed 130,000 projects which would cost $20,000,000. Ickes said that the inventory "is here for any future use that might be made of it."

Both Ickes and Tugwell disclaimed knowledge of the President's intentions. Tugwell said that reports he would take a major part in the new plan were based on transfer of soil erosion work, for which $20,000,000 has been allotted, from the PWA to the Agriculture Department. Ickes said the transfer was made Saturday at the suggestion of Secretary Wallace. He said he believed such work should be centered in one place.

Sleep Malady Hits Ex-Congressman

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 26.—Former Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, Sixth Maryland District, who was chairman of the District Committee, is reported seriously ill at Memorial Hospital here. His symptoms indicate sleeping sickness, according to members of the family.

Mr. Zihlman came to Cumberland about three weeks ago from Washington and was ill at a hotel here before he went to the home of his sisters, Mrs. Gerard Everstine and Miss Louise Zihlman, where he remained about a week, when his removal to the hospital was ordered by his physician, Dr. S. L. B. Mathews.

For several days it has been hard to arouse Mr. Zihlman. He has only moments of consciousness. However, his appetite has been good and his requests for special dishes have been acceded to.

NRA Instructs Textile Plants To Curb Output

derway to raise the tariff barrier too high for jumping by the nimble Nipponese.

Action of the NIRB in approving an "adjustment" in cotton textile production was taken after the textile planning committee had presented a dire picture of conditions. Many branches of the industry can not continue to operate present schedules, it was reported, and some plants already have been forced to close down.

"Crisis" at Hand, NRA Says.

Demand for cotton textiles has shrunk to the point a "crisis" is at hand, the NRA stated, explaining:

"The doubling of the price of raw cotton and the adding of the cotton processing tax has thrown cotton out of its usual relationship to other textiles. Exports have been steadily decreasing for several years, while in the last few months an unprecedented increase in imports has made buyers so fearful of a price collapse that they have minimized their purchases."

In adopting what was characterized as "an orderly and equal way" out of the dilemma, the NIRB provided for the creation of a four-man research and planning committee to administer the allocation of production in those branches of the cotton textile industry now suffering most severely from the market glut.

No General Reduction Seen.

"No general reduction of hours in the industry, even of a temporary nature, is contemplated," the textile code authority hastened to explain through its chairman, George A. Sloan. The order, it was said, is the "only alternative" to wholesale shutdowns. There have been threats of a new strike from union leaders in the event the code authority went ahead with its curtailment-of-production program.

In its statement, the code authority declared that "the industry, as a whole, has been operating deeply in the red for months." Influences which it said have "aggravated the situation" have been the processing tax and the loss of markets, here and abroad, to "foreign low-cost competition."

Dern Demands U.S. Strengthen Armed Forces

He Frowns on Proposals to Nationalize Munitions; Speech Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, March 26.—Secretary of War George H. Dern tonight called for a more substantial national defense in the form of a greater Navy and a strengthened, more efficient Army.

He defended armament with the assertion in a speech for delivery at a banquet in his honor tonight that "so long as war remains a possibility nations must prepare for their defense, and to do this they must have armament." He frowned on proposals to nationalize the munitions industry.

Secretary Dern visited the city as the guest of the Philadelphia Post Army Ordnance Association and the Chamber of Commerce, which jointly sponsored an exhibit of armaments on the plaza opposite City Hall.

Statement Assailed.

The Society of Friends, the committee for total disarmament, and a students' anti-war committee from six colleges and high schools registered opposition to the demonstration as "propagandistic."

"Let them fight it out with the Chamber of Commerce; certainly they have no fight with me," the Secretary remarked when informed of "the emphatic disapproval" voiced by the Society of Friends, who wired a protest to the President. The occasion of the exhibit is the Ordnance Association's seventeenth anniversary.

Secretary Dern in his speech said he trusted "I may be pardoned for raising my eyebrows when I am told that the way to keep out of war is to disarm."

He pointed out that before the World War "we were, if possible, still more thoroughly disarmed than we are now and yet we got into the war. The same statement is equally true with respect to every war in which we have ever been engaged."

The War Department head declared "it is for the purpose of preserving peace, not to wage war, that I advocate that our Nation be kept in a reasonable defense posture. This, I would say, necessitates a Navy second to none and a small but highly efficient Army, including an air force comparable to that of any of the other leading nations." He said the Army's equipment is almost obsolete.

"Microscopic" Army.

"Our army is so microscopic that it does not constitute even a minor factor is disarmament discussion. In numerical strength it ranks approximately seventeenth, about on a par with Turkey and Portugal. Its equipment is shamefully in need of modernization. In land defenses we are a disarmed nation if ever there was one."

Secretary Dern said "the evils of unregulated munitions traffic are apparent," but the remedy is "not so clear." He called "obviously fallacious" the theory that wars would be impossible if the munitions industry were nationalized and arms exports stopped.

"The result of such a policy would be to give highly industrialized nations a tremendous advantage over countries which are predominantly agricultural. There are about ten countries in the world which by reason of the development of industrial and natural resources are able to produce munitions in sufficient quantities to sell to other countries.

Insisted on Right to Buy.

"This situation has been clearly recognized by the non-producing countries and they have insisted at international conferences on their right to buy arms abroad. They have gone farther and, at the conference on international trade in arms, insisted that the producing countries 'must' sell. Thus it would seem that the greed of munitions makers is not the only element involved in international trade in arms."

He said he has "yet to see any evidence" that "American munitions manufacturers had even been responsible for gettin us into a war." The experience of the United States, the Secretary asserted, "forces me to the conclusion that in the event of war the major portion of our military supplies would have to be produced by private industry. It would be suicidal to depend on Government-owned plants alone. * * * It is therefore highly desirable that in time of peace industry should produce some war supplies, because any plant that has once produced such articles is thereafter better qualified to produce them more speedily in time of war."

The Secretary remarked that "if we are so unfortunate as to be engaged in a war in the future it should be a pay as you go war, that it should be financed by current taxes rather than by saddling future generations with an overpowering burden of bonded indebtedness.

Spy Ring Rumors Hushed at Paris

Foreign Office Acts to Aid Russian Friendship.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 26.—The soft pedal has been applied, it was reported today, to talk of a Soviet spy ring at the trial of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Switz and 19 fellow suspects, after a hint from the foreign office.

Officials are understood to have cautioned the court against developing anything that might embarrass Foreign Minister Pierre Laval. He goes to Moscow next month to seal Franco-Russian friendship in view of the troubled European situation.

All of those arrested 15 months ago, and many others who are missing, are alleged to have sought French military secrets for the Russian government.

Mrs. Clara Levitan Bercowitz was released from prison on bail after Switz, whose home is in East Orange, N. J., testified she had nothing to do with the ring.

4 Nazi Plotters To Be Executed By Lithuanians

Conspiracy for Return to Reich Suppressed; 83 Imprisoned.

Priess, Ewald Boll, Emil Lapa and Heinrich Wanagat.

Two others, Johann and Ernst Wallat, were sentenced to life imprisonment. Dr. Ernest Neumann, leader of the Socialist People's Union, and one of his followers were sentenced to 12 years' penal servitude. Seven others associated with Neumann were given ten years each.

Baron von Sass, leader of a separate faction against Lithuanian rule, and 12 others were sentenced to eight years each in the penitentiary. Konrad von Dressler, former president of the Memel Diet, and two others got eight years each.

With exception of two, who received short terms, all the others convicted were given five to six years' imprisonment.

"Explanations" April 3.

The court announced that "motivation of the verdict" would be rendered April 3, explaining the sentences. The verdict was read only in the Lithuanian language. The majority of the defendants listened stoically.

Outside, hundreds awaited the verdict, which came as a surprise. The trial had been generally regarded as going favorably for the defendants. Heavy police cordons kept back the crowds as court adjourned.

The 122 defendants were charged with being leaders in a plot for an armed uprising against Lithuania. The trial had great political significance, the Lithuanian authorities hoping to prove that their steps taken in the Memel district in the last year had been necessary to preserve law and order.

One of the charges in the 528-page indictment against them was that the men sought connections with the Nazis in Germany. They admitted this, claiming, however, that their connections with the German Nazis had nothing whatever to do with political questions concerning Memel or Lithuania, but were merely concerned with "general cultural matters."

Deny Any Uprising.

They emphatically denied charges they planned an uprising.

Sharp differences between representatives of the German population in the Memel district and the Lithuanian authorities have frequently occurred during the 15 years of the separate existence of the Memel state. They arose chiefly from disputes over the jurisdiction of the Lithuanian authorities in Memel.

In 1919, the district, the territory farthest to the northeast of the German Empire, was severed from Germany by the Versailles Treaty.

In 1924, a special Memel convention was drawn up and signed by the powers. It accorded the Memel district autonomy under Lithuanian soverignty.

After the Nazis came into power in Germany, the two parties with Nazi leanings were founded in Memel. They opposed each other, but both emphasized loyalty to Lithuanian sovereignty, insisting, however, on the strict observance by the Lithuanian authorities of the autonomous rights granted the district under the 1924 convention.

Until February, 1934, both parties were recognized as legal. But in February, the Lithuanian government at Kovno issued a special decree under which they were dissolved and banned. Most of the leaders were arrested and deprived of seats in the Memel Diet, and of other official positions.

Subsequently, most of the arrested men were charged with high treason and brought to trial last December in the great hall of the Palace of Justice.

Liquor Arrests Gain Claimed.

Norton, Va., March 26 (AP).—A conference of ministers held to study the operation of ABC liquor stores in Wise County was told that arrests for drunkenness and drunken driving more than doubled in Norton and Appalachia in 1934 compared with 1933, but the figures were withheld today pending an accurate check with the records in all towns in the county.

U. S. Considers Loans Embargo In Event of War

Nye Committee to Decide on Measures for Our Neutrality.

program under which an industrial income would be limited to $10,000 a year while this country was at war. Drastic taxes also would limit the net earnings of corporations.

Mr. Baruch heretofore has advocated the freezing of prices or the fixing of a price ceiling during wartime as a device to take the profits out of war.

The Nye committee has indicated a determination to do what it can to keep this country out of war, as well to take all profit out of the conflict should it come. Its proposals for eliminating war profits, however, will be presented to the Senate separately from proposals designed to make more rigid the observance of neutrality and to modify in some degree neutral rights.

Visited White House.

The committee's attention was turned to the formulation of a neutrality policy last week by President Roosevelt when the group called to confer with him. The President suggested that the committee try its hand at drafting such legislation apparently without consulting the State Department.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday said he had not been consulted regarding the new development and did not think anyone in the department was working with the Nye committee members. It is reported that State Department attaches have not been in agreement regarding a neutrality policy and it may be that Mr. Roosevelt became impatient over the delay in the department's formulation of a plan.

In this respect it is proposed to authorize the President to declare that any American shipping venturing into designated war zones do so at its own risk and that if American cargoes are seized as suspected contraband by one of the belligerents, the support of this government can not be expected. Such a policy would mean an abandonment of the American insistence of freedom of the seas.

The President also would be empowered under another proposal to refuse passports to American citizens to travel in the war zones or on ships of the belligerents, except in cases of extreme urgency and then only at the traveler's risk.

Credit Problem Difficult.

The question of forbidding loans or credits to the belligerents is more difficult to write into legislation. At the present time all the allied governments of the World War, except Finland, would be unable to borrow money here under the Johnson act. This act prohibits loans to governments in default on their war debts.

The prohibitions of this act, however, applies only to governments or their agencies. It would not stop American bankers, for instance, from lending money to French or British chemical or munitions manufacturers. Nor would it ban loans to Germany or Austria or an Asiatic or Latin-American country at war.

The latest advocate that the United States take steps at once to determine a neutrality policy is Dr. Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association. He believes that events of the last ten days "have further undermined the collective system" in Europe and have "gone far to restore the pre-war system of alliances" there.

Contending that "the outbreak of a new world war may be closer than anyone dares to admit," Dr. Buell, one of the Nation's outstanding authorities on foreign affairs, said he believed that Congress at once should adopt "legislation making mandatory an embargo on the export of munitions and prohibiting American loans to all belligerents without discrimination as soon as war occurs."

He also would have Congress declare that "the American Navy shall not be used to defend those of our citizens who attempt to make profits out of trade with belligerents." The temptation of profits and "a spurious means of recovery" once war breaks out, he asserted, makes it necessary that his proposals be enacted in advance of the conflict.

"Prepare for Neutrality."

Charles Warren, former assistant attorney general and an advocate for many years of the proposals now being taken up by the Nye committee, reiterates his views in the current issue of the Yale Review under an article captioned "Prepare For Neutrality."

Mr. Warren maintains that the "very condition of neutrality engenders, frictions which nowdays are likely eventually to implicate a powerful neutral in any war in which great States may be engaged—particularly if one of the belligerents is a great naval power.

He maintained that "avoidance of war through the maintenance of neutrality will mean for us not only extensions of duties but also modifications, concessions, and even sacrifices of neutral rights and more concretely—a thing which would be even more irksome to some—the possible sacrifice of neutral commercial profits."

France Ratifies Rome Accords; Fears Hitler Stole English Aid

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Paris, March 26.—Paris tonight feared that Germany might succeed in splitting Great Britain and France and destroying the present solidarity among the former allied powers against the Reich's rearmament.

The French interpreted the brief communiques issued in Berlin after the Anglo-German parleys to mean the conversations solved no outstanding issues.

Success of Adolf Hitler's plan to break the unity between England and France was seen in a dual move by Der Fuehrer in the Berlin talks—allowing Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, certain concessions for home consumption, particularly valuable now in view of the coming British elections, and at the same time subtly playing on the English fear and distrust of Russia.

In this worried atmosphere, the Senate unanimously voted ratification of the Rome accords as France turned toward Italy for fuller support of her bitter stand against Germany's scrapping of the Versailles treaty. All 285 votes were cast for the accords, reached last January, designed to cement Italo-French friendship and cooperation in Central Europe.

Foreign Minister Pierre Laval simultaneously informed the cabinet he intended to follow the British mission to Moscow, visiting the Russian capital "the latter half of April." Laval has been pushing a new amity with the Russians, and this move was regarded as vital in view of the Anglo-German developments.

In the Senate, Laval personally interrupted the debate on the Rome accords to ask swift ratification. He praised Premier Benito Mussolini, saying:

"I feel M. Mussolini's clear vision of realities evidenced in the present crisis proves his desire to collaborate with France in the interests of peace. I renew my homage to Mussolini.

"At the moment when Germany violates the Versailles treaty, it is comforting that such a great nation as Italy solidly supports international peace efforts.

"While the English ministers are in Berlin talking with Hitler, I must insist Germany can blame only herself if new international peace pacts are completed without Germany.

"Several days after M. Simon ends his visit we are resuming our conversations at Stresa (Italy). France's position will not be modified, but remains for dignified peace for all.

"France's role must be to maintain and fortify international friendship and be strong enough to assure security of her own frontiers."

The press agreed the Anglo-German talks marked a new German diplomatic victory and a setback for France. Editors grudgingly admired the German tactics in winning the British away from their French alliance by flaunting the specter of Communist Russia.

Reports here say Adolf Hitler refused to adhere to the proposed Eastern Locarno pact because of Russia's projected participation, and objects to the Balkan pact idea because he wishes to steer clear of any Balkan squabbles.

Hitler was said to have offered to accept arms equality on land and in the air with France on the condition France renounce her military aid alliances. This France will not do.

Britons Leave Berlin Parley Emptyhanded, Disappointed

will meet next month, "will the picture begin to take shape," the spokesman continued.

"What we are doing here is getting one piece of the picture. Eden now proceeds to Moscow, Warsaw and Praha, where he will get more pieces.

"Then at London he will piece all his information together and this, together with what Premier Benito Mussolini and Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France will have to offer (at Stresa), will constitute a complete picture of the international situation."

The spokesman, who made it clear that the British delegation leaves Berlin with nothing in the way of any general agreement, asserted that he "never for a moment expected to reach such an agreement here."

"Our visit was to be purely exploratory," he said, "and such it remains."

In view of recent events, he continued, it was high time to "get to close quarters and meet Hitler irrespective of what we found."

The British spokesman said four subjects involved in the Anglo-French communique issued at London early in February were discussed: Security, armaments, the League of Nations and the air alliance for western Europe.

"While we were obliged to protest with the other powers (against German's reinstitution of military conscription), we took the view that as long as the topics for discussion remained the same as in the London communique we should come to Berlin," he continued.

"Complicated Business."

He described the problem of settling European affairs as "an exclusively complicated business."

Despite the efforts of the British delegation to look pleased at the result of the two-day parley, there was little doubt that Simon, who returns to London by air tomorrow, and Eden, who leaves tonight for the eastern capitals, are going away disappointed. They came to Berlin Sunday with these two principal aims:

To induce Germany to return to the league.

To influence Germany's rearmament program in the sense of getting from her information as to what the future strength of her army, navy and air fleet might be.

The German stand on the League of Nations issue had been often expressed before the British visit, and their contention that problems allied with it must be solved before the Reich can return to Geneva was unshaken.

France, it was said, made Germany's adherence to this viewpoint easier by her decision last week to accuse Germany before the league council of violating the Versailles Treaty.

Hitler's View of League.

At Stresa, therefore, the British must explain to the Italians and French that Germany will not consider the league question until all her other wishes or conditions are fulfilled, one of the most important of these being Germany's equality with other nations.

The fact that the league will judge Germany runs counter to this German concept of equality, it was stated.

During the conversations, Hitler also took opportunity to point out that Germany considers the league not as an effective instrument for peace but as the instrument of force of one group of nations.

On the question of rearmament, the German Fuehrer appeared successful in his effort to turn that issue back upon his questioners.

Instead of disclosing Germany's military plans as the British hoped he would, he was reported to have produced facts and figures showing the arms strength of Germany's neighbors and sought to put up to other powers the responsibility of initiating arms limitation.

The foreign office told correspondents Hitler again declared Germany willing to scrap her last cannon if others do likewise. As long as others are armed, however, he insists upon arming also both for self-protection and to symbolize Germany's insistence on equal rights, it was explained.

Holds Details in Abeyance.

At Stresa, therefore, the British must tell their co-conferees that Germany is holding details of her armaments program in abeyance pending the decision of others as to what they intend to do about their armaments.

In the general discussion of Europe's problems Hitler made no secret of the Reich's aversion to large international conferences or bulky multilateral pacts, pointing to the German-Polish nonaggression pact as an example of the efficacy of bilateral agreements and citing the London naval conversations as evidence of the inefficiency of large meetings.

A nonaggression pact with Austria, the Reichsfuehrer contended, would be the best means of settling Austro-German differences. The proposed Danubian pact, he said, was unacceptable because:

It might mean perpetuation of an Austrian regime irrespective of whether the people approved it;

It might stand in the way of an amicable settlement between Germany and Austria;

It leaves undefined the question of what constitutes "interferences" in Austrian affairs.

"Shocked" at Italy.

In this last connection, Hitler was said to have been "shocked" at Italy's reply to the German question, propounded before the Anglo-German conversations, as to who, in Benito Mussolini's opinion, should decide whether anyone was interfering with Austria.

Mussolini's answer, it was stated, was that Austria should decide. This Hitler rejected as untenable.

When Eden departs for Moscow tonight he may take with him the certainty that Germany fears nothing so much as an arrangement that may oblige Germany to go to the aid of Soviet Russia or accept aid from the Communist power.

Japan Leaving League Tonight But Keeps Ties

Retains Islands Mandate, Holds Place in World Court, Other Units.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, March 26.—Japan formally ends 15 years membership in the League of Nations tomorrow midnight, but many bonds still tie her to Geneva.

Even though the "notice of withdrawal," filed March 27, 1933, after the League condemned Japan's military action in Manchuria, becomes effective tomorrow, the Far Eastern empire retains the mandate of former German possessions in the Pacific.

Matsayuki Yokoyama, Japanese consul general at Geneva, assured league officials today that his nation would continue to collaborate with the league in every possible way.

"Japan will continue to present annual reports to the mandate commission," he said. "This was approved by the league council when it took note of the Japanese delegate's announcement that Japan would give detailed replies to questions raised by the commission."

Military Move Hinted.

(He referred to pointed queries directed at the Japanese representative at Geneva recently, which intimated that ostensible commercial development of the islands might in reality be military development, thus violating the mandate provisions.)

Japan, Yokoyama said, will continue her membership in the international labor organization and the World Court of Justice, expressing the belief that the league assembly would elect Hiruichi Nagaoka, former Ambassador to France, to succeed the late Viscount Mineichiro Adachi on the World Court.

It was considered likely, furthermore, that Nippon would like to maintain representation on such standing league committees as those on hygiene, economics, finance, fiscal questions, transit and communications, maritime navigation, mandates, intellectual cooperation, traffic in opium and other narcotics, the permanent opium central control board, child welfare and protection of women and children.

Linked to League Groups.

She probably would like to keep up her contact with the International Cinema Institute at Rome, the Institute of Intellectual Cooperation at Paris and almost certainly with the Far Eastern Epidemiological Intelligence Bureau of Singapore, the latter because it keeps Japanese shipping posted on health conditions and epidemic outbreaks in the Far East. All three are league organisms.

Joseph A. C. Avenol, league secretary general, said tonight Japan "no longer has any right or obligation as regards the league and it is therefore unhappily impossible for her to reclaim the position she has hitherto occupied in connection with the league."

In his statement, issued earlier, Yokoyama said the league could not ignore Japan's preponderance in East Asia, just as Japan "can not ignore the league as a most important international organization * * *"

Soviet Hearing Off, Tinkham Charges 'Gag'

Claims Data Showing Cause for Ending Relations Is Suppressed.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, last night charged that the House Foreign Affairs Committee in abruptly canceling a scheduled hearing yesterday had "suppressed" information which showed cause for severing relations with Soviet Russia.

The committee planned a meeting in executive session to discuss Tinkham's resolution for Congress to go on record as favoring withdrawal of recognition from Russia. They wanted the Bostonian to agree not to discuss the testimony given on the House floor.

He refused to be bound and the committee, headed by Representative McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, balked at hearing him or the witnesses he had waiting in an anteroom.

It was only after weeks of work that Tinkham succeeded in getting promise of a hearing by the committee of which he is a member. He had an imposing list from patriotic and other organizations assembled to testify. They waited patiently a half hour or longer. Then suddenly Tinkham, obviously indignant, stalked from the committee room and announced to their open-mouthed amazement:

"The hearing is over."

"But what will I tell my people in California," pleaded a prospective woman witness when Chairman McReynolds came out.

"You'll have to ask Mr. Tinkham, who brought you here," the chairman replied pleasantly, drawing on his ever-present pipe.

McReynolds in an informal statement to newspapermen explained what had happened. Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, put the motion that carried by a majority party vote not to go ahead with the hearings.

Tinkham, after thinking the matter over all day, issued a formal statement, saying in part:

"There can be only one explanation for this action. * * * The committee knew that if the American people were fully informed concerning the insidious work of the alien enemy in our midst, they would insist upon the immediate severance of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union."

McReynolds said the disagreement ended the incident.

7,000 in Strike Battle Before Factory in Ohio

4 Arrested as Unionists Fight Workers Leaving Radio Plant.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, March 26.—Strikers and workers of the Crosley Radio Corporation battled before the plant late today as police forces of both the city and the strikers struggled to hold a mammoth crowd in check.

Steel tubing, rubber hose and fists swung here and there as workers sought to reach their homes. Clothes were ripped from at least six girl workers as they were pulled and pushed.

Chief of Police Eugene L. Weatherly estimated the throngs jamming streets around the plant at some 7,000 strikers, sympathizers and onlookers—even more than harried workers at the end of the first day of the strike yesterday.

Only four arrests resulted, as 50 uniformed officers, reinforced by 50 men delegated as "union police" by the strikers themselves, tussled through the crowds to quell disturbances.

Earlier, Howard T. Colvin, a United States Department of Labor conciliator, had announced his belief the strike would be settled by late today or tomorrow. His announcement followed separate conferences with Lewis Crosley, vice president and general manager of the concern, and with union leaders. It included his expressed hope that he could soon bring the groups together.

Crosley announced to workers in the plant that effective April 5 they will be paid weekly, rather than three times a month, a point in the announced demands of the Radio and Refrigerator Workers Union.

R. A. Hoff, leader of the union, has declared the strike followed refusal of the company to formally sign an agreement on working conditions. Crosley has insisted the company has "no dispute whatsoever" with the union.

Atlanta, March 26 (AP).—Chancellor Philip Weltner, of the university system of Georgia, today announced he had submitted his resignation to the board of regents to become effective June 30. Weltner, who left a law practice here two years ago to accept the post, said he was motivated by a desire to "rest and go fishing."

Witness Gets His Tip on Raid From the Air

Doesn't Know Who Told Him or How, Fred Says at Inquiry.

"Something About 113."

"In a way I did and in a way I didn't. There was something said about 113 and he said he was sorry he didn't get—I suppose you might say—the honor of making the raid instead of the District. I said 'you know why you didn't' and he said 'No, I don't' and I said I had heard something about it in the morning."

From whom had he heard it and what had he heard? Well somebody said something, it might have come from the air. It didn't come from the radio did it? asked John R. Fitzpatrick, committee counsel, sarcastically. No, Mr. Fred said, in the low voice which has brought repeated protests from the official stenographer that he couldn't hear the witness.

"Where were you when you heard it?"

"I might have been walking."

"Was the remark addressed to you?"

"I don't know."

"You were walking when you heard the remark?"

"I Don't Know."

"I don't know. I may have been walking. I may have been standing."

"Do you know who made the statement?"

"I do not. It was several men."

"How many men?"

"Don't know."

"How do you know they were men?'

"I suppose you know the difference between voices of men and women."

"Did you see them?"

"If I saw them I don't know a thing about them."

"Were there one, two, three men?"

"No. It might have been a dozen."

"How can you recollect what you heard but can't recollect where what you heard came from?"

"If I could do you any good in the world, I would."

"We," said Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, committee chairman, "don't want you to do us any good or bad. We just want you to tell us what occurred."

Confronted With Record.

Mr. Fred was confronted with the official record of the testimony of Capt. Morgan before the committee and was asked whether it was correct or incorrect.

"I don't know," he replied.

Gray-haired, clad in a gray suit, the witness constantly gave the committee the professional smile of the boniface welcoming a customer, as if to persuade the belief he was doing his very best for them. Capt. Morgan's statement that he had said he would see something at 2 o'clock was correct, he said. He had not, however, told the captain a "certain person" had told him so. Only once did he depart from his role, declaring with a slight acceleration of speech and louder voice "I didn't know a damn thing about the raid."

Mr. Fred absolved Mr. Salkeld completely of the charge of tipping off and almost as quickly cast doubt on his own absolution. He never had seen Officer Salkeld until he had been pointed out to him by Inspector Headley in the committee rooms the day before.

Doesn't Know Who Was Present.

"Was Officer Salkeld present when you heard this remark?"

"I don't know who was."

"Will you say he was not?"

"I will not."

"Will you say he was?"

"I will not."

"Did you consider you had received a tip off?"

"No, sir. There was no tipping off. Simply what I heard as I passed by, gentlemen."

"Did Capt. Morgan ask you who gave you the information?"

"No, sir."

"Capt. Morgan made it very plain to the committee you had told him a specific individual had informed you of the raid," said Mr. Randolph.

"Mistake. I know nothing about it," said Mr. Fred in one of his very few hurried answers.

"I've No Idea."

"I've no idea," he said, in response to questions from Mr. Fitzpatrick about when, where and what had been said and who said it.

Recalled in the afternoon, Mr. Fred was questioned by Representative Chauncey W. Reed, of Illinois, who was presiding. He was just passing by when he heard what he heard, Mr. Fred said. Were men or women talking? He would say men. Were they white or black? He didn't know. Were they well dressed or poorly dressed? asked Mr. Reed. He didn't know. He had no idea what the remark was about. It was only after the raid he put two and two together and deduced its purport.

"Possibly you weren't serious when you spoke to Capt. Morgan?" suggested Mr. Fitzpatrick. "Perhaps you were more or less joking?"

"Well, I didn't know anything about it——"

"You were serious, then?"

"Oh, no, I didn't mean it jokingly; I wasn't joking at all."

Police Captains Testify.

Police Capts. Richard H. Mansfield, commander of the Ninth Precinct, and John E. Bowers, commander of the Eighth Precnict, and C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital parks, were other witnesses heard by the committee during the day.

Capt. Mansfield was the first witness. He told the committee he hadn't come down bringing a halo around his head. There was gambling and maybe some disorderly houses in his precinct, he said, but there weren't many.

He should have at least 18 more men and could use 25. He should have six mortorcycle men. The civil service should be retained. The park police should be consolidated with the Metropolitan Police.

Appeal from Trial Board decision should be left to the Commissioners, otherwise, "a man doesn't have a chance for his white alley." Prostitution in his precinct was "practicaly passe." Gambling was confined to petty stuff.

Capt. Mansfield urged change in the retirement law to permit voluntary retirement after 25 years' service. "You're pretty well washed up after 25 years in this business," he said.

"Why, Captain," said Mrs. Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, "you look capable of a long number of years of service."

"Mrs. Jenckes, all that glitters is not gold," responded Capt. Mansfield.

Asks More Men.

Capt. John E. Bowers, commander of the Eighth Precinct, said he needed 20 additional men. He now has a personnel of 59. He said he did not believe the present Trial Board system could be improved on. He agreed that appeals from board decisions should be limited exclusively to the major and superintendent of police.

Opposition to merger of the United States Park Police with the Metropolitan Police was voiced by E. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks. The Park Police would be glad to get rid of the smaller parks and circles, he said. There was nothing the park police did which the District police didn't do, except they were trained for park work. Educational requirements and promotion requirements were the same, he said. He believed the service could be improved by increasing the prerequisite requirements.

Representative Reed was presiding. He is a staid gentleman and a lawyer of national reputation. Were there any special instructions given park police about lovers' lanes, he asked.

"Yes, sir," agreed Mr. Finnan rapidly. Then he paused. Yes, there were such lanes in Washington. Mr. Reed said he assumed there were some. In summer, Mr. Finnan said, the park police shifted their entire tours of duty, so that more men could be on duty during the hours of leisure when lovers would be most given to affectionate demonstrations. The park police toured the roads very carefully, Mr. Finnan said. Most cases were handled diplomatically and wisely.

Instructions had been given not to peep into cars and annoy persons, His office had had very few complaints, he said.

"Then," said Mr. Reed, with a twinkle, "your police do not have any especial opposition to spooning?"

"Oh, no," said Mr. Finnan. "We have too many highly respected citizens who go down to Hains Point in hot weather and other places."

There always would be, Mr. Finnan said, a need for a United States park police in the National Capital because of the extension of Federal parks beyond the District line.

D. C. Heads Oppose Nonresident Police

A bill which would permit District policemen to reside beyond the District boundaries was disapproved yesterday by the District Commissioners.

However, the Commissioners called attention of the Senate and House District Committees to a declaration that Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown is "inclined to favor" the bill if the men have telephones.

The bill was introduced by Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, who asked that the present restriction against living beyond the District limits be rescinded.

Not Joking With Capt. Morgan, However, He Declares.

2 Are Indicted As Pretenders On PWA 'Plan'

Alleged Plot Involved $10,000,000 'Loan' for Poinsettia Ranch.

A supposed plan to establish a $10,000,000 poinsettia ranch in Florida on Public Works money was involved in the indictment of two men yesterday by the District grand jury on charges of impersonating Federal officers.

They are Frederick B. Woodcock, former loan examiner of the PWA, and Herman E. Pitman, the alleged promoter of the plan.

The plan proposed making synthetic rubber from "a certain type of poinsettia."

According to evidence given the jury, Pitman obtained $3,900 from Irvin and Abe Spasser, of St. Louis, after showing them a letter purporting to be an approval of a $10,000,000 loan from PWA. Woodcock is alleged to have written the letter, on PWA stationery.

The money obtained from the Spassers was to have been used for patents and other expenses.

Others indicted are William Barber, housebreaking and larcency; Fred W. Bennett and William S. McCauley, grand larceny and joyriding; Raymond Holden Ball and Thomas Frank O'Hara, grand larceny; Sylvester W. Holmes and Edward L. Stewart, robbery; William H. Waldron, violation of liquor taxing act of 1934; Lee Bradley, forgery and uttering; Hampton L. Thompson, false pretenses; James Barnes, violation of Section 347, Title 18, U. S. Code, and Armanda J. Leavy and Elsa R. Lanham, abortion.

Those cleared are James Williams and Walter Brown, housebreaking and larceny; Percy Parkes and William Beatty, assault with a dangerous weapon; Mollie Parker and George Brown, receiving stolen property; Melvin Butler, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1934, and William H. Waters, jr., homicide.

Liquor Board Begins Drive on Violators

A drive against wholesale dealers in beer who have been furnishing electric signs and other appliances to retailers was begun yesterday by the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Summonses were sent to 28 wholesalers to appear April 3 before the board to explain reported violations of the liquor regulations, which prohibit the donation of any fixtures to the retailer.

The board yesterday revoked the licenses of Peter G. Boyd, 1836 Columbia road, and Hyman Slavinsky, of 1721 Twentieth street northwest, for selling bottled beer on Sunday.

Scalding Proves Fatal To 3-Year-Old Boy

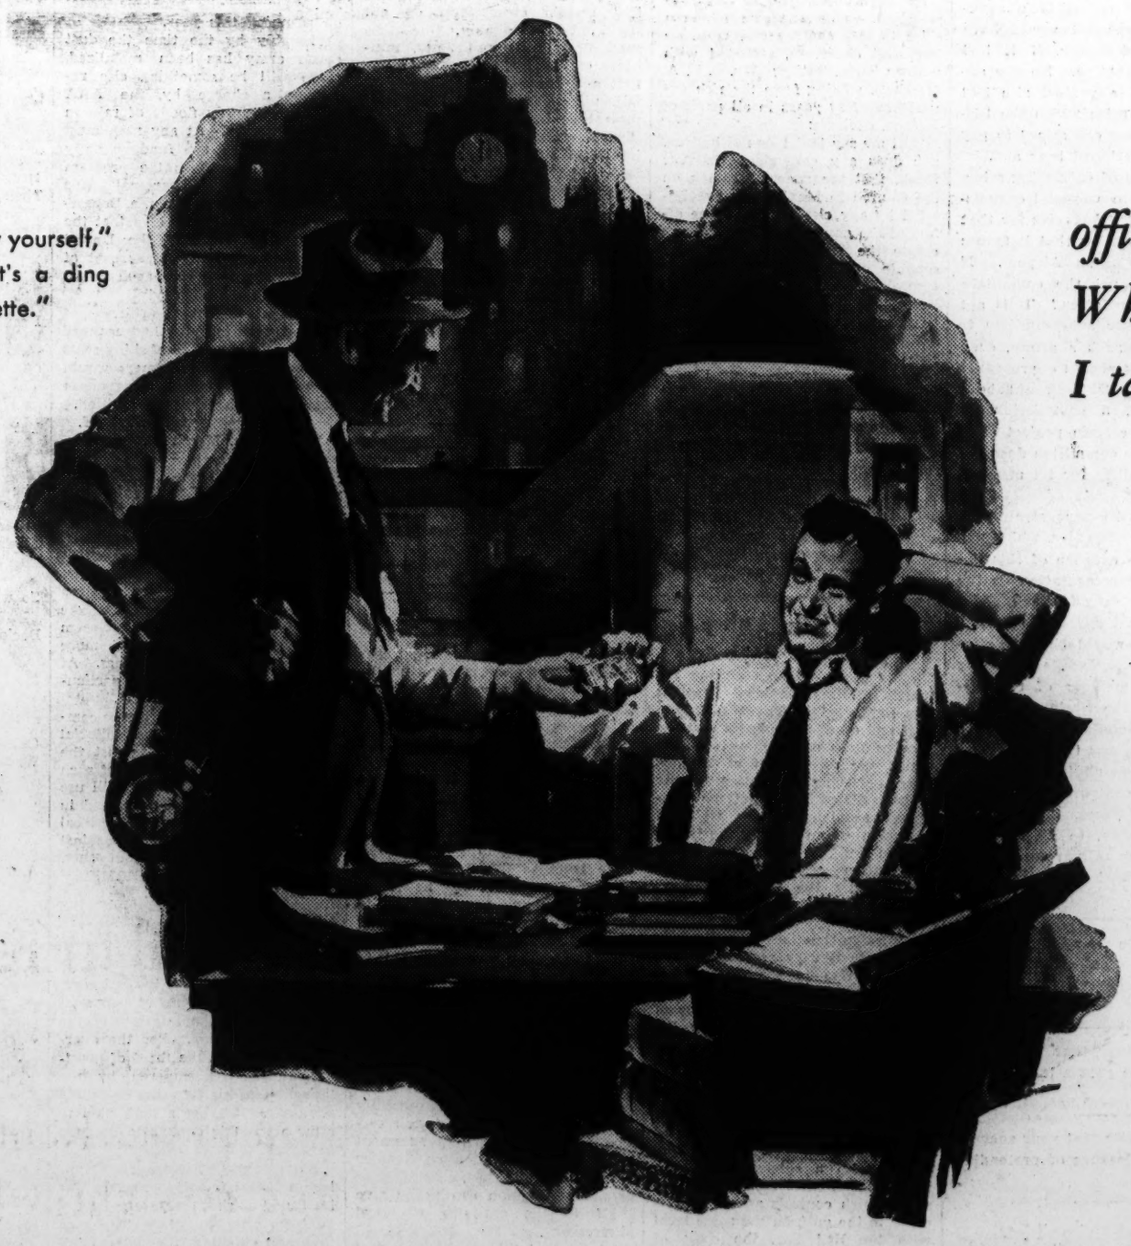
Three-year-old Clifford Bounnell, who fell in a bathtub of hot water January 8, died in Emergency Hospital yesterday as a result of the scalding.

Neither hospital authorities or police were at first able to find his parents, John and Maureen Bounnell, who had moved from their former address in the 600 block of Fifth street northwest. Later, the father, having called at the hospital, learned of the child's death and came to police headquarters with Mrs. Bounnell, where both were questioned on the circumstances of the child's accident.

British Flier Feared Down on Ocean Flight

Calcutta (Wednesday), March 27 (AP).—H. L. Brooks, British flier attempting a record flight from Australia to England, was long overdue on the hop between Rangoon, Burma, and this city today and it was feared he had fallen into the sea.

The flier, one of the tail-enders in the England-Australia Air Derby last October, took off from Darwin, Australia, Sunday morning. He left Rangoon early yesterday afternoon for a flight over the Bay of Bengal.



"Sure, enjoy yourself," said Jim. "It's a ding good cigarette."

I was working way late at the office one night and ran out of cigarettes. When Jim the watchman came through I tackled him for a smoke.

"Sure," says Jim, and he handed over a pack of Chesterfields. "Go ahead, Mr. Kent, take three or four."

Jim said he'd smoked a lot of cigarettes in his time, but he'd put Chesterfield up in front of any of 'em when it came to taste.

... "and they ain't a bit strong either," is the way Jim put it.

That was the first Chesterfield I ever smoked. And I'm right there with him, too, when he says it's a ding good cigarette.

A Policy of Neutrality.

Pessimism as to the outcome of the present European crisis is not indicated by saying that the Administration's efforts to clarify our neutrality policy are well-advised.

Of the overwhelming desire of the American people to keep out of any war which might arise in Europe there is no question. Of our ability to stay out of hostilities, if they should be at all protracted, there is very considerable doubt.

This situation arises from the fact that our "neutral rights," as we today conceive them, would almost certainly be violated by one and perhaps both sides to any such struggle, should it unhappily eventuate. These "rights" are absolutely at variance with modern definitions of contraband, to cite only one of many problems in this field.

The word "rights" by its very nature implies the existence of correlative duties. And on the duties of neutrality in modern warfare little public thinking has as yet been exerted. For some months the Department of State has been pondering this problem. It is only the part of wisdom that present circumstances should be regarded as pointing the need for bringing these official studies to public consideration.

Only a soap-box mind could blame the abandonment of American neutrality, in the event of another war, on the machinations of munition makers, international bankers or other similar bogies. The real menace to neutrality is the absence of any thought-out policy designed to safeguard that difficult status.

Envoy Extraordinary.

On returning to his post at London, Ambassador Bingham gave out a brief but formal interview on the highly important subject of stabilizing the dollar and the pound.

"At the proper time and at the proper place," he said, "I think it best for the United States and Great Britain to arrive at an understanding."

There was a day when such an utterance upon so momentous a matter, by the Ambassador of the United States to Great Britain, would have been accepted universally as an authoritative reflection of the views of his government.

Yet it is only too painfully apparent that the Ambassador was voicing, as he had once before, his own attitude and not that of the Administration for which he is the official representative at London. No time was lost by other officials at home in discounting the idea that the Ambassador was speaking for his government.

Now this is painful enough as another manifestation of divided counsels within the Administration. Furthermore, it reflects the unfortunate estate to which the Ambassador at London has been reduced. For he is revealed to the British, not as the credible and accredited spokesman of his government, but as an officially unsupported advocate of a course recommended by all of the dictates of common sense.

Still more extraordinary is the fact that Mr. Bingham's government feels obliged to deny that mere "understanding" between two great nations upon a matter of the greatest importance to both is even contemplated.

The Dionne Disturbance.

The quintuplets have been in the news practically every week since they were born nearly ten months ago. First their birth was heralded, then their cereal, then their first smiles, then the first tooth. Dr. Dafoe was given the keys of New York City because of his care of them; later Papa and Mama Dionne were given the keys of Chicago because they were Papa and Mama. There have been serious articles written on them and equally as facetious ones. Any way you look at them, though, they spell news. And each day longer that all five live and flourish increases public interest in them and admiration for those whose constant vigilance has been responsible for their sturdiness.

Now come rumors that the parents of these little girls would not lift a restraining finger if some adroit American exploiter managed to induct them across the border and into this country for purposes of exhibition. To prevent this the Ontario Provincial Government has ordered a police guard to protect them day and night. This lends a decidedly serious aspect to the disagreement between the Dionnes and Canadian authorities as to which is better fitted to assume guardianship of the babies.

The unschooled Dionnes have already reared five healthy children without any special assistance, if indeed any, from the outside. Hence it might be argued that they are bewildered that anyone should doubt their ability to care for the quintuplets with equal success. But this argument does not altogether hold water. The Dionnes are bound to realize that five babies who, by some miracle of nature, are born at the same time are a problem entirely beyond that of raising five children born a year or so apart. That the Dionnes appreciate this, even though they pretend not to be cognizant of it, is proven by the fact that they think people should want to pay for the privilege of viewing the babies.

To say that the Dionnes are ignorant of the enormity of their responsibility is one way of giving them the benefit of the doubt. To say that the Canadian government is motivated by selfish motives would be a presumptuous statement without any foundation to date. But to say that any American showman, who would deliberately jeopardize the lives of these babies by subjecting them to the rigors of vaudeville or carnival life, is a scoundrel, is not to overstate the case one bit.

New Deal Court Tests.

Senator Black's apprehension over the legal status of some New Deal measures is shared by many careful observers. But the obvious remedy is not that which the Senator has proposed.

Of course, Federal agencies can not be expected to function properly under the threat of restraining orders and injunctions. Senator Black is undoubtedly right in pointing out the depressing results of legislation that may be easily upset by court decisions. "Under our present system," he says, "we have thousands of Government employes wondering today whether their actions are legal. Others are prevented from carrying out the intentions of Congress by injunctions which may or may not be sustained by the Supreme Court."

In these statements, however, the Senator fails to make any adequate case for rushing directly through the Supreme Court the decisions of lower tribunals that happen to be adverse to the Government. Instead he has brought a grave indictment against Congress itself. The need is not for a measure that would pass the buck to the Supreme Court. The need is for legislation prepared with conscientious attention to constitutional restrictions.

The Supreme Court justices are unanimous in opposing the Black bill. The presence of Chief Justice Hughes and Associate Justices Van Devanter and Brandeis before the Senate Judiciary Committee is sufficient evidence that Senator Black's proposal is repugnant alike from the moderate, conservative and liberal points of view. They see that the proposed measure would give the Government an unfair advantage in appealing cases. It would tend to jazz a judicial procedure which from its very nature must be careful and deliberate. And there is a strong possibility that, by avoiding the Circuit Court of Appeals and sending cases direct to the Supreme Court, the extra work imposed upon the latter would actually delay the consideration of important cases.

During the last two years Congress has grossly neglected its duty to shape all legislation in conformity with the Constitution. Frequently the constitutionality of statutes seems to have been regarded as the least important consideration. If the Administration chooses to act in haste it is obviously not the fault of the courts if the consequences demand repentance at leisure.

Present indications are, moreover, that the Administration is not so anxious for summary court tests of certain of its measures. It is surmised that the Belcher case, elaborately prepared as a test of the NRA, had been dropped on the theory that the recovery administration should be more thoroughly intrenched before it is exposed to scrutiny by the Supreme Court.

This policy of building up a situation that will force the court to decide favorably to the Government, or alternatively inflict economic chaos upon the country, is far more reprehensible than resort to judicial shortcuts. Both tendencies should suggest to Congress the urgent necessity of paying something more than lip service to the Constitution when legislation is enacted.

More Signs of Weakness.

Sympathy with the plight of a Police Department unable to find out who is frustrating its gambling raids must not be carried too far. Some pertinent facts concerning the recent "tip-off" in Capt. Morgan's precinct have been revealed by the House District Crime Committee. The fact that the "secret" plans of the police were discussed on the street hours before the raid took place has been established. But the police, in the best Scotland Yard tradition, are still baffled by the mystery.

Inspector Headley was aware of charges that some member of the Police Department had indulged in sabotage. But he took no action because he was afraid that he might interfere with the activities of the investigating committee. Such deference to the committee is more courteous than intelligent. Is the inspector's knowledge of the local government so meager that he believes the House investigating committee has assumed control over the police?

There is also something disconcerting about Mr. Headley's frequent lapses of memory. His failure to recall details of his letters to Representative Blanton, written several months ago, was rather curious. But much more startling is Mr. Headley's inability to "put together" details of a conversation in which he engaged as recently as last Saturday. Memories as fragile as that are incompatible with occupancy of responsible executive position. Small wonder that the public is already drawing uncomplimentary conclusions as to why the Police Department is moribund while crime flourishes in the District!

Commissioner Hazen is determined to learn who is responsible for the "tip-off" and to punish the guilty party. His indignation over this affair is commendable, even though belated. The choice of Inspector Bean to conduct the investigation may have been only routine. Yet, if Mr. Blanton will pardon the observation, it isn't complimentary to the "gentlemen's agreement" designed to force out Mr. Bean and give his place to Mr. Headley. If the choice of Inspector Bean for this important task indicates a desire on the part of the Commissioners to emphasize their complete disavowal of the "gentlemen's agreement," few Washingtonians will protest their action.

It is fully apparent, however, that the mere elimination of an inside tipster will not overcome the weakness of the local Police Department. The Commissioners are well advised to withhold plans for any major changes until the crime probe is complete. But when this essential investigation has run its course a thorough overhauling of the District's law enforcement machinery will be imperative.

Fog Over The Airport.

In several respects the report of the House subcommittee which has been studying airport sites for the District is extremely disappointing. The committee emphatically turned its back upon the only site indorsed by local officials and civic groups. Yet it failed to recommend any specific substitute.

No exception can be taken to the committee's general conclusion that immediate improvement of Washington's civil airport facilities is desirable. "An airport is required," says the report, "that can be developed in the least possible time for the least cost, having in mind safety, proximity to the center of Washington and adequate technical facilities." Similar conclusions have been reached at frequent intervals during the last several years. Yet the Capital City is still handicapped by a wholly inadequate landing field because Congress has failed to agree upon the best location for a permanent air terminal. To the solution of this issue the committee has made no contribution whatever.

Objections raised by the committee to Gravelly Point must be carefully weighed. Construction of a model airport on land to be built up from the Potomac River bed would doubtless be experimental from several viewpoints. And the proximity of this site to Bolling Field has always aroused some misgivings. The committee's arguments against Gravelly Point would have been much stronger, however, if it had selected a definite alternative. No site appears to be ideal. If a perfect site had been available for the price which the District and the Government can afford to pay it would have been developed long ago.

The committee's plan of entrusting selection of an airport site to a special commission, and the personnel it suggests for that body, lead to the assumption that it favors improvement of Washington Airport. If that is true, why did not the committee make a direct recommendation? It is not the function of a House subcommittee to name the members of such a group, even if its advice with respect to procedure should be followed. This roundabout method of organizing a commission already committed to a certain project gives the impression that the committee does not care to take responsibility for its own advice.

Moreover, it would be very strange to give the air transport companies, which will bear no portion of the expense of this improvement, the same representation on the site-selecting commission as the District government, which must pay half the cost. Another inconsistency would be the designation of Amelia Earhart, excellent aviatrix though she is, as a member of this important group, while the National Capital Park and Planning Commission is ignored.

On the whole, it appears that the House subcommittee has only muddied the waters in which the airport controversy has been suspended for several years. There is no encouragement, therefore, to give a commission hand-picked by this group full authority to spend the District's money for an airport.

Don't be too severe in your judgment of a person who kicks instead of using his head. He probably knows which is the stronger end of his anatomy.

Don't forget that every time Uncle Sam turns a dollar loose he puts a tax collector on its trail.

So manage your affairs that your enemies will never have the pleasure of pretending to sympathize with you.

In The Federal Crime Net.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Raids ordinarily do not bring lasting results, but the Nation-wide crime drive now being made by United States Treasury agents may prove an exception to the rule. The Federal Government rarely makes arrests without abundant evidence, and it scores a large percentage of convictions.

Already 2,900 inhabitants of the underworld, including those who thrive on the sale of narcotics, liquor violations, rum-running, counterfeiting and the doping of race horses, are thrashing about in the Federal crime net. Some of the more slippery ones may escape, but the campaign now in progress should be of material aid in damming up some of the more prolific sources of criminal initiative.

Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is my duty to point out to all seeking the truth with reference to conditions in Mexico that the editorial in The Washington Post for Monday, March 25, presents the matter as if the facts of persecution could reasonably be called into question. To establish this doubt, the editorial writer points to the diametrically opposed views which have recently been published in The Post.

Putting aside for the moment the so-called partisan views of both sides to this controversy, what do impartial observers, affiliated with neither party, testify? Mr. S. L. A. Marshall, writing from the rich experience of 20 years in all parts of Mexico, declares:

"Let me say that I do not believe, nor does any competent observer think, that the renewed attack on the Church in Mexico was precipitated by any clerical plot. The effort of the government is always to create the impression that unreasonable obstinacy of the Catholic Church is responsible for the closing of the churches. Yet, to date, official insistence that the rebellious activities of the clergy (fomented by the sudden forward thrust of the antireligious educational program) were the direct cause of the wholesale expulsion of priests and closing of churches has not been supported by any major evidence worthy of credence.

"The suppressing of Christian cults, quite apart from spiritual and dogmatic considerations, is coupled primarily with the general program of suppressing, or liquidating, all opposition. * * * First and foremost, it is a ruthless policy of class suppression."

Every national problem or conflict in these distressed times is, of course, complex and full of ramifications. But this does not mean that certain clear facts do not stand out unmistakably. One thousand Protestants and Jews, ministers of religion, historians, scientists and scholars, as early as last fall, uttered a firm and dignified protest against the persecution in Mexico. They, like Mr. Marshall, had been able to form the important, basic conclusion: "Human rights are being trampled in Mexico. Religious freedom has ceased to have meaning."

Another Dust Cloud.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In soil which is so dry that it blows away, it is proposed to plant crops to prevent dust storms, according to press reports. Still trying to bamboozle the public with the popular illusion that the Government somehow possesses superhuman powers to achieve the impossible, the swivel-chair agriculturists of the Brain Trust are ready to rush into the breach (and limelight) with a plethora of panaceas almost as blinding as the dust clouds themselves.

Apparently this grandiose scheme for dust control is a sequel to the Forest Shelter Belt Project for planting millions of trees in dry land to ameliorate droughts. At least these two schemes have one thing in common—a huge volume of hot air which, perchance, might be one of the causes of the great drought. And, incidentally, droughts are no respecters of bureaucracies, as shown by the outcome of the AAA production "control" program last year and its probable effect on planning this year.

Probably by the time the dust storm army has been mobilized, there will be something else requiring a charge by the AAA brigade—possibly floods of rain in the dusty area. At any rate, most of these plans are fundamentally just as fallacious as the program for buying up submarginal lands when the figures from the Department of Agriculture prove that the submarginal lands of the United States produce only 3 per cent of the total commercial agricultural products of the country!

Perhaps if these arbiters of American agriculture had manure on their shoes instead of shiny seats on their pants, the farmers would be getting the common-sense square deal to which they are entitled.

District Tyranny.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a resident of Washington for nearly 35 years, I have seen a lot of the injustice suffered here at the hands of members of the District and appropriations sub-committees of the Congress by reason of the fixed ideas of their duty that seem to have possessed one or more members of those committees. At present we appear to be particularly afflicted in this respect.

I wish, therefore, heartily to commend your stand in the editorial columns of The Post against the present particular exposure of such injustice. I trust that you will use all the power at your command in the endeavor to secure our local government for the future against the constant recurrence of such tyranny. JOHN J. ROTHERMEL.
Washington, March 23.

An Example For Michigan.

New York State for the last eight years has used a policy of reforestation based on the interests of the coming generation. For the average mature man the thrill of planting a tree is tempered by the thought that his act must be purely altruistic. It takes a long time to grow a tree big enough to be good for much.

But at the New York State College a junior forestry program was instituted back in 1926 and is developing year by year. The plan involves enlisting the interest of boys and girls of school age in planting trees on idle farm land. The trees are furnished to those who promise to plant them.

From the beginning of the movement interest has grown. This year 1,708 boys and girls have ordered trees. Each is given an allotment of 1,000. That means that when the spring tree-planting is finished, New York's younger generation will have added 1,708,000 trees to the State's forestry resources and trees and youngsters will be growing up together.

Iranian Asks Senate To Stand Pat

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On the 14th of March on the authority of the Associated Press, it was published in The Washington Post and other newspapers that the Foreign Relations Committee eliminated the reservation of Senator King, declaring ratification by the United States shall not be construed as denying any right of sovereignty Iran might have in the Iranian Gulf, because of a misinterpretation of the reservation's meaning by the Iranian government.

Such a statement emanating from the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate is very regrettable and must be due to some misunderstanding or misrepresentation. In the first place, the sole purpose of the reservation was to show the United States Senate's and Government's sense of justice and impartiality toward Iran in not participating in the design contemplated in the convention to place the Iranian Gulf, three-quarters of which forms a part of Iranian territory, with a splendid organization and the most modern type of navy which controls and maintains order in the gulf, on the same level with the Red Sea, the coast of which is inhabited by nomad Arab tribes, without any authority or organization.

It is asserted that the Iranian government has miscontrued the reservation in order to strengthen her claim on the Island of Bahrein and establish the delimination of her territorial waters in the Iranian Gulf. Such an assertion has been made in order to mislead public opinion and make the American Government and Senate hesitate in displaying their impartiality and justice. Moreover, the assertion is futile and childish, because the reservation says, "any right Persia may have" not "any right she claims." Therefore, it can not be applicable to any right Persia claims and is disputed by others.

The sole purpose of the Iranian government, from the time the Geneva arms traffic convention of 1923 was drawn up, has been to point out to all the governments the drawbacks of the convention and the injustice done to Iran by placing the Iranian Gulf on the same level as the Red Sea. The Iranian government has never intended nor shown any disposition to regard it as a means of aiding her claim of sovereignty in the Iranian Gulf, for Iranian sovereign rights in the territorial waters of the Iranian Gulf and the rights which Iran possesses in the gulf are based on national and international law and not on the reservation of any nation.

Besides, it is not becoming to a great legislative assembly, like the Senate, to go back on its carefully weighed word, because of the assertion that the Iranian government placed misconstruction on Senator King's reservation. So, consideration or misconstruction can never give itself to the changing of legal phraseology.

I hope that this explanation will clear away any misleading statements which were published in certain papers and show the justice of Senator King's reservation and the Iranian government's expectation of impartiality from the American Senate and Government, whose sense of justice has won admiration the world over. The removal of it will have the reverse effect all over the East and give them a conviction that the American Senate can easily be persuaded to change its decisions and carefully worded amendments. CHUKUHY,
An Iranian.

The Post Impressionist

Going Lyric?

Post Office, Wednesday.

THE LAZY days being near again, we wish (again) that the boss would let us write all our Columns in verse. We wish this, not only because of the springtime and the bursting of buds and the growing of grass and all that, but because it is so much easier to write verse—of sorts—than it is to write prose—of any sort.

George Bernard Shaw declared it was always much easier to write blank verse than good prose. To prove his contention, he turned out a drama in verse exceedingly blank. The Post-Impressionist feels much the same way about his daily task and rhyme.

We'll try it once, anyhow.

And because, after all, this month is nominally a spring month, we'll begin with the tender passion—of course, in the mood of the Victorian Era, no passions being tender nowadays—and in vers de societe of the late Locker-Lampson species:

Dear Doris sought for learning—
What laudable intent!—
All puerile pleasures spurning,
On only knowledge bent.

No lover could prevent her
From seeking Wisdom's shrine:
So did she vow and enter
With cheeks incarnadine.

She pored o'er pedants' pages
With never tiring toil;
To smoke out all the sages
She burnt the midnight oil . . .

What then? One smile upbraiding,
But sure to overwhelm:
Cupid was masquerading
Beneath Minerva's helm!

And so to sterner stuff:

He knew the hill was steep, the pathway long:
His soul was iron, and his purpose strong.
And, unto self, self said: "Forsake the wrong!"

But, coward heart, how could he think that you
Had purpose strong, could to a trust be true—
That he could you with fortitude endure?

The soul had won the body by its frown—
His light and little heart weighed both them down.

The tenderest flower ever known to men
Dies at the lightest touch of cold, and then Sleeps through the winter to awake with spring:
And shall we sleep and never wake again?

Two vessels passing on the sea can sound
Their clarion challenge, or a way be found
Upon the trackless deep: does man not know
Or whence he came or whither he is bound?

I sought to pierce this mad Cimmerian night
By turning to the sages' fanes for light:
A thousand there to show us we are wrong . . .
Yet One there is, elsewhere, to set us right!

The last of all on lawn or lea
Here at the downs beside the sea
Winter has left amid the seer,
Pale mourners of the yester-year,
This withered flower hangs drearily.

So with a man when Heaven's decree Declares, at Death's dark port, that he Must be to launch on that calm mere
The last of all.

Oh, when the souls of them are free
Who now laugh out life's noon with me,
When those who to the dawn were dear
Have traveled toward the sunset clear,
And evening comes, let me not be
The last of all!

* * *

Concluding our performance with a few lighter experiments in a French verse-form:

I try to write a triolet
To Phyllis—and it rhymes to Di;
I start for Di a chansonette,
Or try to write a triolet
To her—and Phyllis will upset
My plans. Now, can you tell me why
I try to write a triolet
To Phyllis and it rhymes to Di?

The Poet:

When I have sung my song,
Then let me fall asleep!
Whatever says the throng
When I have sung my song,
The battle's to the strong:
Why should the vanquished weep?
When I have sung my song,
Then let me fall asleep.

The Critic:

Whene'er he sings his song
I'm fain to fall asleep:
He takes uncommon long
Whene'er he sings his song.
In metre he's not strong,
In thought he's hardly deep!
Whene'er he sings his song
I'm fain to fall asleep.

Filipinos Anticipate Revised U. S. Policy

Manila Hopefully Looks For Economic Partnership In American Commerce.

The following article indicating the attitude of the Philippines regarding the proposed shift of the islands to commonwealth status, was written before the new constitution was signed by President Roosevelt last week.

By Vincente Albano Pacis.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila, Feb. 18 (By Mail).

EVERY indication that is recognizable from or in Manila points to an impending change in America's Philippine policy. What the change or changes will be will depend largely on whether or not the American farm and labor interests have sufficiently recovered from the panic that led them to insist on the passage of two independence laws in 1934, and on how bold the new Philippine mission leaving for Washington on February 20 will be in giving voice to its own convictions.

A new Philippine mission of three members, the most inclusively representative ever formed, is rushing to Washington. Governor General Frank Murphy, summoned by President Roosevelt for conferences on the Philippines, is now in America waiting for the mission.

A senatorial mission composed of Senators Tydings, of Maryland; McAdoo, of California; Gibson, of Vermont; McKellar, of Tennessee, and Hayden, of Arizona, is ready to report its various findings.

President Roosevelt, who early last year promised that the independence law would be amended, is reported ready to listen to suggestions. Furthermore, he will have an opportunity to propose direct legislation on the Philippines when he considers the Philippine constitution and when he may propose amendments, as he is empowered to do by the independence law.

* * * *

WHAT the changes proposed will be, it can only be conjectured. The Filipinos frankly fear the impending loss of the American market and have proposed a so-called economic partnership with America under which they apparently expect to see realized all the political concessions in the independence law, including the final grant of independence. This proposal will undoubtedly arouse opposition in various quarters, including the farm and labor interests, which conceive of Philippine independence as a means to liberate themselves from Philippine competion. They will be seconded by the level-headed political thinkers, who have always insisted that American authority in the Philippines must always be commensurate with American responsibilities.

But if the Philippine mission is disposed to regrad its economic-partnership proposals as a bargaining point, and is willing to give up some of the promised political concessions for better economic terms, it could very well do so in an authoritative manner. For it is composed of the three men who can best speak for the county, namely, Manuel L. Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate and of the majority political party; Claro M. Recto, president of the constitutional convention, and Manuel Roxas, vice president and official representative of the minority party. If these gentlemen make any sane and reasonable proposal in Washington affecting both the economic and political aspects of the inpedendence law, they will always be supported at home. Together, they carry the virtual mandate of the entire Filipino people.

Difficulties are foreshadowed, however, by a statement made early last fall in Paris by Senator Tydings to the effect that the Filipinos have made a mistake in ever seeking independence, and that the American Congress likewise erred in acquiescing to the Filipino demand and passing the independence law. Though generally minimized here, the recent statement made in Congress by Pedro Guevara, Filipino resident commissioner, that the Filipinos are afraid of Japan, is bound also to complicate the situation.

* * * *

WHAT, for instance, would the Filipinos be willing to give up, politically, in return for continued access to the American market and more adequate American military and naval protection? Would they be willing to allow the American high commissioner, who will represent American sovereignty during the Commonwealth,, broader powers and authority, and then substitute an indefinite duration for the ten-year period provided for the Commonwealth?

Thoughtful observers in the Philippines, Americans, Filipinos and foreigners alike, expect that something far-reaching affecting Philippine-American relations will be decided in Washington soon. As a matter of fact, the time is ripe for this. The Philippine mission, which is coming to Washington avowedly to ask for amendments to the independence law, is also bringing the draft of the Commonwealth Constitution. With full authority, the independence law and the constitution could be coordinated by the President, Congress and the Philippine mission.

At this very moment, in fact, the constitutional draft as already debated and passed upon is being virtually revised by a so-called committee on style under the direction of Messrs. Quezon and Recto, both members of the Philippine mission. Although the constitution as retouched will again be returned to the convention in plenary session for final approval, the affair is expected to be a mere formality, so complete is the confidence of the convention in the two men and the members of the style committee.

* * * *

THE POINT is that any reasonable change in the draft upon which these men agree with President Roosevelt will be fully supported by the convention. And if at the same time the independence law is revised so as to embody the economic terms the Filipinos desire and to give sanction to whatever political changes are made in the constitution, the work of overhauling will be practically complete.

It may be pointed out that a Philippine mission, after having accepted the first independence law, was disowned in Manila and the law rejected. This will not, however, be repeated this time. In a manner of speaking, the articulate portion of the Filipino people may be said to have been passed. Manuel Quezon has prepared the grounds for whatever exigency might arise in Washington. Of course, this does not mean that the mission will do any such bold thing for certain. It may, in fact, do nothing at all, and what a pity that would be, with the stage all set for a grand climax!

Five From Capital On Opera Group

Will Help Arrange Jubilee for Walter Damrosch.

Five Washingtonians, identified prominently in local music circles, were named yesterday to a national committee, which will arrange a golden jubilee for Walter Damrosch, widely-known opera and symphony orchestra conductor of New York.

The celebration will be in the form of a gala performance April 12 in the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Dreams Come True!

HE'S back, bigger and better than ever, one of the most romantic figures of what we have so wittingly called the revolution, back for his second triumphant tour, Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell himself. This writer, thank goodness, was one who didn't see the need for solicitude about this gentleman in the inconspicuous role he has played the past six months. While there was every evidence he had been consigned to oblivion there always lurked in my mind the suspicion he would bound back.

BARGERON.

Particularly did it seem the wind had been taken out of his sails, when in a recent speech at Chicago he could go no further in provocativeness than the astonishing statement about our having come to the conclusion that one-half of the population must support the other half. This sounded amazing at first and one wondered what he was up to now, until one read further and saw that he meant the parents must support the children.

When we consider how provocative he had been before this seemed a low in provocativeness and the conclusion had to be that he had been stepped upon.

It develops now, however, that instead of being stepped upon he is to have the spending of the greatest single portion of the $5,000,000,000 legacy which Mr. Roosevelt is shortly to get from Congress.

* * * *

Horatio Alger in his most optimistic frame of mind could not have conceived such a story as revolves around this fellow. When he was in college, or maybe it was afterward, anyway it was when he was pounding on his breast and daring the world to come on, he exclaimed enthusiastically: "I will roll up my sleeves and make the world over."

Well, now, Mr. Roosevelt is going to give him $950,000,000 or so and turn him loose on a good portion of the United States!

He is to have charge, it is understood, of the soil erosion work, of the whole Mississippi valley project of reforestation, flood control, farm rehabilitation, rural electrification and whatnot. It is to be his kingdom and he is to have at least $950,000,000 to do his stuff. Under the provisions of the bill Mr. Roosevelt can add to that amount just about as much as he wants to. The sky, apparently, is the real limit.

* * * *

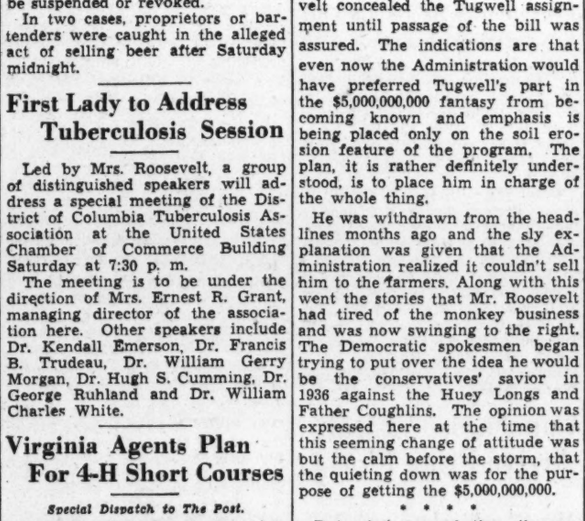
Equal to the romance of the story is the cuteness with which it was put over, with which Mr. Roosevelt concealed the Tugwell assignment until passage of the bill was assured. The indications are that even now the Administration would have preferred Tugwell's part in the $5,000,000,000 fantasy from becoming known and emphasis is being placed only on the soil erosion feature of the program. The plan, it is rather definitely understood, is to place him in charge of the whole thing.

He was withdrawn from the headlines months ago and the sly explanation was given that the Administration realized it couldn't sell him to the farmers. Along with this went the stories that Mr. Roosevelt had tired of the monkey business and was now swinging to the right. The Democratic spokesmen began trying to put over the idea he would be the conservatives' savior in 1936 against the Huey Longs and Father Coughlins. The opinion was expressed here at the time that this seeming change of attitude was but the calm before the storm, that the quieting down was for the purpose of getting the $5,000,000,000.

* * * *

But what a good time the enthusiastic young Brain Truster will have. He won't be able to make over the whole world, but he should be able to make over the topography and contour of a sizable part of the United States. He will be able to remove populations from this place to that and set up such little cities as only his poetic heart could desire, to run streams through the pastures and stock the pastures with cows, or his ideas of cows, and to traverse and encircle the whole with bright-hued electric trains.

It is to be his own wonderland, his conception of what the world should be, the dreams of his earlier years come true! And he won't really have to roll up his sleeves.



"I slipped some sleeping powders in their coffee this morning!"

No End of Books

"Cabins In The Laurel" Gives Delightful Picture Of Mountain People In North Carolina.

By Theodore Hall.

"A MOUNTAIN man," writes Muriel Earley Sheppard, "will hardly slave through a sunny spring day when he longs to enjoy the weather in order that he may take a vacation in the same sunshine somewhere else later on. His affairs are not so pressing. As soon as he thinks of it, he will probably pick up a chair, tilt it back against the sunny side of the house, tip his hat down over his eyes, and start in on the business of enjoying the day."

Don't ask me why I chose that as the text for today's excursion with a book. But the attractiveness we can all find in those words is a quality which Mrs. Sheppard spreads from cover to cover in her beguiling, intimate book of mountain life —"Cabins in the Laurel" (University of North Carolina Press, $3). The wife of a mining engineer, Mrs. Sheppard accompanied him into the Toe River Valley—out in the western tip of North Carolina, a high, remote little region just under the Tennessee border, bordered by the Blue Ridge, the Iron Mountains and the Black Mountains capped by Mount Mitchell, the highest east of the Rockies. There, in that little cul de sac pretty well untouched since the last westward migration passed in 1850, she made friends with the people. Not "mountaineers"—they detest that "furrin" term—but "hill people" or "mountain folk."

One year she brought back a photographer named Bayard Wooten, and the 128 full-page photographs which illustrate this book are among the most breathlessly interesting and beautiful I've ever seen. They picture the very mountain or hillside we're reading about, or the very characters—Uncle Milt Pendley, who won't make a chair at all because he doesn't "feel fur to make chairs" (he makes tables); Aunt Polly Boone, who says she's Daniel Boone's great-granddaughter, and who's lost count how old she is; Doc Hoppas, of Brushy Creek, who tells a story or sings a song as easy as rolling off a log; and any number of others, as rich and grand as ever you met. Text and pictures, the book sets us right down by the Toe River.

* * * *

I HAVEN'T meant to give you the impression that the valley is as inviolate as Lhassa. The railroad came through a quarter century ago; concrete roads run in; the little town of Spruce Pine thrives on the mica mines which have been going since the '70s. And—even more sobering item—Doc Hoppas sang at the World's Fair in '33.

I dare say, touring through and stopping for gas in the valley, you'd see very little of what Mrs. Sheppard records. But half a mile off the concrete, down a dirt road to the branch, the mountain people still boil their washing kettle in the open, make up a fine potent mash, take snuff (especially the women), salt hams away, and believe that the very worst thing you can do to bring on bad luck is to turn a chair on one leg.

Once, not ten years ago, I was breezing along a cement road in northern Maine by means of the explosive effect of gasoline atoms in six steel cylinders; and I glanced into a little clearing and saw, in the door of a log cabin, an old woman working an honest-to-gosh spinning wheel. Down in the Toe River Valley there's the same view of two worlds. One of the funniest yarns in the book is about the sale of an automobile. Or rather, attempted sale. For Bill Garvey went up Bald Creek to sell Abe McClung a Chevie. Abe was known to have sales resistance, so Bill took along some corn. When the fog cleared next morning Bill found his back seat full of hens and turkeys. Instead of buying the car, Abe had sold Bill everything on the place, including the hog.

* * * *

MRS. SHEPPARD tells us, through research, through the tales of the old-timers, a great deal of the early days. Prime mystery of the valley are the mine shafts at least 300 years old, thought to be dug for silver by Spaniards from Florida. In the revolution the mountain men came down in the flat country and fought. In the Civil War a Union officer, prisoner of the South, was aided in his escape; later he came back to Toe River and helped start the mica mine. Old men like Uncle Zack McHone recall the days of Johnson's army in the West—others, the full flavor of pioneer life: log cabins, wolves under the floor, and "painters" in the clearing.

Today there are the courthouse days, the country fair, the revival meetings, the quiltings and church picnics for festival. And for daily life, a style of upright, hospitable, and altogether native ways which Mrs. Sheppard sets down with accuracy and friendliness. "Light and hitch," says the mountain man when he sees you. "Come home with me," is his formal phrase of good-by—and he means it.

And if you think their life is drab, Mrs. Sheppard will correct you. Read her description of mountain courtin' and sparkin'—"an occupation that can engage a mountain man's undivided interest." I've room for but one item, which will show how a coquette is regarded in the mountains. It's in the rough verse with which they like to tell their stories, and recites the saga of a girl who went around with two men until one of them found her sparkin' with the other:

"Tracy knew all he wanted to know.
He stepped into view and drew his gun.
McGirk whipped out another one.
A moment thus. The tension mounted.
Every heartbeat could be counted.
An answering look in the two men's eyes.
She had fooled them both with a passel of lies.
She screamed and backed against a tree.
Both men fired simultaneously.
And killed each other? I reckon not!
They stuck together. The girl was shot."

Seared by the current of a high-tension wire touched while at work for the Pennsylvania Railroad at Second and I streets northeast late yesterday, Thomas E. Sherrill, 40, of Baltimore, assistant line foreman, was killed.

Sherrill was at work in a tower atop a car when the accident occurred. Witnesses told police he inadvertently touched the wire, and was hurled backward to the tracks 20 feet below.

Police took Sherrill to the Emergency Hospital, where he died 20 minutes later without regaining consciousness. Physicians said the victim has relatives living in Davidson, N. C.

Drunken Driving

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

ONE of Henry Ford's reasons for believing in prohibition when for a time it seemed possible to enforce it, was that we are all living in a machine age. The moment one steps out of one's house one is in danger of death or accident. People under the influence of anything that obscures their vision or their judgment are a terrible menace to the community.

Should such persons be punished? Without further discussion, I quote the following news item from the London, England, Morning Post for January 29:

DOCTOR DRIVER FINED 154 POUNDS

Dangerous Driving When Drunk Banned for Life.

Dr. William Graham, aged 33, of Manor road, Tynemouth, was fined 154 pounds at Newcastle yesterday and disqualified for life from holding a driving license.

He pleaded guilty to five allegations. These, and the fines inflicted, were:

Being, under the influence of drink to such an extent as to be incapable of having proper control of a motor car in Grey street, Newcastle, 30 pounds.

Driving in a dangerous manner at the same time, £50.

Driving in a dangerous manner in Pilgrim street, Newcastle, £50.

Failing to stop after an accident, £2.

Failing to conform to a traffic signal, £2.

He was also ordered to pay 15 pounds 11 shilling 6 pence costs.

It was stated for the prosecution that Graham's car ran into the rear of a stationary car, turned into a main street against a traffic signal and collided with another stationary car.

Mr. F. J. Lambert (defending) said that Graham was ill and had only two drinks that night.

Stabilization Still Scares New Dealers

So Ambassador Bingham's Mild Plea In Favor Of "Understanding" Is Spiked.

By Elliott Thurston.

PRECISELY why the Administration should be at pains to make clear that Ambassador Bingham was merely fanning the air again when he once more urged an understanding with the British on "stabilizing" the dollar and the pound sterling is another of the day's conundrums. The answer, if there is any at all, is that the word "stabilization" has taken on all the mystic meanings of some dread tabu so far as this Administration is concerned.

That is, it seems to have become a word loaded with political dynamite in the opinion of the New Deal. Of course, the inflationists, and the Committee for the Nation, tear their hair at the mere mention of it. But even these excitable elements might be cooled off and calmed down long enough to grasp the point that nobody, including the Ambassador, is proposing to enter into a final, irrevocable bargain with the British to fix permanent parities between the dollar and the pound. Nobody is proposing to rush back to the old-fashioned gold standard. Doubtless the British are altogether against that.

All that the Ambassador suggested was a mere "understanding," with the British, and why that should be thought so horrific as to elicit off-the-record but none the less official denials from New Dealers on this side of the sea is wholly baffling to mere laymen. There may be some occult, undiscovered or at least undisclosed reason why it is thought undesirable to have an understanding. If so, the reason does not seem to have occurred to experts and economists—or both—on the outside of the Treasury.

* * * *

ON the contrary it now appears to be the unanimous view, among the people who ought to know, that the greatest thing the New Deal could do at the moment to promote confidence and recovery would be to have just such an understanding, subject to such future revision as circumstances, pclitical, economic, or both, including possible and probable revaluation of the French franc, may require.

Rather the absence of understanding serves only to perpetuate and intensify confusion, and nobody has yet come forth to offer any cogent argument as to why the absence of understanding is of benefit either to the United States or to Great Britain. If currency competition and warfare—the race for zero—is good, then that is an argument, but surely nobody of sound mind thinks that.

The British have done about all they can do domestically to recover. Their own leaders agree that they must look to the outside world to hold and extend their gains. There are groups in London as there are over here who want to devalue some more. The British inflationists want the pound at $4.50 or $4.25. Ours want to cut the gold content of the dollar down the full legal limit of 50 per cent of the old parity —though how they are going to make the domestic dollar decline correspondingly with their gold content cutting not even Prof. Warren seems to know.

At all events, just what is to be gained by this sort of tinkering now is beyond the comprehension of monetary authorities. The magicians may know. But leaving them out, the other experts appear to be agreed that there is nothing in competitive currency cutting except chaos.

* * * *

BY its very terms competitive depreciation of currencies in foreign exchanges quickly cancels out whatever transient, trade advantages may be momentarily gained by the leader in this race for zero. The by-product of the whole process is demoralization and more dislocation of world trade. This particular form of insanity would not require even passing mention were it not for the fact that the only plausible reason against having an "understanding" is to leave everybody free to indulge in monetary manias.

All the unhappy Ambassador to London urged was an understanding, by which, no doubt, he meant an absence of the present misunderstanding. That does not mean that we would tie our hands, or that the British would tie theirs, forever after. It does not mean that if the French fall or are pushed off their lonely gold eminence that we or the British could not readjust to new conditions if we or they or both of us wished.

All it would mean would be that we understand each other and if possible where we are respectively headed, in case anybody knows. Even if policy and purpose are a complete blank we could agree to steady the dollar and pound until we found out where we wanted to go. Just why that much understanding should frighten New Dealers into disclaiming and discounting, not to say discrediting their own ambassador, is too much for most mortals to understand.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Charge d'Affaires of Egypt, Nicholas Khalil Bey, entertained at a reception last night in celebration of the birthday anniversary of Fuad I, King of Egypt. The bright green of the Egyptian flag, with its slender, white crescent centered with three stars, floated over the imposing legation on Massachusetts avenue as hundreds of members of diplomatic, official and residential society paid their respects to the representative of the King.

Spring flowers in pastel shades decorated the drawing room, and a huge bowl of the same flowers formed the centerpiece for the long buffet in the dining room.

Glimpsed among the guests were Mrs. Cordell Hull, just back from a brief vacation in Atlantic City, and wearing a smart costume of navy blue with a wide-brimmed straw hat; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, also recently returned from the seaside resort; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings in a costume of black, with a large black hat banded with white; young Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Dern, son and daughter-in-law of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dern, the bride wearing a dark blue tailored suit with a small hat.

Luncheon Party Guests to Hear Doris Doe Sing

Opera Star Will Appear at Function Honoring Mrs. Roosevelt.

Doris Doe, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will sing at a luncheon to be given in honor of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at the Congressional Club April 29.

Miss Doe was acclaimed when she appeared as soloist February 10 with the Washington Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Hans Kindler.

The attractive young American singer was born in Bar Harbor, Me., and when still a child moved with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Watson Doe, to Palm Beach, Fla. While there she sang in the choir of the church of Bethesda-by-the-Sea, and later became the protege of Sidney Homer, who, with Mrs. Louise Homer, winters in that resort.

After appearing with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the Minneapolis Symphony and the New York Oratorio Society, Miss Doe went abroad for further study. Gatti-Cassaza wired her to come to Italy for an audition and the hearing resulted in a contract with the world famous opera company. In 1932 she made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera in New York in the role of Brangaene in "Tristan und Isolde."

On April 30 Mrs. Chester C. Bolton, wife of Representative Bolton, will entertain at luncheon for Miss Doe.

Women of the West Characterized By Sincerity and Independence

Traits Traced To Traditions By Mrs. Eccles

The Indomitable Spirit of Pioneers Still Exists, She Believes.

How are the differences of the North, South, East and West reflected in the personalities of the women from these sections? This is the second in a series of articles on this subject.

By Frances Mangum.

ONE THINKS of French women with sparkling eyes, Hawaiian dancers with mobile hips, and Western women as sincere, courageous, and independent.

Mrs. Marriner Eccles, wife of the governor of the Federal Reserve Board, while protesting general classifications, believes the "majority" of Western women do possess these traits.

"For 23 years," she said, "I've lived in Utah, and while I was much too busy to stand off and view life and people with detachment, now that I think of it women there as a rule are extremely sincere. Some people might say too sincere, but naturally I don't think so.

"If they like you, they're perfectly honest and straightforward about it. But if they don't like you, they leave you alone."

"They certainly don't waste time lavishing sugary sweetness.

Proximity to Nature.

"Just why this should be, I'm not certain. Perhaps one's proximity to nature has something to do with it. You know in Ogden we virtually have mountains and canyons in our back yards and as for getting out into the open spaces, it's a matter of five or ten minutes' drive. Here, it seems to me, there is little chance for solitude. It's very difficult to escape completely from the hurry and bustle and find a spot where you can actually feel alone. I can't help but believe that such things do affect people and are responsible, to a large extent, for many of the traits and characteristics we associate with Western women."

Among other important factors that play a part in the personality make-up of Western women, Mrs. Eccles gives the traditions of the West a prominent place. In her opinion the indomitable spirit of the first pioneers still survives.

"Western women, whether or not they are descendants of pioneers, are still motivated by the traditional courage and independence," she asserted. "Another trait which might be traced to the same source is friendliness.

Cordiality Remains Law.

"This spirit has its roots in the history of a century past. The early settlers were dependent on their own small groups for entertainment or on infrequent visitors from the outside. It naturally came about that cordiality was the law of the land and it has been so ever since. Why, to be cold and hostile to people out there would seem almost traitorous!"

This spirit has resulted in the lack of formality commonly associated with Western people, Mrs. Eccles believes.

"Out there," she continued, "girls seldom ever make their debut. It is considered unnecessary. They're virtually presented when they're born, and that's all there is to it. As for chauffeurs, why if you don't drive your own car people think you're sick."

Camaraderie is started among the young people at an early age, she said, and is bound to leave its imprint on their character.

Natural in All Contacts.

Boys and girls for the most part are educated in the same schools and come to accept one another with very little sex consciousness, or, as Mrs. Eccles puts it, "aren't a bit silly over each other."

She believes this would explain why women from the West are generally regarded as natural in all their contacts with both men and women.

Another attribute Mrs. Eccles accredited to the typical Western woman was openmindedness.

"In the West," she said, "there is still some feeling of newness and it is this that keeps women open-minded and interested in all the cultural things that come their way."

She explained that in Utah, for instance, one had very little opportunity for concerts and operas, but that whenever there was a chance men and women both flocked from long distances to attend.

Interested in Current Topics.

"In almost all the small towns," she said, "you'll find the women gathering themselves into study groups. They love discussions that throw new light on old subjects, or new subjects themselves. They're vitally interested in what's going on not only in their own community but all over the world."

These small study groups, Mrs. Eccles said, are proof that the Western woman scouts provincialism, that she is well versed in many things and always eager to learn more.

What is the "New England type?" Find the answer in tomorrow's Post in the third article of this series.

Underwood & Underwood.

Sincerity, wholesomeness, frankness and naturalness are four of the qualities attributed to the typical Western woman by Mrs. Marriner Eccles, wife of the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

Radio Speaker Says Learning Begins at 40

NEW YORK, March 26.—Learning begins at 40 for the American woman, said Mrs. Moses P. Epstein, national vice president of Hadassah, the woman's Zionist organization of America, in a radio broadcast here today.

"The age of 40 brings to the woman of today new opportunities, new leisure and new freedom, which make this period of her life an enviable one," Mrs. Epstein said. "With a full experience behind her, and in possession of her vitality, she is ripe to enjoy the varying facets of the contemporary scene and to absorb the new thoughts and new reactions which make this world we live in such a stirring and exciting place.

"Woman's energies, her potential effectiveness in large affairs, set free by modern inventions for the home, and an economic system based on mass production, have been diverted in large measure to movements for social betterment and for self-improvement. In nearly all cases these two are allied, for in woman's preoccupation with those movements which carry her outside the limits of her home, it is inevitable that as a valuable by-product there comes the greater knowledge and understanding of those outside forces that affect the special project with which she is concerned."

Mrs. Epstein said that in the last few years there had developed a renaissance of learning among the Jewish women of America and that they were seeking a fuller understanding of the culture and history of their race.

"Thousands of American Jewish women," she said, "are studying Hebrew, Jewish history and literature and the origin and meaning of traditional Jewish customs."

Slums Being Replaced by Model Apartments As Result of PWA Low-Rent Housing Program

Work Is Going Forward on Buildings in 30 U. S. Cities.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

SLUMS will soon be the show places in American cities. Ramshackle tenements with the family wash strung in front of meager windows are being replaced by model apartment houses set in spacious gardens as a result of the low-rent housing program of the Housing Division of the PWA.

Within a short time it will be possible for a family earning as little as $15 a week to live in light, airy rooms with modern plumbing, electric lights, heat, hot and cold running water. Some of the new apartments will even have electric refrigeration. Yet these comfortable living quarters will be within reach of families now huddled in one or two dark, unventilated rooms with little or no plumbing.

Work of constructing the new low-rent housing units is going forward in approximately 30 cities, including Atlanta, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Chicago, New York, Montgomery, Cincinnati, Detroit, Louisville.

The plan of the housing division calls for the apartments to bring in monthly rentals ranging from $5 to $7 a room. This price will include gas, lights, heat, water, and will be very little higher than the price tenement dwellers are now paying for insanitary, unhealthful living quarters.

How Expense Will Be Met.

Naturally these low rentals will not cover the cost of the new apartment buildings' maintenance and operation. But the bulk of this expense will be met, the housing division believes, through doing away with slums, the most costly areas in the whole United States.

These blighted residential sections not only absorb far more than their share of fire and police protection and municipal hospitalization, but also breed disease and go a long way toward filling prisons, reformatories and insane asylums. It is estimated that the sum saved when tenements are replaced by fireproof buildings where families can live decently will be sufficient to meet the cost of operating the fine new buildings.

Special plans have been worked out by architects so families can get the maximum service out of their new homes. Every apartment will be laid out so one person can sleep in the living room and can have access to the kitchen and bathroom without passing through a bedroom occupied by another person. All the rooms will have large windows and every entrance hall will have a clothes closet. In the grounds surrounding the apartment houses there will be playgrounds for children who now play in cluttered streets and alleys of the slums.

Selection of tenants to live in the new buildings will be based on their needs and their ability to pay the rent. Families whose incomes are large enough to permit them to live in privately owned apartment houses will not be eligible to live in those constructed by the housing division in slum sections.

Here's the tenement of the future. Buildings similar to this are to be built on the site of today's slums by the housing division of the PWA. The one illustrated is actually a diorama, made in the Frank J. MacKenzie studio.

Monthly Rentals Will Range From $5 to $7 a Room.

This business of selecting tenants is one of the most difficult problems in the whole low-rent housing program, the housing division admits. About the only other problem that equals it is the teaching of persons who have lived for years in sordid surroundings to appreciate and take care of clean, well-built rooms.

Undoubtedly there will be some trouble with families trying to raise chickens in the bathtub and putting their overshoes in the electric refrigerator. But the housing division believes this difficulty can be smoothed out by having a woman collect the rents at the door every week. She will tactfully gain entrance to the apartment and will then be able to inspect the place and to advise the family in a kindly manner on how to take care of the home.

And when all the low-rent housing units are completed the housing division believes that hackneyed and misunderstood phrase, "American standard of living," will take on a new and significant meaning. Today the phrase to most persons stands for homes with adequate plumbing, a radio in every living room and a car in every garage. Yet a recent survey of 64 cities by the housing division shows that 23 per cent of all urban dwellings have neither bath tubs nor showers; 9 per cent lack electricity or gas for lighting; 8 per cent have no running water. These deplorable conditions will be swept away as the slums are replaced by model apartment houses.

Business Girls' Make-Up Aided By Office Kits

Package Holds All Essentials for Quick, Thorough Freshening.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE BUSINESS woman has long since abolished the idea that tweeds, stiff white collars, a knot on the back of her head and horn-rimmed specs accentuate her value in a professional way. You have only to look about you to see that she who punches the time clock is as attractive and well groomed as the woman who sips her chocolate at 11 in the morning. Perhaps her methods are not the same, but in numbers of cases we must concede they're just as successful.

But just how does this busy woman keep her nose from shining and her make-up from looking stale? The answer lies to a large extent in one of the convenient little "office kits" put out by a large cosmetic firm and featured in a local store.

The package, which holds all the essentials for a quick and thorough make-up, is just large enough to slip into the average desk drawer.

It contains a box of powder (you choose your shade), a cream rouge, which is excellent for both cheeks and lips, and gives you that perfectly matched effect, an all-round cream, which serves both as a cleanser and a powder base, a nourishing cream, which you are likely to need if your skin is dry, and a skin freshener for erasing the fatigue of the work day.

This little kit is all that's needed to keep you looking like a million dollars from 9 in the morning till the clock strikes time to go. It costs very little, and represents one of the best investments the business woman can make.

Many women have found it an ideal little package to carry with them on their week-end trips, for it's easy to pack and serves every cosmetic need.

Sweaters Popular.

Since the feminine note continues to reverberate through styledom, the lacy, cuddly, little sweaters, new arrivals in a local store, are the last word in what to wear to look the pink of perfection.

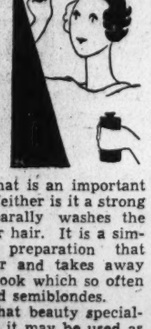
They are loosely knitted from a zephyr wool that weighs about as much as a spring breeze. Puff sleeves make them devastatingly girlish. There are two styles, one with a chic little turn-over collar, and another with a square neck. All of them have a deep waistband that insures a snug fit—which is essential to a really smart sweater.

Not only are they adapted in style to all types, but they also exercise a wide appeal in color, since they come in eleven soft, lovely shades.

For Golden Locks.

They say that the platinum blonde craze is on the decline, and the honest-to-goodness, golden-haired blonde is coming into her own again. But alack, there are few blondes who may claim really golden locks.

There are many who would like to and who try by using bleaches to lighten dull, dead looking hair. But with what success? Nine times out of ten these bleaches dry the hair and make it wispy and strawlike.



That's why blondes should give a wholesale welcome to a certain hair lightener which is the pride and joy of a French beauty house. It is not a dye. That is an important thing to know. Neither is it a strong bleach that litearally washes the color out of your hair. It is a simple efficacious preparation that lightens the hair and takes away the washed out look which so often mars blondes and semiblondes.

So safe is it that beauty specialists will tell you it may be used as frequently as you desire without harming your hair in the slightest.

Women who are disturbed by the first signs of gray find that this preparation, while not actually coloring the gray hairs, make them less conspicuous.

Telephone Accessory.

Dachshunds may be in the spotlight at dog shows, but it's still the little Scottie who is the favorite model for bookends, statuettes, etc. Only recently he was called upon to pose for a designer of little gadgets who was drawing his plans for a new telephone accessory. It is completed now and displayed in a local store.

The Scottie stands on a stone base seeming to guard a pencil which stands in a holder by his side, or in some cases is held by the Scottie himself. This tricky little affair is ideal for a telephone table because it is both ornamental and practical.

There are several types of these ranging from 50 cents to $1.

Summer Aid.

With spring now turning the corner and warmer weather already here, the discriminating woman is turning her attention to deodorants.

There are so many kinds that doubtless she is in a quandary which to select.

Why not the deordorant compact? This looks very much like an ordinary compact with its cake of powder and downy puff, but there's this difference: The powder kills perspiration odors, and even tends to check perspiration.

It's the handiest kind of little affair, for you can carry it with you wherever you go and be protected at all times.

Daytime Design Suitable For Morning or Sports Wear

Pattern No. 812.

HERE is a daytime design that is equally suitable for morning wear or active sports. The inverted pleat in the blouse back permits freedom with broom or golf club. The simple collar and tie and the inset vestee are just tailored enough for a workmanlike look.

If you make this dress for sports wear, choose a linen, tie-silk, gingham or washable crepe. For a morning frock, a novelty cotton, pique or seersucker would be suitable. This pattern is cut in sizes 12 to 20, 30 to 38. It is guaranteed to be accurately sized and perfectly cut. Size 16 (34) requires 3⅛ yards of 39-inch fabric and ribbon for the bow.

Luncheon Menu Of Soup, Salad Sure to Please

Both Offer Possibilities in Choice of Breads and Beverages.

By Dorothea Duncan.

PIGEONHOLE the old winter luncheon menus for they won't be in very great demand for months to come. The pattern in noonday food must now conform to spring. Try the soup and salad combination. It isn't new, but it affords numerous possibilities. First of all, this type of luncheon will find favor whether the day brings sunshine or rain. Then, too, both soups and salads offer the use of many attractive accompaniments in the shape of breads and beverages.

Soup won't be a problem of kitchen work if you choose to buy one of the many top brands supplied by your grocer. These soups are inexpensive, too. They have a home-made kitchen flavor and the variety is almost unlimited.

For your first soup and salad luncheon try the following scheme: Start off with a good hot plate of cream of green pea soup served with croutons. You can make your own croutons, you know, of day-old white bread. Cut the bread in quarter or half-inch cubes. There are three ways in which they may be toasted. Choose the one you like best. The bread may be toasted to a golden brown on all sides in a hot oven, it may be sauteed in a small amount of butter until browned evenly on all sides or it may be dipped into hot, deep fat and fried until the proper shade of brown.

Wire Basket Helpful.

If you saute the bread in a bit of butter, be sure that the butter does not burn and thus impart an unpleasant flavor to the toasted bread. If you are frying them in deep fat, use a wire basket to lower them into the kettle and be sure that your fat is about 390 degrees Fahrenheit. The fat must be hot so that the bits of bread will brown quickly and not absorb the fat. Drain the croutons fried in deep fat on absorbent paper.

Serve a fruit platter next. Use this combination of fresh and canned fruits, or one of your own selection if you prefer. Center a slice of canned pineapple in the middle of your salad plate and top it with a plump prune which has been cooked, chilled and stoned. This is an attractive way to use leftover breakfast prunes. Surround the pineapple with groups of the following fruits: A bit of Waldorf salad may be used for one group, sliced bananas flavored with lemon juice for another, and canned, halved apricots and orange slices for the rest. When placing the fruits, be sure that the colored ones divide the white ones so that there will be enough contrast to make the salad appealing to the eye.

Hot breads, muffins, cornbread or biscuits are particularly attractive as a salad accompaniment. When served with butter and preserves or honey they make dessert unnecessary. Milk is the best beverage for the everyday family luncheon.

Serve Toast With Salad.

When crackers accompany the soup, toast will be popular with the salad course. Cinnamon toast is always a favorite if fruit salad is served. If you aren't satisfied with your way of making cinnamon toast try it this way: Cut the bread—day-old bread will toast better—into half-inch slices. Remove the crusts and cut into one-inch strips. Toast the bread until the desired shade of brown and dip in melted butter. Roll the buttered strips in a mixture of cinnamon and granulated sugar and serve at once while piping hot.

Just the addition of an attractive dessert will turn the soup and salad luncheon from an everyday affair into one that will be suitable for company. The ever-popular fudge square, which is merely a block of devil's food cake topped with rich chocolate frosting, is an especially appetizing dessert to wind up the luncheon of this type.

THREE MEN AND DIANA

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Diana Carmichael lived with her poverty-stricken grandmother and knew little happiness until she fell in love with wealthy Bruce Palmer. He did not return her affection, and went abroad to live. She married Neal Tressady, movie actor, who later left her, eloping with Deidre Dean, a screen star. After the divorce, Bruce returned and Diana married him, secretly because his family would object and his father was desperately ill. They discovered after some time that the minister who performed the ceremony was an imposter. One day she went to a polo match, in which Bruce played, and was cut by his friends.

DIANA decided suddenly to go home. She could leave a little note in Bruce's car; he'd understand. The day had turned bleak, and the game was almost over.

She made her way slowly across the neighboring knees; turned at the rail and walked slowly across the grass toward the gates. A stir among the spectators—the great gasp of a crowd shocked and fearful—arrested her, and Diana stopped, looking back.

The ponies were all in a knot; she saw a man jump down, drive his mount away from him with a blow on its flank; plunge into the struggling confusion of men and horses. Another horse limped free, galloped a hundred feet away, stood still, his bridle dragging. There was gasping and muttering from the spectators now: "He's hurt! Oh, he's hurt! Who is it? The horse kicked him and rolled on him! Poor fellow—he's hurt!" The sound of frightened voices went through the air like a wave.

Bruce Was Hurt.

Still the knot of men and horses, clotted together there on the green grass, under the darkening spring sky, moved little. A man ran from it toward the sheds and the clubroom where the polo players gathered before and after the game; after a moment another man ran, too. A youth leaped along in front of the grand stand cupping his hands to shout up at the banked audience: "Doctor! Doctor! It's Palmer! He's badly hurt!"

Diana heard it, but heard it like another woman, of some man she barely knew. The name said something to her—not much. Palmer was badly hurt. She went toward a gate in the white-railed fence.

A policeman stopped her.

"You can't go over there, lady. They're taking him to the hospital."

"Was he badly hurt?"

"You can phone the hospital, lady."

Killed Instantly.

Patsy and Joan and some men went by her; talked urgently to the policeman. Then they were through the line—Joan and her husband and Patsy and Connie—and were running full speed toward the place where Bruce had gone down. The policeman did not stop them.

"He's dead, he was instantly killed," voices were saying all about her, Diana thought for one moment that if Bruce were dead she would like to kneel down beside him and kiss just once the brown firm cheek she had so loved to kiss. Connie could do that, and he had not even liked Connie!

But she felt weak and sick; she was afraid of policemen and their positive voice. She would not dare get into that crowd; it would do no good anyway to kiss him, with all of them staring at her.

She went to her car.

Some persons, men and women, were settling themselves in the next car.

"Wasn't that frightful, the man getting killed?" one of the women said. "Poor fellow—everything to live for!"

A Son Was Born.

Diana's body was weak; her voice was weak. But the passion of love and pity and protectiveness that encompassed Michael, her son, was stronger than any feeling she had ever known before.

Reaching the Juliets, the cheap apartment she had taken following her father's journey South, she enlisted the help of a casual schoolboy who was thundering down the stairs, with his skates banging, mad for escape into the September afternoon sunshine.

The boy took her suitcase, and she, following him slowly, breathing hard above the bundled baby, up to the familiar dark doorway, stumbled inside, gave the boy his dime. Would he—wait a minute—would be bring her a—yet, a quart of milk, and a loaf of bread some time later? Anytime?

She sat spent, panting. The baby, unrolling himself on the bed by a series of desperate kicks, wailed desolately. Diana wiped her forehead, gulped, looked at him apathetically.

It was a quarter to 4, and he would probably cry like this all night, all tomorrow. He would have to be bathed, changed and fed—aired—it was impossible. A baby took all one woman's time; he never could be left alone, and she had no money and no way of earning any.

After a while she took off her coat, loosened her clothing, and in the cold, empty, dusty place sat down with the child in her arms. He drank ravenously, and Diana's slow tears slid down her smiling face as she looked at his little eager one, confident, bold, preoccupied.

The thought that he might ever be cold or hungry or kept waiting for his food made her heart stand still. She must eat something, she must somehow live.

Later she heated milk, cut rounds from fresh bread. There was no butter, but there was salt; she found herself hungry. The little flat was incredibly desolate; it was not believable that human beings had been housed there so short a time ago—ten days ago.

Michael cried in the night, piteously, heartbrokenly, and Diana, shaking with cold and fright, murmuring: "Hush, sweetheart—hush, my darling."

He was comforted, slept. But before Diana, shuddering beside him, could get to sleep, he was awake again, wailing. And this time, he cried for an hour.

The days, the nights proceeded like a dreadful dream. Diana was always alone, her eyes haggard from want of sleep, her hands chapped from washing, her mind and soul poisoned with fear.

A letter came from her father; Diana tore it open eagerly. Ah, if there had been a ten-dollar bill inside—even a five-dollar bill. But there was no money. There was instead the news that her father was not coming back for a while; he had met some old friends, men called Kirk and Phil, and a woman called Babe, and they were going to drive to New Mexico.

Diana left Michael in the kitchen downstairs, with the Foy baby, and walked slowly to the Chatterton home, and talked to Miss Priest.

Miss Priest let her look at the babies there; warm and safe and contented enough, they seemed. Their mothers could see them on Sunday afternoons, after they were a year old.

"After they are a year old?" Her soft, sweet, round little scrap of a Michael was just three weeks toward his first birthday.

"It wouldn't be safe, before that, Mrs. Palmer. They're so sensitive to infection, we couldn't let the mothers in."

"And when—when could I bring him?"

"I'd have to let you know when you can bring him. We're full up now, and I've two babies waiting. But we think our adorable Tony is going home. He's a little Italian boy—we all just adore him. I'd have to let you know. But you will fill out a card.

Father's name, Bruce Palmer, deceased. Nationality of grand-parents. Age in years, months, days. Her darling—her darling was being written down: "age," 21 days.

"Oh, the grandparents are living?"

"Yes." A pause.

"They couldn't help out a little."

"They're rich," Diana said simply. "But they won't recognize my marriage."

"But I should think," Miss Priest suggested in her bright, helpful, sympathetic way—"I should think we could persuade them—the baby's grandparents—that's the dignified—the fair thing to do——"

She paused.

"They don't question the paternity, I suppose?"

The blood come into Diana's pale face, an odd glint in her eye.

"No. They knew that Bruce and I were—were man and wife."

"Were living as man and wife," the social worker substituted dispassionately. "Then they know that the baby is their grandchild, and there's some question of the marriage. It seems to me I'd see them, Mrs. Palmer, and see if their hearts wouldn't soften. Sometimes baby hands——"

All or Nothing.

"Oh, they'd take the baby," Diana said, in the silence.

"They'd take him? Oh, well, then—my dear——"

Miss Priest made a penciled note. "Will you come back and see me tomorrow?"

Diana, rising, nodded toward the filled blanks.

"You'll not—I'm afraid of them, the Palmers. You won't get in touch with them without talking to me?"

"Oh, no, my dear. All our records are strictly confidential."

Diana went away. She knew that she would never go back.

Michael, as if he knew what shadows were drifting above his shabby coverings, his drabby little unironed garments, his downy head, was good that night. He slept for nine straight hours, and Diana awakened, refreshed and hopeful beside him, hardly able to believe that the clock said 7, and autumn dawn was over the city.

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

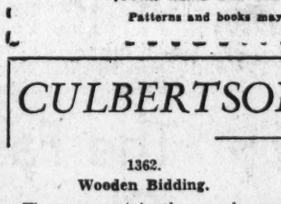
Wooden Bidding.

There are certain players who are very hidebound in their bidding ideas. For instance, it is axiomatic that you can best support your partner's notrump bids when you have a balanced hand with your strength scattered over the four suits. There are times, however, when it is not only necessary but almost compulsory to raise your partner's notrump bid, even though you have a singleton or conceivably a void in your hand, when the previous bidding shows your partner must have the opposing suit well stopped. There is one player I know who with two five-card suits has never been known to let his partner play a notrump contract. This of course is the height of woodenness. After you have shown your distribution and your partner still wishes to play notrump, you must let him play there.

Give Way.

Today's hand is an illustration of a similar principle. One of the players makes a very strong overcall and his partner bids two notrump despite the fact that the partner of the opening bidder raises their suit. The overcaller then must not hesitate to raise his partner to three notrump instead of signing off in his own suit, which many weak players might do. The hand follows:

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable
The bidding:



East	South	West	North
1♠(1)	2♣(2)	2♠(3)	2NT(4)
Pass	3NT(5)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—A minimum opening bid, justifiable in view of the distribution and the fact that the strength is held in the majors.
2—A more than sound overcall. South, however, is not good enough to double for a take-out.
3—A borderline free raise.
4—A sure stopper in the opponents' suit, a sure stopper in one of the other suits, a partial stopper in the third and a fine fitting card in partner's suit justify this call despite the fact that partner has only overcalled and both opponents are bidding.
5—A compulsory bid despite innumerable other calls ranging from the sign-off bid of three clubs to the very strong jump to five clubs would be suggested by weak players. South has more than the strength needed to overcall, even though the overcall was made at the level of two-odd. South knows North has heard the opponents bid and support in spades and still North goes to two notrump. North must have either a double spade stopper or a single spade stopper with a good club fit. South can not merely sign off by rebidding clubs. He can visualize from eight to ten potential tricks at notrump and knows three notrump, at the worst, can not be hurt. Opponents should be able to take three tricks, at least, to defeat a minor game and therefore three notrump is the correct contract.

The Play.

There is no play to the hand. East opened the spade King and declarer took with the Ace in dummy and after running off a round of clubs, claimed nine tricks to fulfill his contract.

What Today Means

"Aries."

IF MARCH 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m. and from 6:45 to 8:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:45 to 10:45 a. m., from 12:45 to 2:45 p. m. and from 4:45 to 6:45 p. m.

Someone may try to impose on you on this date, so be prepared to stand up for your rights. You may be the beneficiary of a generous impulse on the part of a friend, but be careful not to impose on his good nature. Money may come to you in an unexpected manner, either through your exercising your own earning powers, or as a gift.

Business prospects should be unusually promising on this date with the result the average person you meet will be in a very good humor, and responsive to good suggestions. Social contacts are advised, as the mental relaxation you may get through the diversion probably will take your mind off of business or domestic problems, and react favorably.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those with matrimonial aspirations, should be careful a gossiping tongue does not cause them to jump to a wrong conclusion, causing an uncalled for demand for some sort of explanation.

If a woman, and March 27 is your birthday, you are entitled to enjoy life, so do not make yourself a slave to duty. There is such a thing as being over conscientious, and needlessly sacrificing yourself to selfish demands. It is very important that you learn to conserve your energy, and one way is to stop worrying over trifles. Do not think too much about tomorrow, for even if you plan carefully your preparations may be subject to change.

You should possess a great deal of business ability, and have the ability to make money go a long way. Stenography, dress designing, needle work, journalism, as well as teaching, may provide satisfactory ways of earning money. You should be very happy married, as home life is essential for your complete contentment.

The child born on March 27, generally, until it has passed school age, is inclined to want its own way, so a reasonable amount of discipline is important, for the child's own good.

If a man, and March 27 is your natal day, you may advance your own interests, if you do not reject friendly advice too readily. While it is not wise to accept or to believe everything told you, to be overly skeptical is likely to prove poor judgment. Exploration, real estate, or mineral development, electrical engineering, financing, as well as politics, offer lines of activity in which you may successfully engage.

Successful people born March 27: Taylor Lewis, educator.
Francis H. Storer, chemist.
Henry S. Carhart, electrician.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have been married almost two years and am at present employed. I have always felt that marriage means the founding of a home and children, and have always looked forward to the day when I would be a mother. I have quite frequently made these sentiments known to my husband, but he feels that we should not have a child until we have a home of our own, a car, etc.

* * * *

I may be wrong, but I feel that if you wait until these are acquired it will be too late, or the desire for motherhood will have passed. Am I right or wrong and what do you feel is the best solution for this problem? Do you feel that as long as I stay with my husband I will never be able to stop working, or do you feel he might change? HOPEFUL.

Case of Mis-Mating.

DEAR HOPEFUL: Perhaps your husband doesn't like children, and hence doesn't want them; perhaps he is thoroughly selfish and self-centered, and doesn't want to yield the center of the domestic stage to a "bundle from Heaven;" perhaps he is afraid or unwilling to shoulder the adult responsibility of parenthood.

* * * *

Whatever the real reason, it is not entirely a desire for guaranteed economic security for parent and child. That is simply your husband's plausible and subtly incontrovertible way of rationalizing his emotional aversion to having children. You realize, of course, when a person is rationalizing a mental attitude he quite often succeeds in convincing himself as well as his audience of the seeming truth of what he says. He may even believe himself while his audience remains sceptical.

* * * *

Since that is my diagnosis of his attitude, I think it scarcely likely he will ever really want or welcome children. I think it more probable his excuses will alter, to fit changing circumstances; but his aversion will remain fixed and unchanging.

* * * *

In your place I would be very reluctant to thrust fatherhood upon a husband who was not in every way entirely willing to shoulder his half of the mutual responsibility. The economic, social and moral responsibility is heavy enough at best, when cheerfully and mutually shared; but the burden may assume staggering proportions when left with reproachful "I-told-you-so's" upon the mother's shoulders.

* * * *

It would be wiser, in my opinion, to forego altogether the developing experience of motherhood rather than to attempt the adventure with a lagging partner.

* * * *

If you devotedly love your husband you may be willing to resign yourself to a childless marriage in order to keep his companionship; and find in a job or a career, perhaps, partial compensation for the motherhood denied you as his wife.

* * * *

If the urge to motherhood is predominant in your emotional makeup, however, you may prefer to separate and invite opportunity of making a new marriage with some man who shares your point of view on this vitally important question. That is something for you to decide.

* * * *

I should say there was no fundamental compatability existing between a husband and wife who could not get to the bottom of such a disparity in values, and arrive at a mutually acceptable solution or compromise. Either mentally or emotionally, they have no meeting ground. M. H.

HOW to KEEP WELL

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Bedsores.

LONG illnesses are tedious; they tax the patience of the one who is ill and of all those about him. If marked weakness or emaciation is present, unless precautions are observed by nurses and attendants, bedsores may develop. They are painful, cause much discomfort, and occasionally usher in severe complications. Prevention is of prime importance.

As a rule, every one associated with illness will be alert to the prevention of irritation and friction on all parts of the body where pressure may occur or where the very weight of the body may lead to a slowing or blocking of the circulation and hence decreased nourishment of the skin. Ankles, knees, elbows, the shoulder blades and sides of the hips are all possible sites of bedsores. Every precaution must be taken to protect these parts by soft coton or rubber rings held in place by bandages. The weight of bed clothes may be relieved by the use of the well known hoop cradle, made by cutting barrel hoops in half and joining them about 18 inches apart by means of two connecting strips of wood. The feet should be particularly well protected, especially when the patient complains that his feet are cold.

Common irritations in the bed are crumbs, wrinkles in the lower sheet, or moisture. Sometimes bad laundry work is responsible. If a chemical bleach is used, even though the sheet is perfectly clean and sterile, some substance may remain in the fabric that will prove destructive to the skin of an invalid.

Bedsores are caused usually by pressure. Blood is driven out of the skin, the capillaries are only partially filled, and the area is deprived of needed nutrition. Eventually, the skin breaks down and partially digests or dissolves away, leaving a red, weeping surface. Anything that interferes with circulation or nutrition of the part, particularly if the nerve supply is deficient, may bring about this condition. Bedsores are particularly common in elderly persons, in certain forms of heart disease, in kidney disease, in anemia, in cancer, and in long-continued illnesses such as tuberculosis, paralysis and diabetes.

Practical means of prevention include the use of rubber or soft cotton rings, at the same time keeping the skin of the patient clean and dry. After every bath, rubbing the skin with a 25 per cent solution of alcohol is of value. This may be followed by the use of a very fine, soft talcum powder.

If symptoms are recognized early, prompt measures should be taken. If the skin appears slightly reddened, is sensitive to touch, and feels hot, we may know that something has gone wrong. Healing may occur through the relief of pressure, but in some cases additional treatment will be required.

A recent plan of treatment is that suggested by T. J. A. Carty in the use of elastic adhesive plaster. He reports 10 cases in which the treatment consisted in covering the area of the sore after thorough cleansing with two layers of elastic plaster, the material extending over the healthy skin for at least one inch. The plaster is left in position as long as it will adhere. If the sore is discharging, it will require replacement in from 12 to 48 hours. Applications are continued until healing is complete. On removing the plaster, no attempt is made to cleanse the surface of the wounded area. The edges are merely cleaned so as to give the plaster a firm sticking surface.

After the first or second application, Carty noted that the ulcer was invariably clean and healthy in appearance. He suggests that the retained discharges have in themselves considerable power in dissolving dead tissue, thus automatically cleansing the wound. Fifteen days was the longest time required for healing.

Paper Windows Aid Oriental Children

Transmit More Ultra-Violet Light, Rickets Remedy.

Oriental children are less susceptible to rickets than Occidental ones because the paper windows in Chinese and Japanese homes transmit more ultra-violet light than window glass. The paper window panes are treated with tung oil, which enables them to transmit about 40 per cent of the ultra-violet light between 2,500 and 3,000 angstrom units, a region of the spectrum to which ordinary window glass is opaque.

Use of the oiled paper is being considered by several medical institutions in this country. It would be much less expensive than the window glass which has been specially treated to admit the curative ultra-violet rays.

Habana Team Derives Dance From Islanders

Cuban Pair Please With Voodoo; Shoreham Duo in 4th Week.

By Kay Ware.

The mystery (which has been news for over a week now) has cleared. Club Habana is all of a dither about the Cuban dancer, Chela de Costro, non-English-speaking beauty from Havana. Her partner, Rene Doray, who starred in "No! No! Nanette," is a double for Valentino.

These two give Habana patrons something new by way of dance routine in their voodoo dance. Chela knows all about it, because she once hunted the jungles of her native land for glimpses of devil-chasing natives. She wasn't eaten for supper chiefly because she had blacked her face, dressed as a boy, and the devil chasers probably couldn't tell her from a thicket. Music for this dance was written by Gilbert S. Valdes, Cuban composer.

In addition, the team does its full share of rhumbas and what-not. Moe Baer and boys furnish dancing rhythms and Russ Cullen and Lew Gates hand out the solos.

Show at Shoreham: Wilkins and Meyers, dance team, are in their fourth week. April 1 they go to Manhattan. Amelia Gilmore, creator of "Moth and the Flame" dance, appears in tap and toe numbers. Frances Stevens "Sings the Blues Away."

Ray Bolger, starred in "Life Begins at 8:40," and Mrs. Bolger appeared at the cafe the other day. Billy Hayes, another Schubert Brothers man, is helping out on the ballroom floor show. He's a master comedian, juggler, and acts as m. c.

Lotus floor show features Garron and Bennett, with fast Spanish dances; Sheldon and Rose execute many an intricate step. The chorus helps out on the scenic side and is versatile with specialties.

Although few would suspect it, Andre, the gigantic Cossack who holds down the sidewalk in front of the Russian Club Troika, is the holder of all local records for taxi calling (an art even greater than hog calling), and is, as well, a poet. In fact, he spends all his spare time jotting down little pieces of poesy in the simple tongue of the Russian peasant folk, sometimes sad sometimes gay. So don't wonder, when you next see him, at that far-away look in his eye and that expression of poignant, tender yearning behind his large ears.

His latest composition, an ode to spring, is being translated by George, Troika head waiter, for this column. It's about robins and jonquils and fleecy, sun-flecked clouds and the divine joy of whistling for Diamond cabs in the dewey dawn of Connecticut avenue.

The premiere of "Life Begins at 8:40" brought smartly-dressed crowds to Heigh-Ho Monday night. It also brought many of the show's company, including Bert Lahr, Luella Gear, plus a bevy of very beautiful ladies of the "ensemble" and members of the Charles Weidman dance group.

The latter were overwhelming in their admiration of the dances presented by Marjorie Enters and Phillipe Borgia. You see, the Heigh-Ho's dance team has taken the type of terpsichore which the Weidmans present on the stage and transformed it into dance-team dancing. The pair, by the way, are rehearsing three more new members to present at the club. Mme. Dorsha, famous premier danseuse and concert artist, is responsible for the unusual routines.

Marty Rubin is singing Virginia (parody winner) Hustvedt's take-off on "Night and Day," called "Tight and Gay." It has made quite a hit.

Fenton Froom sings "Strange Faces" for the benefit of newcomers in the Bamboo room. For the benefit of everybody, Ernestine explains, "Zing, Go the Strings of My Heart," which, though it has a silly title, is a swell song.

More rumors. This time it's to the effect that the Willard will have a baby cocktail lounge dedicated to the spirit (or necessity) of "swallow and scram." It'll be for those who have less time than thirst.

La Paree's show runs to large figures—26 entertainers in the Winter Garden Revue. Don't miss the "Continental" number, and Tiny Sutton in a contortion bit. Emory Daugherty and boys have a band that's a boon for dancers; Ray Beck and Marie Fowler croon choruses.

Glimpses at the Ambassador Monday night: Musicians and wives beaming and nodding at one another . . . Sidney's newest band leader, Harold Veo, fiddling for the dancers . . . Leon Brusiloff with two table knives in his belt . . . Congratulations heaved in the general direction of Phil Lampkin and Managers Cafritz and Conn . . . Mrs. Cafritz, looking lovely in a bright, flowered dress, cutting the huge pink and white birthday cake.

Herb Williams with speeches and handshakes. Pauses and adjustments under bright lights and large and small cameras . . . Cameraman McAvoy clicking away at his little Leica when no one was looking.

Cocktails, then sauterne, then champagne . . . Chicken on toast and peas and shoe-string potatoes . . . smoke and laughter and music and dancing.

Sidney, dignified dancer, slapping Leon Brusiloff, less dignified dancer, lightly on the cheek . . . Mrs. Rudy Schramm, blond and pretty in a red tunic and long black skirt . . . Pete and Virginia Macias ducking behind a table in a wall booth . . . Moe Baer, Jimmy Santimyer and Bill Strickland talking shop . . . Matt Windsor in Russian smock playing his accordian.

Manager McNey and Publicity Man Espey dashing around making everyone feel quite at home . . . Da Costa hunting for someone who could talk Portuguese . . . Theater people galore . . . Emory Daugherty grinning broadly . . .

And so it went. A fine party that. And may there be occasions for many more.

Gingham Club's line-up: York and Lewis, dance team; Rose Heatherly, acrobatic dancer; George Frotter, singer and m. c.; the vocal interludes by the Varsity trio. Entire show presented at luncheon, as wall as dinner and supper. Continuous entertainment—a feature that is a welcome one.

No Synthetic Spaniard Here

For Aida Luciano, Spanish singer and dancer, is the real thing when it comes to the heel-clicking and castanets. Peter Borras smiles and says she'll be at the Madrillon another week.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

The Whole Town's Talking.

I asked two veteran vaudeville executives an embarrassing question not many nights ago, a query that put them directly on the spot. "In the past twenty years," I said, "what performers have been the greatest box office attractions year in and year out?" Here are their rankings:

Greatest All-Time Flops: Aimee Semple McPherson (she got $5,500 a week); Jim Londos ($5,000 a week); Ruth Elder ($5,000 a week for 20 weeks), and the late Cal Coolidge relatives' band.

Greatest All-Time Single Week Gross: Amos 'n' Andy's $77,000 gross at Chicago Theater (they turned down a percentage in favor of a flat salary of $10,000—had they accepted a percentage, they would have been paid $24,000 for the week).

Greatest Box Office Comics: Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Amos 'n' Andy, Will Rogers, Ed Wynn.

Greatest Box Office Novelties: Siamese Twins (Hilton sisters); Singer Midgets, Jack Dempsey, Gertrude Ederle, Thurston, the magician, and Sally Rand.

Greatest Box Office Bands: Ted Lewis, Paul Whiteman, Rudy Vallee, Guy Lombardo.

Greatest Box Office Femmes: Nora Bayes, Fanny Brice, Eva Tanguay, Elsie Janis, Sophie Tucker, Kate Smith, Belle Baker, Blossom Seeley, Irene Franklin, Mae Murray.

Greatest Box Office Families: The Four Cohans, the Eddie Foys, the Four Marx brothers, the Rooneys, the Dooleys, the Four Mortons.

Greatest Box Office Teams: Van and Schenck, the Jack Bennys, Burns and Allen, Rock and White.

Greatest Box Office Sister Teams: Dolly Sisters, Duncan Sisters, Courtney Sisters.

Greatest Box Office Dance Team: Vernon and Irene Castle (and nobody second).

Greatest Colored Box Office Draws: Bert Williams, Florence Mills, Bill Robinson, Cab Calloway, Ethel Waters, Duke Ellington, Mills Brothers.

Notes: Huey Long will not be indicted for income tax evasions! . . . I like Joe Lewis' squelch of a pest at Chicago's Club Royale: "The stork that brought you should have been arrested for smuggling a dope" . . . Jack Dempsey will release the first picture of his baby to the services on Friday (Hannah showed me it the other night, and the youngster is a gurgly champ) . . . Milton Berle only steals gags, but somebody stole the center diamond out of his recently bought $3,000 ring . . . Sammy White and Beatrice Curtis break in their vaude act Loew's Gates Friday . . . Edith Roark will be sued by an irate wife for the return of a fur coat and ring (the husband went ga-ga) . . . The J. H. Lubins and Mrs. Marvin Schenck are Hot Springs bound.

Cutest of announcements comes from the Mervyn Le Roys (Doris Warner) on the Coast, an illustrated nursery rhyme telling of the arrival of Warner Lewis LeRoy. There are five pages, tied together with blue ribbon, and it reads this way (Page 1). This is the house that Merv built, (2) This is the girl that lives in the house that Merv built, (3) And this is the father, brave and strong, who waited and worried for ever so long, While he lived with the girl Who lives in the house that Merv built, (4) These are the grandparents—who came from New York, And worried and waited and welcomed the stork, When he brought the baby (but not from New York), To the folks in the house that Merv built, (5) And this is the baby, a bundle of joy! his name is Warner Lewis LeRoy—he arrived March 5th—if it were only Juloy, we'd have a word that rhymes with Le Roy—and he'll live with the girl, who married the man, that lives in the house that Merv built.

Jack Waldron, favorite clown of the professional funny men, drew the whole street to his debut at the Hollywood. I never saw him work better. He was really punching home those Waldron gagaroos. There was comedy offstage, too. Kelly, of the Yacht Club Boys, sitting with us, pointed out a chap in the rear of the room: "That fellow is a Chicagoan. I knew him when he had $50,000,000. Then came the crash, he was wiped out. To add to his troubles, now he's got diabetes." Waldron leaned over: "What's sad about that? He's still got 'sugar.'"

Land to Widen Road Will Cost City $7,453

Widening of Foxhall road, between Canal road and Reservoir road northwest, will cost the District government $7,453.74 in awards to property owners whose land is to be taken.

A condemnation jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday awarded several score of property owners a total of $137,764.40 in damages, but at the same time held the owners would benefit by $130,311.66 in the improvement. The difference between the sums is to be awarded the owners in proportion to the amount of frontage taken by the District to make the heavily traveled highway less congested.

Swiss Weigh Protest On Arrest by Nazis

Berne, Switzerland, March 26 (AP). The Swiss Government today considered formally protesting to Germany the disappearance in Swiss territory March 9 of Berthold Jacob, refugee German journalist known as an anti-Nazi. Berlin yesterday notified this government that Berthold had been arrested on German soil and placed in prison.

A deputy in the Swiss national council today asked the government if the German secret service had abducted Jacob and if the government would make "strong representations" to the Reich demanding his return.

Donors of Blood Sought To Save Policeman's Son

Volunteer blood donors were sought last night to save the life of Robert Edward Chew, 6-year-old son of Motorcycle Policeman Bowie T. Chew.

The youngster, ill with spinal meningitis, was reported near death in Children's Hospital. An appeal for blood was sent to members of the Police Department after Policeman Chew requested aid from Maj. Ernest W. Brown.

Physicians said the child's life depended on an immediate transfusion. A certain type of blood must be found. Chew and members of his family were unable to qualify.

Robert has been in the hospital snice Sunday. The Chews live in Glen Carlyn, Va.

'The Best Dog'—Chesapeake Retriever

It Isn't a Fancier's Breed, But Mr. and Mrs. D. Roy Mathews Are Enthusiastic About Their Pet, Especially Its Disposition.

The Chesapeake Bay retriever is distinctly not a fancier's dog. Few people know the breed excepting, of course, that small group of men to whom sitting behind a blind on the shores of a lake, with an eye to the water birds, is a little bit of heaven.

Yet there is one man in Washington who is a strong rooter for the breed, despite the fact that he has very little intention of using his dog in hunting. He is D. Roy Mathews, superintendent of Rock Creek Cemetery. Both he and his wife are enthusiastic about the breed for one reason—disposition.

"We have a little shack down on the bay," Mrs. Mathews explained. "One of our neighbors there had a Chesapeake Bay and he was the most marvelous dog I had ever known.

Protected Child.

"Whenever he was in the boat with a child, he'd always squeeze himself in between the child and the water. He'd do that deliberately to protect the child. When I happened to be alone in our cottage, that dog, who liked me very much, would spend the night outside on our steps. Other folks there had their scotties or wire-haired fox-terriers, but I always said I wanted a Chesapeake Bay.

"The first pup we had died of distemper," Mrs. Mathews continued. "Our present puppy, who is eight months old, is a sister of the first. Her name is Nellie, just plain Nellie. She is a lovely dog and our veterinary, Dr. Buckingham, says she is an exceedingly good specimen of the breed. I think he has her mother. Nellie is going to be a good watch dog, something we want, living here in the cemetery. Just this morning, she barked, a deep-throated bark, when some boys came into the grounds through the New Hampshire avenue gate, which isn't very much used. She barked, looked at the house and barked again until I came outside.

"One very important point about the breed is that they go to bed quietly, no matter at what time they are put in their quarters, night or day. Nellie doesn't even give a whimper. Both pups have been put outside from the very first night in a closed kennel and neither complained or whined, and that is a big factor in keeping a dog close to neighbors.

"Of course, we haven't the neighbor problem here," Mrs. Mathews added with a smile.

A Chesapeake Bay is a natural-born retriever. Even the Mathews' pup will bring back anything that is thrown and shows the strong retrieving instinct. Later on, according to Mr. Mathews, he'll be willing to lend Nellie to his duck hunting friends, so that the dog will have a chance to be in her natural element.

The Chesapeake, according to many authorities of the breed, is a descendant of the Newfoundland. According to the standard, the breed is noted for its thick, short outer coat; dense, wooly undercoat and the color as near dead grass as possible. He stands 23 to 26 inches at the shoulder and weighs 65 to 75 pounds. He has a broad, round skull; medium nose, short muzzle, pointed but not sharp; ears small, set well up on the head and hanging loosely; eyes, medium large of a yellowish color. The body is of medium length, neither cobby nor roached but rather approaching hollowness. The tail is of medium length, feathering on stern, and tail being permissible. He has a happy, bright disposition, an intelligent expression and the general outlines of a good worker.

City to Spend $54,000 At Shrine Convention

An appropriation of $54,000 out of District revenues to pay for assistance to be given by the District at the Shrine convention in June was asked of Congress yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The bulk of the money will be expended for the employment of personnel, such as additional policemen to be brought here from other cities; to protect the lives and property of the throngs expected to attend the convention.

Break Near In Deadlock At Annapolis

Compromise Proposal Worked Out by Coad's Committee.

Suggested Measure to Meet With Approval of the House.

By Francis O. White, Jr.
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., March 26.—That a solution has been found for the deadlock in the Maryland General Assembly over the relief problem, that is seriously retarding other legislation in the closing week of the biennial session, was indicated late tonight.

The Senate finance committee, presided over by Senator J. Allan Coad, St. Marys County, majority floor leader, which has been engineering the movement since the breach over the proposed 2 per cent general sales taxes, was in session throughout the afternoon and early evening, and although it was not disclosed what conclusions were reached, it was generally accepted that a compromise plan, combining several special taxes, will be incorporated in a bill.

To Get House Approval.

The suggested measure, it was said, would meet the approval of the House, which has remained adamant since passing the sales tax proposal several days ago.

The Senate passed 32 bills on their third reading, and recessed to permit the finance committee to give further consideration to relief legislation, since the general 2 per cent sales tax, regarded as the key bill, was revived after a prolonged debate that continued until 2 o'clock this morning.

Senator J. Allan Coad, St. Marys County, chairman of the committee and majority floor leader, gave a blanket invitation to Senators to attend this conference, as it was desired to pool all views on tax proposals. It was held that a compromise measure might be whipped into shape as the Senate is firm against a sales tax.

The House meanwhile recessed after a session lasting only a few minutes to allow committee conferences on pending bills.

32 Bills "Railroaded."

The Senate resorted to "railroading" tactics in passing the 32 bills, among them several State-wide measures. One was the bill by Senator Melvin Fine, Baltimore City, creating a veterans' relief fund of $95,000, provision for which previously was made in the budget. The bill stipulates that not more than $20,000 shall be used for administration purposes. It also provides for a State service officer and a veterans' commission to be appointed by the Governor.

Other measures that hurdled the third reading file included:

Exempting hearses, ambulances and hundred conveyances from the classification of commercial vehicles and subject to a special insurance tax.

Authorizing the reform school for colored boys at Cheltenham, Prince Georges County, to transfer its property to the State.

Abolishing the two state positions of tobacco graders.

Authorizing the State department of forestry to accept gifts of land from the Federal Government, and making it unlawful for persons to cut down trees and shrubbery without consent of property owners.

Regulating seine net fishing in the Choptank River.

Directing the conservation commissioner to stock Somerset County waters with crabs.

Creating a new election district in Washington County.

Placing a ban on Sunday dancing at public halls, taverns and the like in Dorchester County.

Providing for the appointment, qualification, etc., of license commissioners for Anne Arundel County.

Empowering the burgess and commissioners of Walkersville to purchase the Walkersville Water Co., and authorizing a bond issue of $25,000 therefor.

Authorizing the Frederick County commissioners to issue $322,700 bonds to redeem outstanding loans.

Hospital Trustees Approved.

The Senate passed and sent to the Governor the House bill by Delegate Charles Hartle, Washington County, designating the board of trustees of Washington County Hospital Association as follows: Daniel S. Steckel, John S. Kauster, William P. Lane, sr., W. H. McCardell, Harry Newcomer, W. Geary Porter, Stanley P. F. Kline, W. D. Byron, Omer T. Kaylor and Edward Oswald.

The bill by Delegate Joseph Griesacker, Baltimore City, proposing an investigation of wages of women and minors employed in trades and industry was the subject of a lively discussion before the House Judiciary Committee. Griesacker is chairman of the committee.

The bill creates a "minors wage division" in the office of the Commissioner of Labor and Statistics, and the investigations designed to be made through wage boards would set up a scale of minimum wages.

Miss Engle Backs Bill.

Miss Lavinia Engle, former member of the House from Montgomery County, appeared as one of the chief advocates of the bill. She asserted it would empower the State to establish a bottom wage level, and that the move has the indorsement of the League of Women Voters and the Consumers League. She pointed out that women have practically no union organization, and that they represent a class that goes "in and out of industry."

Miss Helen E. Brown was chairman of a delegation of 30 in opposition to the measure. Declaring the proposal is unconstitutional, Miss Brown said there is no reason why women and minors should be placed on the same footing in labor legislation. Enactment of such a law, she maintained, would cause many women to lose their positions. Miss Brown added that the projected legislation is supported by two groups, one of which she defined as "theorists who think they know what these women ought to want," and the other, "interested in eliminating women from industry."

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Baldwin, representing the industrial council of the National Woman's Party, also opposed the bill.

President Lansdale G. Sasscer of the Senate announced that body would hold memorial services Thursday for members who have died.

Mother of Six Dies From Shot Fired by Mate

Wound Allegedly Inflicted in Jealous Rage Fatal to Virginia Woman.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 26.—Mrs. Stella Meadows, 28-year-old mother of six children, died in a hospital here at 1:20 a. m. today of a bullet wound which her husband, Ernest Meadows, 39, is charged with inflicting.

The shooting occurred two weeks ago near the Meadows' home in Jolletts Hollow in the Blue Ridge Mountain foothills near the Rockingham-Page boundary line. The mountaineer, who is being held in the Page County Jail at Luray, maintained the shot, from a .32-caliber revolver, was fired accidentally.

The bullet entered over his young wife's heart and took a downward course, splintering her spine. An emergency operation was performed at the hospital several days ago.

The night before the operation the woman told Sheriff Charles R. Fawley, of Rockingham, her husband shot her during a fit of jealousy. Page County authorities said a quarrel preceded the shooting.

Accused in Slaying Retains Counsel

By the Associated Press.

Luray, Va., March 26.—Ernest Meadows, 39, held here charged with the fatal shooting of his wife, Mrs. Ordelia Meadows, which occurred just inside the Page County line, today retained Charles Hammer & Son, of Harrisonburg, as his counsel.

Page County authorities discredit a statement alleged to have been made by Mrs. Meadows in a Harrisonburg hospital to the effect that Meadows shot her in a jealous rage. They not only say she did not make such a statement, but also contend any statement she made in the hospital is inadmissible as evidence.

Mrs. Meadows, who died early today, will be buried tomorrow afternoon near her home.

Floor Tax on Whisky Fought in Maryland

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 26.—Strenuous opposition broke today to a proposed 5-cent floor tax on each gallon of whisky distilled in the State. The bill, a possible relief revenue-raising measure, already has passed the Senate.

The House ways and means committee heard opponents claim the three largest distilleries in Baltimore City would be forced to leave the State if the tax was imposed.

Senators Wilmer F. Davis (Republican), Caroline, and Robert V. Cooksey (Republican), Charles, sponsored the bill, which, according to Delegate Kent R. Mullikin, chairman of the ways and means committee, will be acted upon tomorrow.

A. J. Carroll, representing the Frankfort Distilleries, said: "It is unfair to single out an industry which is barely getting a foothold, and by the tax, drive it out of the State. We don't want to leave Maryland but if this tax prevails we will be forced to go elsewhere."

Peery Names Council of 7 As Advisers

Group to Study Proposed Changes in Banking and ABC Laws.

3 From House, 3 From Senate and Morrissett Comprise Body.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., March 26.—Gov. George C. Peery today appointed and organized a seven-man legislative advisory council to study proposed 1936 amendments to the alcoholic beverage control law, amendments to the State banking laws, new tax legislation, particularly on tax delinquent property, and other matters.

The Governor selected three veterans from the State Senate and three veterans from the House of Delegates and one cabinet member, C. H. Morrissett, the State tax commissioner. The legislators are George W. Dayman, of Craig; Hunter Miller, of Bedford, and John S. Battle, of Charlottesville, from the Senate; Ashton Dovell, of Williamsburg; Thomas B. Stanley, of Henry, and Haskins Hobson, of Chesterfield, from the House. Senator Battle was chosen chairman, and William R. Shands, director of the legislative reference bureau, secretary.

This advisory council is not a "little legislature," the Governor explained. "It is purely an advisory body to consider matters that may lead to executive recommendations before the 1936 Assembly, particularly suggestions as to new legislation which require careful and mature consideration by the Governor. The council will in no sense supplant existing legislative commissions studying various problems."

The Governor said that neither will the new fact finding and advisory group supplant the budget advisory committee which begins work in July on appropriation recommendations.

Thaw Movie Suit Up in Winchester

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., March 26.—An ill-fated venture into a partnership formed in New York for the production of moving pictures has ended in Frederick Circuit Court for Harry K. Thaw, who today entered a defense brief, charging that a judgment for more than $7,000 secured against him by John S. Lopez, a scenario writer, was obtained through fraud.

According to the brief, entered by Thaw's attorneys, Hary R. Kern, the moving picture venture started with a partnership with Stuart Mack, of New York, in 1927. Shortly thereafter, Thaw claims, the two disagreed. Meanwhile, he said, a series of 12 scenarios which were not used nor called for, were to be prepared by Lopez and Arthur B. Reeve.

It is for these scenarios, it is set forth, that Lopez is seeking to recover. A suit in New York, Thaw says, was dismissed and a higher court directed a new trial. In the second trial, Thaw's partner was not named, he said, and he alleges further, in his brief, that the attorney who represented his partner, Mack, also represented the plaintiffs, Lopez and Reeve.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 26.—The Right Rev. Dr. W. L. Gravatt, of Charleston, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of West Virginia, narrowly escaped injury Sunday when an automobile in which he and two friends were riding here to attend funeral rites for the Rev. With the bishop were the Rev. Benjamin Roller, of Charleston, and Eugene Ramer, also of Charleston. No one was hurt seriously.

As Raging Flood Threatened Hospital Patients at Welch

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Cloudbursts 25 miles away caused water to rise so rapidly around the West Virginia State Emergency Hospital at Welch (right foreground), that patients were rushed by stretchers to the second floor. The flood left 1,000 homeless and caused damage estimated at $500,000.

West Virginia's Flood Recedes; Child Drowned

Landslide Smashes Home of Relief Worker; State Hospital Isolated.

By the Associated Press.

Williamson, W. Va., March 26.—Turbulent rivers and mountain streams in southern West Virginia receded today after pouring over the lowlands, forcing families from their homes, washing out bridges and railroad trestles and causing the death of a child.

George Arthur McMillan, 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George D. McMillan, fell into the swollen waters of a creek near his home at Glen White and was drowned.

A landslide that crushed a mountainside home injured Meredith Lowe, a relief worker, and three of his family.

In Williamson, water stood 4 feet deep in the city hall and flooded the basements of stores. Barefoot boys waded in the muddy water and helped remove merchandise.

At Welch, the State emergency hospital still was virtually isolated by high waters, but the streams are falling there.

At New Camp, Ky., near Williamson, more than 500 families were huddled in railroad box cars awaiting recession of the flood waters. They fled from their homes, carrying with them what personal belongings and furnishings they could gather up.

Many roads were blocked by landslides. Railroad traffic also was delayed.

Flood Rise Prevents Search for 2 Bodies

Lewisburg, W. Va., March 26 (AP).—A 4-foot rise in the turbulent Greenbrier River today halted a search by Greenbrier County officers for the bodies of two of four persons who drowned in a boat upset in the stream.

Sheriff James McClung said the stream was up to a stage of approximately 15 feet, and its normal depth is about 5 feet. He added the current was so swift today that dragging the river for the two missing bodies was impossible, but the search will be resumed tomorrow.

Deputy sheriffs and State police recovered the bodies of Mrs. Joseph McWhorter, 30, of Rupert, and Robert Rutledge, of Belle. The bodies sought are those of Mrs. James Quesenberry, 55, of Charleston, and Nancy Davis, 11, the daughter of Mrs. McWhorter.

They drowned Sunday evening when a cable-drawn rowboat, manned by Rutledge, capsized.

Couple Seized For Grilling In Track Death

2 Held in Charles Town Probe of Freight Car Mystery.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., March 26. The mystery of the Norfolk & Western camp car from which Emanuel Roach, of Port Republic, Va., a track worker for the railroad, was either thrown or fell to his death, March 20, was being probed here today.

Constable T. W. Allen, of Charles Town and special N. & W. Officer C. M. Campbell, Shenandoah Junction, who have been working on the case since the finding of the body along the railroad tracks near Charles Town, went to Luray, Va., this morning and brought Mr. and Mrs. Richard Austin, aged 28 and 26, respectively, alias Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bowers, here and lodged them in the Jefferson County jail after the couple had been arrested in Shenandoah, Va., earlier this morning by Special Officer M. L. Gay.

Officers discovered that the couple arrived in Hagerstown, Md., yesterday morning on a freight from Harrisburg, Pa., then took another freight through Martinsburg to Strasburg, Va. The couple dodged Charles Town and Shenandoah Junction on their return trip and walked from Strasburg to Front Royal, Va., where they hopped Norfolk & Western freight No. 51 for Shenandoah.

A coroner's jury, called March 21 by Justice T. C. Green, acting coroner, after hearing the testimony of the different members of the crew in the camp car, adjourned for one week until the officers could apprehend the "Mr. and Mrs. Bowers," as they were known to the crew.

Several of the witnesses testified they heard a woman scream at approximately the same spot where the body was found and also that Roach rode in the sitting-room section of the work car with the couple after they boarded the train at Shenandoah. None of the men would testify as to how the couple boarded the train.

Battle Date To Be Marked By Ceremony

Chancellorsville Fight Celebration Planned at the Scene.

Fight's Seventy-second Anniversary Will Be Observed May 2.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 26.—Plans for celebration of the seventy-second anniversary of the Battle of Chancellorsville May 2 at the scene of the battle 12 miles west of this city were outlined at a public meeting here last night.

The ceremonies, to which President Roosevelt will be invited, will be incidental to the opening of the Jackson Trail in the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park. The entire cadet corps from the Virginia Military Institute and a body of 650 Marines form Quantico will participate in the event, portraying Jackson's famous march to the rear of Hooker's army. Few incidents in the history of the Civil War have greater interest than this achievement with its climax, the wounding and death of Jackson.

To Retrace Movements.

The center of the celebration will be at the Bivouac Stone, where Lee and Jackson held their final meeting and where they planned the Chancellorsville engagement the night of May 1. Dr. Douglas Freeman, Richmond historian and authority on the life of Lee, will describe the situation prior to the battle and as the Cadets and Marines start, representing various units that actually were engaged, the unit each group represents and the object of its movement will be explained through amplifiers. Jackson's troops, to be portrayed by the V. M. I. Cadets, will be seen as they pass on their famous march around Hooker and later in the rear attack and the Battle of Chancellorsville.

Broadcast Planned.

A dramatization of the battle will be given over a Nation-wide radio hook-up on the night preceding the anniversary of the celebration, through the courtesy of the Virginia Military Institute Alumni Association of Virginia, J. C. Hagen, president of the association, told the gathering last night.

As soon as President Roosevelt returns from his fishing trip, a local delegation will invite him to come here for the exercises.

Speakers last night were Mr. Hagen, Branch Spalding, acting superintendent of the park; Robert F. Nelson, of the State Chamber of Commerce, and former State Senator C. O'Conor Goolrick.

Train Halted, Man Saved From Death

Engineer's Sharp Watch Averts Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Md., March 26.—The sharp watch kept by an engineer in the locomotive cab of a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad train saved M. A. Brooks, 51, of Baltimore, from being crushed to death beneath the train's wheels.

Brooks fell from a freight train Saturday morning and was lying, with both hips fractured, on the tracks about a mile west of Oakland, as No. 4, an eastbound passenger train, approached.

Seeing the man on the tracks, the engineer stopped the train in time to avoid hitting him. After being examined by Capt. C. H. Frederick, the conductor, Brooks was taken to a Keyser, W. Va., hospital, where his condition was said to be serious.

Brooks said he had been going to Grafton, W. Va., seeking employment on the Tygarts Valley flood control project.

Virginia Prepares to Transfer 340 Families in Shenandoah

Peery's Orders Awaited for Shift to Homestead Communities.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 26.—Director William A. Smith of the VERA was making preparations today for the transfer of some 340 families from the Shenandoah Park area to suitable homesteads elsewhere in the State. The movement will begin as soon as Gov. Peery gives orders.

Mr. Smith was notified yesterday by Washington authorities that the work of relocating the families, interrupted in January pending an amendment to the subsistence homesteads act to include removal of rural, as well as urban families, could be resumed.

Families in parts of Page, Rappahannock and Madison County lying in the park area, who are without means to move themselves, will become the wards of the rural rehabilitation division of the VERA, which has been granted $150,000 to effect the transfers to subsistence communities of 20 to 50 families. The homesteaders will be supplied land, provisions and implements for farming.

The families must be transferred in order that the National Park Service may take over Shenandoah Park.

Loew Houses Apparently Have Taken Seasonal Lien on Cherry Blossom Season

This Year They Again Plan the Big April Fete

Sumptuous Bookings Set; White Acts Once More; Amusement Chat.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

The Loew theaters in Washington seem to have taken a sort of lease on cherry blossom time along the Tidal Basin

While there was nothing in the compliment to Mrs. William Howard Taft from the kingdom of Japan that resulted in the planting of the cherry trees to link the annual spring festival with the theatrical enterprises fostered by the late Marcus Loew, the two, nevertheless, seem to have become associated in the public mind as a sort of twin act—like Herb Williams and his daughter, Doris Ewing, or something.

Thus it comes about that for the severalth year, just as the cherry blossoms are about to break into bloom so is an array of attractions at Loew's Fox, Palace and Columbia. It all goes under the name of festival. That may be what it is.

Here They Are.

At Loew's Fox, the first picture of this festival will be George White's 1935 "Scandals," boasting of such stars as Alice Faye, James Dunn, Lyda Roberti and scores of others, including hundreds of beautiful girls.

Then, coming along in rapid order, will be Wallace Beery in "West Point of the Air," the "Casino Murder Case," S. S. Van Dine's famous criminal story with Paul Lukas and Alisson Skipworth; Lionel Barrymore and Bela Lugosi in "Mark of the Vampire" and Charles Butterworth in "Baby Face Harrington." Others ready for showing at the Fox include "Private Worlds," with Claudette Colbert, and "Spring Tonic," with Lew Ayres.

Stage attractions to be seen at the Fox during the festival season include Benny Davis and his new star dust revue; Cab Calloway and his orchestra, Count Berni Vici "Spices of 1935;" George Olsen and his orchestra, with Ethel Shutta, and Pat Rooney and Herman Timberg in "The Trial of the Century."

Palace Also Struts.

Loew's Palace is equally as fortunate as the Fox in its forthcoming attractions, which include W. C. Fields and Bing Crosby in "Mississippi;" Jean Harlow and William Powell in "Reckless," Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in "Naughty Marietta," Mae West in "Goin' to Town," Joan Crawford in "No More Ladies" and Ann Harding, Franchot Tone and Merle Oberon in "The Flame Within."

Several others lined up for the Palace are "The Call of the Wild," with Clark Gable and Loretta Young; George Arlin in "Cardinal Richelieu," and "Les Miserables" with Charles Laughton and Fredric March.

So they screened "George White's Scandals of 1935" at Loew's Fox Sunday midnight, or worse, and what happened? Nothing happened except that we saw a pretty swell flicker and then had a four-cornered fight amongst Carter Barron, Loew's district manager; Gene Ford, manager of Loew's Fox Theater; "Bill" McCormick, the intrepid sports writer of this admirable sheet, and me. And what do you think it was all about? Whether Washington audiences are sophisticated or not sophisticated. Based, of course, on the Lou Holtz standard! Who, or whom, as the case may be, did the winning? And who was on which side? And, when all is said and done, why? I wouldn't know, either!

A Pretty Good Show!

But since we seem to have come upon the topic of George White's new "Scandals" for Fox release, it may be said that the 1935 version is a vast improvement over the first picturization of these gay vagaries of a brash young hoofer.

There are none of those annoying "doggie" scenes in this one. Neither are there any of the amateurish adventures of Lehigh's little brother, Rudy, to impede the progress of a story that moves along brightly on its own power and turns in a sum total of animated song numbers that would do credit to four or five common, or garden, varieties of celluloid musicals.

As a matter of fact, the musical portions of the new "Scandals" far outweigh any other consideration. They encompass some such expensive outlay of tunes as "The Hunkadola," "An Old Southern Custom," "I Was Born Too Late," and many more that will waggle the listeners right off their podiums—if you know what I mean.

And what a cast! Foremost is Master Georgie White, himself, who plays a part all the way through the masquerade and introduces something of his former eminence as a tap-dancer in addition to reading all those lines and the like.

Then there are Ned Sparks, Alice Faye, Lyda Roberti, Arline Judge, Charles Richman, Jack Mulhall, "Ukelele Ike" Cliff Edwards, "Fuzzy" Knight, Emma Dunn, Jimmy Dunn, Eleanor Powell, Jed Prouty, Benny Rubin and a score of others.

There are ensemble numbers that betray a rare imaginative grasp of the pictorial possibilities of the cinema and dramatic interludes that give the piece something of dramatic substance.

But, best of all, will be the evidence that George White has not forgotten how to pick them up and lay them down. The lad still can dance. Otherwise he never would have included Eleanor Powell in the same cast himself. That is competition of a sort nothing but a master could overcome.

Each spring, apparently the only thing that springs up is not the grass, but the annual rumor that Katharine Cornell has "succumbed" (so the word generally is) to the overlords of Hollywood. This time it is stated that the actress will appear in a talking picture of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet."

Miss Cornell will not make a film of "Romeo and Juliet" or of any other play or story. Because she always tempers her refusals with the statement that "this does not mean I never shall make a screen production," this leads some people to think she actually is considering a film debut. She adds this qualifying clause only because she realizes that, though so far she has not been interested in appearing on the screen, it is not within mortal knowledge to be certain what may occur in the future which would change her mind.

An Elizabethan "Helena"

This is Jean Muir as she will appear in Max Reinhardt's production for the Warners of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Miss Muir is one of the most promising actresses among the younger set in the cinema and had engaged Herr Doktor's attention no less than James Cagney, who, as Bottom, Reinhardt had declared the best actor in Hollywood.

Club Promises Stars.

The Newspaper Women's Club is receiving helpful cooperation from professionals in varied fields of entertainment for their big ball, to be given at the Willard Hotel next Saturday at 10 p. m., for the benefit of the Children's Hospital and the club's fellowship fund.

Perhaps the most dazzling array of stars for any one group is the list of principals and others who have agreed to go over after the final performance of "Life Begins at 8:40" and give of their talents in the concentrated program of entertainment which will begin at 11 p. m.

Katherine Brooks, who is in general charge of entertainment, says that the attractive young coloratura soprano, Galli-Campi, who sang at the White House recently, will give an outstanding operatic aria in costume. Also, the brilliant young Russian dancer and producer, Lasar Galpern, who did much to establish the American Theater for Children in New York, will do a ballet number. Little Lorraine Imlay, a child dancer of marked talent, will give another dance number during the evening.

Fashion Show Is Listed.

Contrasting these events will be a fashion show in which members of the club, wearing models loaned for the exhibit by Jelleff's, will show "What the Well-Dressed Newspaper Woman Will Wear."

Throughout the evening, from cozy nooks near the stairs at the north end of the ballroom, under the balcony, two gifted "seeresses" will give readings.

One is Miss Tacie E. Bolen, whose wizardry at reading the cards is well known in social circles here. The other fortune-teller, who will read palms, is a comparative newcomer to Washington, a lady prominent among recent governmental arrivals, who does her readings under the intriguing nom de plume of "Palmetto."

Signing-Off Note.

I'll be seeing you around—I'm afraid.

You have heard a great many things complimentary to "Life Begins at 8:40" prior to its arrival as one of the prime attractions of the Capital's current theater week.

Most of them have been true. I would not say that "Life Begins at 8:40" is the best revue that ever has been seen here, but I would say, with slight fear of contradiction, that it combines enough of the superlative in song, dance and comedy to take its place near the top of the inconsequential lighter musical things that can not expect to build any lasting memorial to the distinction of the traditional theater.

"Life Begins at 8:40" is just a swell show that has girls, music, comedy and cast in its favor.

Bert Lahr, Luella Gear, Roy Bolger, Dixie Dunbar and a large group of others made sure that this offering has everything it needs in primary essentials to spell a hit. That run at the Winter Garden in New York was no fluke. The item under consideration deserves a run in any man's playhouse. Regardless of the fact that I have never been one of Mr. Lahr's most active advocates, I still have ben conscious of his comic superiorities.

He is as funny as he ever has been in his present assignment, and that also may be said of Miss Gear, Ray Bolger and all the others in the cast who have been well done by.

Old Act Scores.

Even Walter Dare Wahl and Emmett Oldfield do their old acrobatic act with more aplomb than you might expect.

And this Dixie Dunbar is something to reckon with. You may remember her as a former member of the George White "Scandals" screen cast, but now she is a young dancing comedienne who will make you sit up and take notice. She was, in the old days, I am given to understands, known as "Toots" in her native Atlanta, but Mr. Carter Barron now will outspeak you on the matter, if you give him a chance. And so will Miss Dunbar. But she is still a grand little performer who does her part right up to the hilt—wherever that is.

There is no need to go on at great length about "Life Begins at 8:40;" that is about where it begins and, my advice is that you see, listen to and enjoy it before the evening gets by you.

It has everything the advance notices said, plus a few assets that you may not have suspected.

The enthusiasm of last night's audience was not a mistaken gesture. It was a deserved tribute to a well-gauged appeal to public favor.

"Life Begins at 8:40" may begin there, but that is by no means where it ends.

Sibelius' Work Will Be Heard Here First Time

Boston Orchestra to Play Finn's 7th Symphony, Schumann, Ravel.

Music-lovers will find much of interest in the program announced by Dr. Sergei Koussevitzky for the last Washington concert of the season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, next Wednesday afternoon in Constitution Hall. A feature will be the first performance in this city of the seventh and last symphony by the great Finnish composer, Jan Sibelius.

Schumann's D Minor Symphony, his fourth, also will be performed, and in addition there will be two compositions by Maurice Ravel—the four-movement suite, "Le Tombeau de Couperin," and the three-movement Suite No. 2 from the ballet, "Daphnis et Chloe."

Sibelius composed his seventh symphony in C major, Opus 105, in 1925. It has been described as his most finely grained score and many critics have praised it as a masterpiece of symphonic structure. Cecil Gray, the English critic, has written about this work as follows:

Resourceful Development.

"It is one gigantic movement based in the main on the same structural principles as the first movement of his sixth symphony—one chief subject, and a host of small, pregnant, fragmentary motives of which at least 12 play a prominent part in the unfolding of action. The resourceful way in which these are varied, developed, juxtaposed, permuted and combined into a continuous and homogeneous texture is one of the miracles of modern music."

Schumann's D minor symphony was written in 1841, immediately following his "Spring" symphony. "It is entirely similar to its predecessor in fundamental feeling," says Dr. Philipp Spitta, "but has more passion. The form is new and very successful; the four sections follow each other consecutively without any pauses, so that the work seems to consist of the great movement. The subjects of the introduction reappear in the romanza with different treatment and the chief subject of the first allegro is the foundation of the last movement.

Extraordinary Form.

"The second part of the first allegro is in quite an unusual form and before the last allegro we find a slow introduction — imaginative, majestic and most original. Schumann intended at first to call the work 'Symphonic Fantasia.' Poetic pictures seem to be hovering round him on every side."

"Le Tombeau de Couperin," a tribute to the great French composer, Francois Couperin, was originally written by Ravel as a piano suite in six movements. The movements were composed at intervals from 1914 to 1917. In 1918 he orchestrated four of the sections: "Prelude — Forlane — Menuet — Rigaudon."

The ballet, "Daphnis et Chloe," composed 1909-11, is generally considered by critics to contain Ravel's finest writing for orchestra. It exemplifies in the highest degree his skill in instrumental color and the finish and piquancy of his refined style.

Ku Klux Revival Under Bill Feared

Clerics Protest Maryland School Aid Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 26.—Baltimore County churchmen today voiced conviction that the Ku Klux Klan would be revived if the Legislature passes a bill providing transportation for parochial school children of that county.

The churchmen appeared at a hearing before the Baltimore County delegation, protesting the measure would be a departure from the separation of State and church.

Delegate William G. Knapp (Democrat), Baltimore County, had offered an amendment to require the county commissioners to levy a one cent tax on $100 of assessable property for the transportation. The funds would go to the county board of education and, upon written application by private schools would be contributed to them.

15 Days More Granted On Virginia Auto Tags

Richmond, Va., March 26 (AP).—John Q. Rhodes, director of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, today announced an extension of the deadline for purchase of 1935 automobile license plates to April 15.

The term for the 1935 licenses extends from April 1 to April 1, but the Virginia statute authorizes an extension of 15 days.

4-Year Search For Frederick Fugitive Ends

Robbery Suspect Who Fled While Awaiting Trial Held in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., March 26.—A four-year search for "Diamond-Toothed" Claude Countee, colored, of Frederick, who escaped the jail here while awaiting trial, ended today with his arrest in Chicago.

Chief of Police Allen Bartgis, of Frederick, received word from Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan, of Chicago, that Countee, alias Arthur Brooks, had been taken into custody in that city on the request of the local authorities.

State's attorney immediately began preparing extradition papers, as Sullivan's wire said Countee refused to return here without being extradited. As soon as the papers are prepared, they will be sent to Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Bench Warrant Mailed.

Pending extradition, a bench warrant, issued by Chief Judge Hammond Urner, to be used as a fugitive warrant to insure Countee's detention, was sent to Chicago by air mail.

The search was renewed early this year after Chief Bartgis had learned Countee had been arrested in Chicago. Countee served a five-day term after conviction of a misdemeanor under his alias, Arthur Brooks.

Escaped in 1930.

Countee escaped from the county jail, December 13, 1930, two months after he had been taken into custody in connection with the larceny of a large quantity of clothing from the store of B. Rosenour. Two other colored, men Paul Sydes and Stephen Allen, who fled with Countee, subsequently were recaptured and tried.

A large quantity of the goods stolen from the Rosenour store was recovered when Countee was arrested in York, Pa., in 1930. He was brought back to Frederick and was to have been tried for violation of a previous parole, following another larceny charge, when he escaped.

Police Investigate Fatal Auto Accident

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., March 26.—Carroll County authorities and State police were pressing an investigation today in the death of Frederick Shipley, of Sykesville, who was fatally injured in an automobile accident near Eldersburg early yesterday morning.

State police reported that Shipley was apparently the sole occupant of the machine when it went over a bank and overturned several times. A preliminary investigation failed to reveal the cause of the accident, which occurred about 3 a. m. Shipley was discovered lying in the wrecked machine.

Nine Doctors in Texas Held on Narcotic Law

Wichita Falls, Tex., March 26 (AP). In a drive against narcotic law violators, Federal agents today charged nine doctors and druggists with violating the Harrison act.

The accused men named in Federal court complaints were Dr. Robert K. Lowry, Dr. C. E. Johnson and Dr. J. D. Ratliff, of Seymour; Dr. H. T. Coop, of New Castle; Dr. O. L. Woodall, of Iowa Park, and L. E. Lovelace, E. V. Edwards, G. W. Andruss, and W. S. Clough, Seymour druggists.

Culpeper County Now Listed Among Large Sheep Producers Number Figured at 6,500, Wool Pooling Plan Still in Use.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., March 26.—Culpeper County, which has risen to high rank among the dairy counties of Virginia during the last decade, is also gaining an enviable place in the sheep-raising industry. It is estimated there are about 6,500 sheep distributed in flocks of varying sizes on farms in the county.

Perhaps the largest flock is on the Canterberry Farm of Col. Albert Pierce, near Jeffersonton, where 800 sheep are in care of one special shepherd, Ben Herndon, who has several assistants in caring for the high pure-bred imported stock.

One of the most profitable flocks is on the farm of C. B. Chilton, near Lakota, where a herd of 25 ewes had produced 54 lambs.

Notable among the sheep growers of the county are H. L. Bywaters, L. R. Miller, A. W. Pierce, A. W. Scott, of the Rixeyville section; W. R. Thompson, Mitchells; Edwin R. Gaines, near Culpeper; J. O. Sullivan and P. C. Lindsay, near Brandy, and Roberts Stark, Claude Carpenter and W. W. Apperson.

The plan of pooling the wool for market, introduced by the county agent five years ago, has been used each year with gratifying success, as well as, the cooperative marketing of graded lambs under the supervision of the agent.

Recreation Unit Will Sponsor Dance-Concert

Community Center's Novel Program Scheduled for April 3.

A program of dances and pantomimes arranged by Lisa Gardiner and her Dance Group to music by members of the Washington Composers' Club will be given Wednesday evening, April 3, in McKinley High School auditorium, under auspices of the Community Center department. No dance-concert of this kind has even been given in Washington, nor probably anywhere else, as the dances are all new creations and the composers will play their own works.

The composers who are to take part are Mary Howe, Edward C. Potter, Henry Gregor, John Alden Finckel, R. Deane Shure, and LaSalle Spier. Mrs. Howe, who is to present a two-piano work, will be assisted by Anne Hull.

Lisa Gardiner's associates in the program are Christine Stewart, Alice Louise Hunter, Georgia Hiden, Marjorie Megee, Jeanne Milette, Jeanne Densmore, Leila Gurley Anne Vucinovich, Barbara Worrell, Helen Langston, Lora Wills, Fillis Speich, Marian Wolberg, Anne St. John, Polly Prickett, Patricia Benedict, Elizabeth Berkeley, Eda Vomacka, Marjorie Beall, Anna Martin, Gertrude Fiesel, Carol Schiffman, Barbara Fulton, Beverly Bennett and Beatrice Mullen.

The following musical numbers will be interpreted in dances: "The Lotus Eaters" (Potter), "In the Temple of Shiva," "Voice in the Desert" and "Etude in the Form of a Virginia Reel" (Gregor), "Haunted" (Finckel), "Three Spanish Dances: Peteneras, Habanera and Jota" (Howe), "With the Carpenters at Nazareth," "With the Woman at the Well" and "On the Mount of Temptation" from an organ suite, "The Holy Carpenter" (Shure), "Afternoon of a Four" (Spier).

Autoist Dies Under His Own Machine

Jack Slips, Car Crushes Marylander to Death.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 26.—John E. Calvert, 27, local insurance representative, met death late today in an unusual accident on the Grimes Station-Taylors Landing road near here. Calvert's head was pinned beneath his heavy car and the skull fractured.

He apparently had been removing a flat tire when the jack slipped, the running board dropping upon his head. A passing motorist found his body.

Magistrate Richard Duffey, acting coroner, expressed the opinion that a passing car might have sidewiped Calvert's machine causing it to slip from the jack. He withheld a verdict pending further probe of this angle.

Proposal Problem For Cumberland

City to Fight Pennsylvania Sunday Fishing.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 26.—The probability of the Pennsylvania Legislature's passing an act legalizing fishing on Sunday presents a problem for the City of Cumberland. Lakes Gordon and Koon, the sources of Cumberland's water supply, are located in Bedford County, Pa., about nine miles north of Cumberland. They teem with fish and have attracted many anglers. They also have proved sanctuaries for water fowl.

Charles J. Bruce, superintendent of the Evitts Creek Water Co., which is in charge of the city's water supply, told the mayor and city council yesterday that in the event Sunday fishing is legalized in Pennsylvania, he expects the demand at the lakes for boats would be quadrupled. He said he would have a definite recommendation to make next week. The city would receive revenue from renting boats. The likelihood of drowning accidents would increase in proportion, while the added number of fishermen would add to contamination danger.

Mayor George W. Legge instructed City Clerk Harry B. Thayer to write Gov. George H. Earle, of Pennsylvania asking that the lakes be exempted from the proposed State-wide law.

Shirk, 13, and Hobart Shirk, 15, of Union Bridge, Carroll County, have been committed to St. Mary's Industrial School, Baltimore, for setting fire to a vacant hotel property.

The boys admitted having set the fire.

Hollywood

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, March 26.

IT IS Grace Moore's first day before the camera for "Love Me Forever," and she is nervous, eager to get going. She stands in the set which represents a cabin at Lake Placid and looks out at the studio snow. Director Victor Schertzinger and Cameraman Joe Walker—he is Frank Capra's pet—are giving the position of the camera and the lights their final okay. Miss Moore stands waiting in the doorway of the cabin; she is snapping her fingers, both hands, like a dice thrower. "She always does that just before she's ready to go to work." The man who made this comment is Valentin Parera, Grace Moore's husband. He is standing on the set to watch her, this opening day. There is just a trifle of the tension of an opening night. The star, the director and Columbia, all three, realize that they have to duplicate the success of a mighty successful picture, "One Night of Love," for the audience which causes the fever of a Broadway opening.

• • • •

Director Schertzinger gives the signal. Miss Moore starts emoting. She rushes to the door and waves and shouts to an imaginary crowd. She is wearing a blue woolen jersey outfit and a pair of heavy white woolen socks. Spring Byington, playing a maid, comes on and tries to put Miss Moore's shoes on while she hops about. While this is going on, a playback machine is playing back a song which Miss Moore previously recorded, and which she is now supposed to be singing. The shoes must be on when Miss Moore reaches a certain note. This is the trouble. Miss Byington can't get the shoes on Miss Moore in time. After many attempts, Director Schertzinger has an idea. He sprinkles talcum powder on Miss Moore's socks and shoes. Presto—they go on and the scene is filmed.

• • • •

GRACE MOORE has already recorded several of the songs to be used in the flicker. The song used in this particular sequence is "Il Bacio," the kiss, and is sung by Miss Moore in Italian. In the recording room, Miss Moore will sing one song over and over, six or seven times, until every note has been recorded perfectly. On the stage or radio she would sing the song once and it would be over, but singing for a picture is more difficult and harder work.

In this Lake Placid sequence, Grace Moore is supposed to tumble off the roof and fall down a snow bank. "For over an hour last night," said Miss Moore, "I practiced falling down and rolling gracefully."

• • • •

"Then I came on the set, and when I told Victor that I was ready to tumble and roll he laughed. I discovered that they're going to have a regular stunt woman do that from a real roof top. I thought I'd do just a little 6-inch fall in the studio, but that's out and after all my rehearsing!" Grace Moore has learned much about recording since her last job! I heard several numbers and she seems in finer voice. She went into training for this role, and has taken off weight and is much thinner. In fact, when she appeared for work, Director Schertzinger said to her: "Where's your mother who played in 'One Night of Love?'"

• • • •

GEORGE RAFT is having a scar put on his left cheek by the makeup artist, Westmore. Then Raft steps before the camera for Director Frank Tuttle and plays a scene of "The Glass Key." Raft looks very sinister and utters some lines. He finishes and sits in a camp chair to relax. "Playing a gangster again?" I ask him. "Naw," he answers. "No gangster this time. I'm the bodyguard to a scheming politician. There's a difference, eh?" and Raft smiles.

On the set of "Redheads on Parade," Dixie Lee—her blonde hair camouflaged red, is about ready to play a scene with Jack Haley. Everything is set for Director Norman McLeod, when the script girl, Lee Frederick, shouts: "Be careful now, this is a Skolsky shot." I am all attention. I believe that perhaps it is some gag.

• • • •

Jack Haley answers: "I'm smoking only half a cigarette." The scene then proceeds. When it is completed, I speak to Miss Frederick. "What do you mean a Skolsky shot?" "That's what we script girls now call a sequence in which the action is continued from a previous shot. "So I'm now part of the movie lingo?" "Yes," answers Miss Frederick, "and we're going to try to put that boner column out of business."

Half Truckload of Silk Destroyed by Flames

Winchester, Va., March 26 (AP).—Half of a truckload of silk valued at $30,000, en route from Tennessee to New York, was destroyed early today near Mount Jackson, Va., when the truck caught fire.

The driver and several volunteers saved half the load. The fierce heat of the fire melted the steel frame of the truck.

Trial Run by Gar Wood Forecasts New Record for Speedboats

Test Is Halted As Propeller Shaft Snaps

Craft Hits Porpoise After Reaching Estimated 115 to 125 M.P.H.

Detroit Pilot to Try for World Mark When Repairs Are Made.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 26. Gar Wood roared down Biscayne Bay for a mile today in Miss America X and came back with the forecast he would smash his own world water speed record of 124 miles an hour.

"We'll go faster here," he said as he stepped ashore from a patrol boat after the trial spin in Miss America X had been suddenly cut short when its port propeller shaft snapped in an encounter with a school of porpoise.

Wood said he had no difficulty controlling the speedster after striking the porpoise. He estimated his speed before racing into them as "115, maybe 120, possibly 125 miles an hour."

Wood Highly Gratified.

He expressed himself as highly gratified with Miss America's performance in her first run in salt water, the buoyancy of which Wood hopes will add miles to his trim craft's speed.

Wood said he believed the 38-foot speed boat would be ready for another test tomorrow, but his veteran riding mate, Orlin Johnson, vetoed this after the four-engined hydroplane had been pulled from the water.

"It may take one day, and it might take several," Johnson said, "it depends entirely upon whether we will be able to replace the shaft and wheel without sliding back the port engine."

Accepting the mishap with the seagoing mammals as high adventure, Wood said "it was fun and we probably did them more damage than they did us. When I looked back I could see three or four of them jumping out of the water."

Throttle Was Cut.

Miss America did not strike the school at the full force of the trial run, as Wood had cut the throttle materially as the boat went into a slight curve in Biscayne Bay.

Wood thought he would be ready to send Miss America through her best paces for Odis Porter, the official timer, next week.

"Miss America's new superchargers, which have raised the combined horsepower of the four motors from 6,400 to 7,500 should function much better at sea level," said Wood.

The record, he said was established at 800 feet above sea level and the difference in levels would affect the carburization materially.

Virtually Same Craft.

Except for the superchargers, Miss America is virtually the same boat in which Wood raced to 124 miles an hour over the Detroit River, Michigan, in September, 1932.

The record was established shortly after he defeated Kaye Don in the Harmsworthy Trophy Races that year. Today's run was the first for Miss America since the successful defense of the Harmsworth in 1933 against the challenge of Hubert Scott Paine, of England.

Miss America X Receives Trial

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Campbell Here Today; to Be Honored

Auto King to Get New Opposition, Holland Report Says.

SIR MALCOLM CAMPBELL, the intrepid Briton who is no little chagrined at his failure to attain a speed of 300 miles per hour—or better—with the Bluebird, will be in Washington today to receive a silver plaque from Vice President Garner and a free lunch from the American Automobile Association.

High Government officials will witness the ceremonies on the east steps of the Capitol at 12:30 o'clock. The plaque, a gift of the City of Daytona Beach, where Sir Malcolm made his fifth successful assault on the world land speed mark, will be presented by the mayor of the city to the Vice President, who will deliver it into the British speed king's hands.

The ceremonies will be brief and the party will adjourn immediately to the Willard Hotel, where at 1:15 o'clock luncheon will be served. Ted Allen, secretary of the contest board of the A. A. A., is in charge of arrangements for Sir Malcolm's reception.

Later in the afternoon the Bluebird's steel-hearted pilot is scheduled to continue on to New York, where he will rest until Friday, when he sails for London and home. His famous machine will lie in the hold of the ship, crated.

The British ace and party is scheduled to arrive in Washington this morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Dutch Racer Challenges.

Cannes, March 26 (AP).—Hans von Zillenz Stuck, Dutch auto racer who is well known on European tracks, is secretly building a racing car with which to challenge Sir Malcolm Campbell's Bluebird, he said here today.

"It will be several months before the car is completed, but then Campbell and I will talk race," he said, and added:

"I doubt if Campbell will return to Florida for future trials because the new German auto travel street near Karldruhe is perfect for such races against time."

North-South Is Lure for 103 Golfers

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 26.—A field of 103 tomorrow will begin play in the thirty-third North and South open golf tournament, one of the oldest fixtures of the country.

Virtually every leading figure of professional golf except Olin Dutra, the reigning open champion, is included among the entries who will seek the $1,000 first prize money.

The fifteen prizes total $4,000.

More often than not, however, the North and South has proved a springboard to prominence for some comparative unknown rather than falling to one of the recognized leaders.

It was the first major tournament victory for Wiffy Cox, for Paul Runyan, the present P. G. A. titleholder, and for Henry Picard, the leading money winner this winter.

Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee topped the rest of the field in this last tune-up round, firing a 68. Ky Laffoon, Denver, was even with the long course's par 71.

Runyan also had 71, Johnny Farrell 72 and Willie Goggin, San Francisco 73.

Farrell played in a foresome with Willie Macfarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y.; Harry Cooper, Chicago, and Denny Shute, Philadelphia. All were playing well and shot approximately par.

Bobby Jones was here for the tournament, but will be a spectator. He played a round paired with Horton Smith in a best-ball match against Runyan and M. B. Reach, of New York. Runyan and Reach won, 2 and 1.

Lily Harper Upsets Foe, 4 and 3; Mrs. Vare Also Defeated.

By the Associated Press.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 26.—Two veterans of the fairways, Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, former national champion, and Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., fell by the wayside today in the opening round of the fifth annual Augusta Women's Invitational Golf Tournament.

Aside from the elimination of the favored Eastern stars in startling upsets, the first day of the match play was featured by the progression of other outstanding competitors, including Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., the defending champion.

The 18-year-old Virginia State champion, Lily Harper, of Norfolk, came through with a stunning 4-and-3 triumph over Miss Orcutt, increasing her margin on the final nine holes after possessing a 1-up advantage at the half way mark.

After running up a 2-hole lead on the outgoing nine, Miss Dean Van Landingham, of Charlotte, N. C., held her own the remainder of the way to topple the Philadelphia club wielder 2 up and advance to the quarter-finals.

Miss Bauer had little difficulty in conquering Mrs. Reginald Maxwell, of Augusta, 5 and 3. The defending title holder held a 3-up lead after nine holes.

In the quarter-final round tomorrow, Miss Bauer engages Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., last year's runner-up who eliminated Edith Beggs, of Cleveland, 1 up.

Miss Harper's next opponent is Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., who defeated Judith Gracey, of Augusta, 7 and 5, while Miss Van Landingham is paired against Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., the Carolinas champion, who conquered Mrs. B. A.Whittemore, of Boston, 3 and 1.

The tournament medalist, Peggy Wattles, of Buffalo, N. Y., moved into the quarter-final round after a hard match with Mrs. Charles Harbaugh, of Cleveland, Ohio, whom she defeated, 1 up.

CHICAGO, March 26.—This is a story that pleases me. There was a certain band leader who had married a girl athlete and the two were and are very much in love with one another. The girl athlete has always been independent. Really beautiful, the girl athlete had been given a chance in pictures and had not made a success of it. This may have been her fault, or the fault of those who never tried to find out just what her talents were. But anyway, the picture contract faded and the girl athlete, who is one of the few high spirits and fine characters that I have encountered in that business, was unhappy and worried because she wasn't carrying her share of the load. It was tough sledding for her husband, too, a famous figure in the picture and entertainment world, and once these two glamorous figures, who to the public are all glitter and wealth and life-of-ease, were down to their last $500 and didn't know where the next rent money was coming from.

Things did pick up a little later, and one night the band leader and his girl-athlete wife found themselves in a Chicago hotel where the engagement of his band was about to come to an end, and scouts and music agents were there to listen and see whether they cared to offer him another engagement elsewhere. Present, too, was a well-known night club entertainer and motion picture feature player and coming star, and the band leader asked her to sign with him that evening as a guest artist.

Please Try, Please.

Now, you must picture at least a surface-gay party, no matter what heavy hearts lay beneath. There was laughter and music, and wine, and banter, and the professional entertainer went on the stand and hummed into the microphone, with skill and charm, and every one applauded, including the girl athlete who had been unsuccessful in pictures for this reason, or that, and then suddenly, to the surprise of all, including herself, the girl-athlete found herself saying that she thought that she could do as well

As Deans Go, So Go the Cards

Famous Brothers Must Hold Up Otherwise Ancient Staff.

Cocky Club, Fortified in Other Positions, May Beat Itself.

(Another of a series of stories, gathered first-hand in the spring training camps, on the prospects of major league teams for the coming season.)

By Edward J. Neil,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 26.—It's an old sporting axiom—you can't go wrong sticking to the champions until you see somebody beat them, and right now the champions of everything in baseball are the almost unbelievable Dean boys and their supporting cast, the St. Louis Cardinals.

But there's one haunting element in the picture. That's the growing suspicion that the Cardinals just might not bother to let anybody beat them in the National League race this year; might in fact beat themselves, just as the World Champion Giants of 1933 did last year when they personally opened the world series gates to St. Louis.

The Cards are cocky, maybe too cocky.

There's no question the all-round power, youth, and fighting spirit of the club, but there is serious doubt that the pitching staff—the brothers Jerome Herman (Dizzy) and Paul (Daffy) Dean—can hold out through an entire season without more hurling support than the roster shows.

Deans Are Important.

Aside from the fact that they won between them all four Cardinal victories over Detroit, the importance of the Deans show up mightily in the figures for 1934. Between them they won 49 games for the cards, 30 for Dizzy, 19 for Daffy, and they participated in 89 of their 154 scheduled contests. They were "hot" when they were needed most. They must stay that way if the Cards are to be within striking distance of the top in September.

While Paul Dean, the quiet one, should develop this year into a 25-game pitcher, Dizzy hasn't looked any too well in training, getting shellacked particularly by the Giants, his cousins last year. The rest of St. Louis pitchers are noted chiefly for their longevity. Pat Malone, the fireball right-hander who came from the Cubs in exchange for Texas Jim Carleton, won 14 games last year. Carleton accounted for 16, and on paper the Cards haven't profited there. Wild Bill Hallahan, still erratic, is 32 now, but should turn in more than eight victories as he did in 1934.

Not So Formidable.

There's Bill Walker, another southpaw question mark, Dizzy Vance and Jess Haines, none of whom can be depended on regularly, while the best looking prospect is Ray Harrell, a big youngster who won 13 games for Rochester last season.

Once past the pitching staff, the Cards can match anything else in the league in spades. Bill Delancey, only 22, has developed amazingly as a catcher and he hits around .320.

Two additions, one the astonishing Charley Gelbert, fighting Leo Durocher for the shortstop berth after the calf and foot of one of his legs was almost shot away a couple of years ago in a hunting accident, have added considerable strength to an infield and outfield already mighty strong. Gelbert is leaping around spryly again but Durocher has the call. Terry Moore, a fleet young Texan who hit .328 for Columbus last year, has definitely taken over the centerfield job.

Powerhouse Joe Medwick, hero and goat of the world series, is back in left field, a distance clouter with a .320 stamp on him. Red Worthington, formerly with the Braves, is getting a real chance in right, where Jack Rothrock won a regular berth last season.

The infield as a whole outclasses anything in the league except the inner frontier of the Giants. Jim (Rip) Collins, with the arms of a blacksmith, is a .330 standout at first. There is still lots of spectacular baseball and .300 hitting in Frankie Frisch at second. John Leonard (Pepper) Martin, not hitting any more as he did when he personally tore the Athletics pitching staff apart in one world series, is still a fine third baseman with the spirit of a college freshman.

Woman Golf Star Gets Lowest Card

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 26.—Deborah Verry, 23-year-old Worcester, Mass., golfer, who was runner-up last year for the North and South women's golf championship, made the lowest nine-hole score ever turned in by a woman golfer here when she traversed the last nine holes of the No. 3 course today in 32, 4 under men's par.

This added to a 44 going out, gave her a 76 total and a 7-stroke lead over Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., five times Eastern champion, at the halfway mark in the Silver Foils Golf Society's 36-hole club championship.

Glenna Collett Vare and all the other women golf greats have played the No. 3 course, but none ever has beaten 37 for the 3,093-yard back nine.

Indians' Rally in Ninth Conquers Giants, 9-8

By the Associated Press.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 26. Earl Averill's ninth-inning home run climaxed a heavy-hitting contest today as the Cleveland Indians scored four runs in the final frame to defeat the New York Giants, 9 to 8, before a crowd of 2,000.

Averill drove out a double and single in the Indians' 17-hit attack off Frank Gabler and Clyde Castleman, while Phil Weintraub contributed a triple and three singles to the Giants' 13-hit offense off Clint Brown, Thornton Lee and Dennis Galehouse.

Combs Sees Action.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26 (AP). Earle Combs was in the Yankee line-up for the first time since being injured in St. Louis last July, but his presence failed to stop the Boston Braves from defeating New York, 4 to 3, and squaring the series at three games each today.

The Braves concentrated all of their scoring in the fourth, with Johnny Allen the victim. A single by Babe Ruth, followed by three successive bases on balls, another single by Ray Thompson and a long fly by Garrity went into the making of the four runs.

Ruth held down first base for five innings, and at bat walked once and connected with one hit in three times at the plate.

Braddock No. 1 Contender in New York

Schmeling Must Battle Him Before Baer, Is Commission Ruling.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 26.—From almost total obscurity 96 hours ago, James J. Braddock, Jersey City heavyweight, was skyrocketed to the fistic stratosphere today when the New York State Athletic Commission designated him its No. 1 contender for the championship boxing crown adorning Max Baer's curly head.

The commission's edict, issued after a two-hour session during which it refused to sanction Madison Square Garden's proposed title bout between Baer and Max Schmeling here in June, was tantamount to selecting the champion's opponent if Baer elects to defend the championship in this State. Ironically enough the commission's decision comes a little more than a year after the boxing fathers refused to sanction a bout between Braddock and Walter Neusel, declaring that Braddock was an unfit opponent.

Commissioner John R. Kilpatrick, president of the Garden corporation, faced with the alternative of having to stage the Baer-Schmeling fight out of the State, was made a counter proposition by the commission. It said Schmeling will be permitted to meet Baer in New York State provided he'll engage in a preliminary contest against Braddock and clearly demonstrate his superiority

Nats' Golf Crown To Bucky Harris

Manager, in Reversal of Form, Shoots 104.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Biloxi, Miss., March 26.—The champion golfer on the Washington Ball Club is Manager "Bucky" Harris, who today won a playoff for the title in the handicap tournament conducted for the players at the Edgewater golf course.

In a sensational reversal of form, Harris shaved 10 strokes off his performance of yesterday when he shot 104 for the 18 holes, By grace of his 44 handicap he won the playoff from Johnny Stone, who had a 55-stroke handicap; Joe Kuhel, who had 50 strokes, and Earl Whitehill, who had 18.

Harris accepted the costly driver presented as the prize and announced his retirement from the game. He had come out of six years' retirement from golf to win the tournament—aided by his handicap.

'Elusive Natie' Is Conceded A Chance

Joe Louis Will Find Our Mr. Brown Hard to Hit, Experts Declare.

By Bill McCormick.

LEADING local boxing experts yesterday conceded Natie Brown, Washington's outstanding heavyweight, an almost even chance against Joe Louis, sensational colored knockerout, in their ten-round battle in Detroit Friday night.

Maj. Harvey L. (Heinie) Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, believes Brown will decision the Black Diamond of Detroit.

"I believe Brown will decision Louis," Miller insists, "and base my belief largely on the fact that Brown is so difficult to hit in a vital spot. I don't think Louis ever has boxed a man who covers so adroitly and I believe he will be at a loss when Brown starts bobbing, weaving, blocking and tossing body punches."

The Elusive Mr. Brown.

"Joe Waterman, matchmaker for the Oregon State boxing commission, has a very interesting angle on Louis' punching power, Maj. Miller avers. "A former Navy guy and a former sparring partner of mine, Wateman writes 'Reds' Barry gave Joe Louis a much better fight than the press stories indicate. He was on his feet insisting he be allowed to go on when Referee Toby Irwin said, 'no.'"

Goldie Ahearn, matchmaker for Joe Turner at the Auditorium, is of the opinion that Brown has a very good chance against Louis.

"Brown is so hard to hit, Louis may never connect with him where it counts," Goldie believes. "I think Natie has an excellent chance of going the distance, and a good chance of earning the decision."

Writers Divided.

Local sports writers are divided in their opinion on the fight, Francis Stan of the Star concedes Brown an almost even chance.

"If Louis thinks he has a soft touch in Brown, he'd better think again," Stan has stated. "Brown is liable to outfumble any heavyweight in the world, and Louis may lack the experience to deal with

Eastman, Cunningham May Race Next Month

Philadelphia, March 26 (AP).—A half-mile race between Benjamin B. (Blazing Ben) Eastman, world's record holder for that distance, and Glenn Cunningham, ace miler from Kansas, was seen today as a possible special event in the forty-first annual Penn relay carnival here April 26 and 27.

An invitation to Eastman was announced by H. Jamison Swartz, manager, who listed Cunningham as a possible opponent.

"Bloomer Girl" Comes Back As 1935 "Streamline" Model

By the Associated Press.

WICHITA, Kans., March 26.—The "bloomer girl" is back, but you'd hardly know the modest miss. She's stream-lined.

Instead of the black sateen, full-pleated creation of yore, meeting black stockings at the knee, the modern number—on display tonight at the National Amateur Athletic Union Basket Ball Tournament here—differs little from the mannish shorts adopted almost universally by top flight women's teams in basket ball and other sports.

The principal difference between the new bloomers and shorts, to be technical, is a bit of elastic that holds extremely short pants close about the thighs. Two teams of the 29 here are wearing 'em.

The fluffy, pleated bloomer of yesteryear required about 3 yards of drab sateen. The snug garment of 1935 takes but a yard—and that's stretching it—of corduroy, flannel, silk or even sateen.

The last appearance of the obsolete bloomer here was in 1931, when a Northern team drew objection from an occupant of "bald-head" row. He shouted "I resent this, Mr. Referee," as a bloomer-clad substitute fluttered out on the court.

Tournament officials admit the success of the event depends upon pulchritude as well as expert basket ball.

Herman Smith, veteran official, says the turn to basket ball "scanties' took place about 1925, with his old Guthrie (Okla.) Redbirds.

"They changed from droopy bloomers and long-sleeved shirts when the Canadian champion Edmonton grads came to Guthrie ten years ago, wearing quite shocking costumes that would be considered very modest now," he said. "They wore no stockings then and none of the girls wears them now."

Powell Sure To Start in Center

Harris 'Sold' on D. C. Boy; Aims to Make Use of Speed.

Manager Pleased With Coppola; Nats in Action Today.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 26.—As far as the regular center-field job with the Nats is concerned everything is jake down here—Jake Powell.

Manager "Bucky" Harris was saying today as he saw Powell glide across the outfield, watched Powell smack pitches on the nose, and observed Powell streak around the bases, "How you gonna keep a guy like that outa the line-up?"

And the former Washington sandlotter undoubtedly has definitely ousted Fred Schulte from the center-field job Schulte has held since 1932 without a serious rival. It is the one sensational development of the Nats' training camp—the manner in which Powell has performed his way into the esteem of Manager Harris and Owner Clark Griffith.

"I'm satisfied he can do everything," Harris declared. "The only thing that remains to be proved is whether he can hit big league pitching. But he didn't get that .356 batting average up there in Albany because he had a lot of relations pitching in the league. That ought to mean something.

"What a help he should be to this team the way he can go. He's the perfect lead-off man with his smartness up there at the plate, and he's a dream in the outfield. The way he can race in for those plunkers in short center field is a treat to watch, but I like him best on the bases.

Heady Base-Runner.

"The way he can run, it's a shame he doesn't get a bigger lead off first base. That's how 90 per cent of the bases are stolen, getting that lead on the pitcher. But it's easy to see by that short lead he takes that he's not a foolish base runner, I like that about him. But I'm willing to bet I can take a longer lead off first than he's taking and get back to the base as quickly.

"Tomorrow, I'm going to have Jack Russell and Monte Weaver pitching while we show Powell how to get a longer lead. Those two pitchers have swell 'moves' toward first base and are tough on the base runners, but Powell, with a little instruction, ought to get away with longer leads. The bases he will be able to steal for us should make it soft for this club in a lotta games."

Powell will open the season in center field for the Nats as surely as the sun will rise in the East tomorrow. And not because of Clark Griffith's desire to inject some strictly local talent into the Nats' line-up for the benefit of the club exchequer. Harris is "sold" on the lad for the way he plays ball, and he has virtually told Powell the center field job is his.

Fred Schulte came to camp virtually down to weight and with a fine determination to show the young interloper that he was still a big leaguer, but his efforts have tailed off in comparison to Powell's brilliant work here. Schulte has demonstrated that he is the same sluggish hitter, the inferior of Powell on the base paths, and no marvel at racing in for the short flies.

Mistaken in Walker.

Early in the season Harris declared that his program as far as Powell was concerned would be one of watchful waiting. He said he would not make the same mistake in Powell's case that he did with Gerald Walker, of the Tigers, a few years ago. In spring training Harris, in an outburst of enthusiasm, gave Walker the center field job outright. The transformation into a big leaguer in a month was too much for Walker. He began to loaf and his playing suffered.

"I can't make that same mistake with Powell," Harris said. "The kid is too much of a ball player. He'll give you everything he's got every minute, and he don't know what it is to loaf. If, by chance, I'm

Nats' Mound Plans Balked by Hadley

Sore Arm Forces Harris to Seek Another Starter.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Biloxi, Miss., March 26.—Manager Bucky Harris, of the Nats, today revised his pitching estimates. The "Big Four" of the Washington pitching staff—Earl Whitehill, Monte Weaver, Irving Hadley and Bobby Burke—whom Harris had hoped would be certain regular starters, now numbers but three as a result of Hadley's sore arm.

The fast-balling right-hander obtained from the Browns in a trade last winter is entering the second week of his arm ailment and Harris today was fearful that he would not be ready to take a regular turn when the season opened. Hadley is the least advanced in training of all the club's pitchers.

"Hadley has to be right before I start him," said Harris. "There's no sense in trying to use a crippled pitcher out there. Right now, there's a job open for those other fellows who want a regular turn. It may be Walter Stewart, or Ed Linke, or Leon Pettit, or even Al Thomas. The fellow who shows me most between now and the opening of the season can have the job, until Hadley rounds into form."

Alger's Horses Win Three Races on Program at Tropical Park

Ned's Affinity Victor in Feature

Dark Vive and Chicle Ship Triumph for Detroit Man.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 26.—Frederick M. Alger, jr., young Detroit sportsman and owner of Azucar, winner of the rich Santa Anita Handicap, had a banner day here this afternoon. His yellow and blue silks were carried in three races by maidens, and all three graduated to give their owner a perfect score for the day.

Dark Vive, with Wright up, won the first event, paying $4.40. Chicle Ship, ridden by Litzenberger and paying $7.60, accounted for the second event. Then Ned's Affinity completed a triple by winning the fourth race, a 2-year-old dash. Mack Winters rode this $9.90-for-$2 shot to earn himself a double.

Ned's Affinity and Dark Vive were purchased two days ago from Willis Sharpe Kilmer. In all, Alger has acquired ten horses from the Binghamton sportsman, seven last year and three this season. Chicle Ship was in the 1934 batch.

Ned's Affinity never left any doubt as to her superiority over seven other juveniles. Winters broke the daughter of Neddie on top and she bounded into a long lead, scoring by 5 lengths. Transit Lady, coupled with Kievan, closed rapidly to take the place by three lengths from Playful Four. The time for the 4 furlongs was 0:47 3-5.

Alger recently departed for his home in Detroit.

Ned's Affinity.

Red Ensign doubtlessly was the best horse in the first race here today, but when the dust cleared it was Dark Vive, $4.40 favorite under Wayne Wright, that earned the purse. Wright outrode the veteran Tommy Malley and drove his mount home by a half length for his twentieth winner at the meeting. Be Shy was a tired third, 4 lengths behind. The latter stopped after racing with Dark Vive. Red Ensign, away last in the field of nine, made up ground with a rush, but Malley failed to do his mount justice in the drive home.

Chicle Ship, well supported, took ten other maidens into camp in the 6-furlong second event. The filly found stubborn contention coming from Flight of Gold but she finally prevailed in a spirited drive by a head, paying $7.60. Fan finished fastest of all to earn the show another head behind.

The daily double on Dark Vive and Happy Scot paid $81.20 for $2.

Experts Concede Brown a Chance

one as cagey and cute as the local lad."

Dick O'Brien of the Herald concedes Natie no chance of defeating Louis, but believes he has an even chance of staying the distance.

Mr. Moulden Speaks.

"I think Louis hits too hard to be defeated by Brown," O'Brien believes. "But I do think he will find it very difficult to park a knockout punch on a vital spot. I don't think Brown will dare open up enough to inflict any damage on Louis and therefore can't see the local boy winning."

Ray Moulden of the News believes Louis will knock out Brown.

"Louis is one of the best in the business," says Moulden. "Brown is perhaps the hardest heavyweight in the business to beat, but I think he's up against too much this time. I think Louis will knock him out. However, if it goes the distance, Louis can expect no better than a draw as Brown can outfumble anyone with whom he stays."

The writer believes Brown will stay rightside up for the entire 10 rounds, at the end of which he will be declared the winner over the Detroit Destroyer.

Sholl's Meets Trinity.

Sholl's Cafe and Trinity M. E. basket ball teams will meet tonight at 9:15 o'clock at Eastern High School in the final game of the play-off for the major league Community Center championship.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Tropical Park, March 26.

If you believe today's races were on the level, there was a reason. The Florida sheriffs, in convention at Miami, were guests of Bill Dwyer, the man who runs the race track. If the races weren't on the level—but we'll pass that. Fred Kraft is shipping the horses of the Ascot Stable to Bowie tomorrow. Jockey Mack Winters said this morning, "I'm 19 years old today and I guess I'll have to celebrate with a couple of winners." In the afternoon he rode Happy Scot, $39.70, and Ned's Affinity to victories. Looks as though we'll have to start keeping the birthdays of the other boys. It seems as though I went wrong today with Jockey Wright. He had only one winner in five shots. Paradisical, which I picked several times, won today when I didn't pick him. Clocker Mike is Bowie bound. Dick Pending has promised to let him make his headquarters around the barns. Mike has always been more than a green hand in picking up mudders at the Maryland course. So watch for his good things when the going gets tough. BILL.

First race—Cabochon ran a nice race yesterday to win, although he tired at the end. If sent back, he should take care of this company at a mile. Waterset gets in with light weight and should take charge of the chief end of the purse if the top one stays in the barn. Morning Fair weakened today, but has to be respected among this kind.

Second race—Idle Flirt has finished fast in the sprints and may gain a set of brackets here at a mile. Owner-Trainer-Jockey Abel will do the riding. Sandrunner and Chaumont to take care of the others.

Third race—Armful hasn't run up to those brilliant trials, but should do well in this field of maidens. Wright is scheduled to take charge of the saddle work. Balath and Evening Hour will be ready if the top one falters.

Fourth race—Quickly is assigned top weight in this sprint but Wright will do the riding. Breaks off the rail and should make every post a winning one. Broad Meadows was kidding us last out and belongs no worse than second. Volta Maid for the show.

Fifth race—Wild Pigeon burned a lot of oil in scoring the other day. Given lightweight for tomorrow and I'm stringing along. Captain Argo has 118 pounds and Wright but the Captain may falter in the stretch. Dokas has an outside chance of upsetting the dope.

Sixth race—Double R. has improved since coming over to this track, at least in trials. This route suits and I'm taking a chance on him. Master Lad looks like the one to beat. Porter Call is one that Clocker Mike loves. The Aenead might win but I've given him to the Seminole Indians.

Seventh race—Little Argo and Broken Up seem destined to fight it out for the main award in the finale. Arakay might awake to make a money appearance.

Post Time Set For 2:30 P.M. At Bowie

Fans Are Congratulating Track on Daily Double; Meet Opens Tuesday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BOWIE, Md., March 26—General Manager Joseph B. Boyle, of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association which ushers in the 1935 Easter racing season Tuesday at Bowie, has set the post time for 2:30 p. m.

It is General Manager Boyle's contention that with the days growing longer he can start each day's sport at 2:30 p. m., run off seven races on schedule time and still have turfites back in either Baltimore or Washington before darkness sets in.

Boyle has received thousands of letters, telegrams and phone calls praising him for his foresight in installing the "daily double" system of wagering for next month's racing. It will be held on the first and third races and who can tell, but that some ticket during the 11 day's sport will exceed the $7,205 payoff on March 18 at Tropical Park.

Milton Again Starter.

Seven races will be run daily, as usual, with Starter James Milton dispatching all fields from the Lynch-Boyle stall gate. This gate has given perfect satisfaction since being put into use and the decsiion to use it again strikes a popular chord with horsemen.

There won't be a shortage of horses at this meeting as there are close to 1,000 horses in training throughout the State with almost as many more due in before Sunday from the winter tracks in California, Texas, New Orleans, Arkansas and Florida.

Track Superintendent Dick Pending can care for a bit over 1,100 horses. The overflow will be quartered at Laurel, Pimlico and Marlboro.

Wayne D. Wright, riding sensation of the winter season in Florida, heads the big list which has applied for permission to accept mounts. Wright, who is under contract to Joseph E. Widener, of New York, will be handled by former Jockey Nick Huff, of Washington, but may not see action until the second week.

Workman to Ride.

Sonny Workman, peer of America's riding colony, who thrilled hundreds of thousands of turfites in California the past winter by turning in better than a .40 per cent average, the highest ever shown on the West Coast; will be here to ride the horses belonging to his contract employer Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney.

Up in the Air at the Barrier

Glossie, high-spirited filly, made this spectacular leap into the air at the start of a recent race at the Agua Caliente track, in Lower California. The cameraman caught her when none of her feet was on the ground. She toppled backward into the stall and was unable to run, but Jockey Phillips was only slightly hurt.

Braddock Rated No. 1 Challenger over the Jersey veteran who boosted his stock last Friday when he decisively defeated California's Art Lasky in 15 rounds.

Carnera Eliminated.

In the midst of these developments Primo Carnera was eliminated from championship contention. The giant Italian was offered a bout with Braddock, but his manager, Louis Soresi, turned it down because the Garden refused to comply with his demand that a $50,000 guaranty be posted to assure the winner a crack at the crown.

"Jimmy Johnston wouldn't comply and I've been fooled once by the Garden and once is enough," Soresi said. "Johnston has a habit of serving you the meat course with one hand and giving someone else your dessert with the other. I've had enough. Carnera has signed to meet Joe Louis, sensational Detroit Negro, here in June under the auspices of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club."

Kilpatrick and Johnston were inclined to accept the commission's decision in comparative silence.

"The Garden has a contract with Joe Jacobs for Schmeling to meet Baer," said John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission. "We feel Schmeling must meet and defeat Braddock to earn the right to meet Baer. If Braddock defeats Schmeling we'll merely reiterate his designation as our No. 1 contender."

Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling, firmly insisted the German would meet Baer or no one.

"Why should we fight Braddock first?" he roared. "He didn't display anything of a championship caliber against Lasky. If the commission is trying to drive the fight out of New York State they'll probably succeed."

Commissioner Bill Brown, who sponsored Braddock as the commission's leading contender, laughed at suggestions the Baer-Schmeling fight would be held elsewhere.

"What do we care," he smiled. "They can give the fight to Hitler and throw Joe Jacobs in for good luck

9 p. m., unlimited semifinals—Bureau of Investigation vs. Olmsted Grill.

THE first of six District A. A. U. basket ball championships was decided last night at Tech High's gym in the big games sponsored by The Post when the scrappy little midgets representing the Boys' Club Americans downed the Northeast Bays' Club Cardinals, 32-19 to win the 100-pound title.

Two other teams entered the finals and another, a girls outfit, entered the semifinal round.

Twin Oaks Black Hawks, with Harry Cole, a blonde, trim forward, as the hub of their high-powered attack, crushed Bovello Plumbers by the surprisingly large score of 37-17 to earn the right to meet Heurich Flashes for the 145-pound crown Saturday night. History repeats itself in this class, since the same two teams met in the finals last season, Heurich winning.

Gain Final Round.

Northeast Boys Club entered the finals of the 130-pound division with a sparkling 29-19 victory over the Ruff Riders, and will engage Young Men's Club tomorrow night for the championship.

Rockville qualified for the semifinals of the girls' division and a game with Leland tomorrow by defeating Agriculture, 23-14.

The Twin Oaks-Bovello game wasn't exciting, as the Black Hawks grabbed an early 6-1 lead, loafed enough to permit the Plumbers to match the score at 10-10, and then pranced into a 17-10 advantage at the turn.

There was no stopping of the lack Hawks in the closing session as young Mr. Cole pumped deadly shots through the hoops ably aided by Hunter, Olverson and Lassise.

Powell to Start In Nats' Outfield wrong, Powell will be out of there quicker than a light goes out, but I'll stake my judgment on him."

Undaunted by his disappointment in the failure of other young pitchers to justify their promise at the Nats' camp, Harris today figuratively went overboard in his praise of young Henry Coppola, the only rookie pitcher in the lot deemed worth keeping.

"He'll make you a great pitcher in another year," Harris told Griffith at the practice today. "At Mobile the other day, he made Ed Linke look like a minor leaguer. Three weeks ago, he didn't have a curve, but now he's got a swell assortment. He throws that curve in two speeds, and what's more he gets it over the plate.

"He'll be in there in relief roles if we need him when the season starts and he can have a regular job any time he proves himself up to it."

The first of the Nats' last two exhibition games here before the break-up of camp on Thursday night is scheduled tomorrow when Earl Whitehill and Leon Pettit oppose Kansas City, which invades Biloxi for a two-game series.

Alice Marble's Brother, Cop, Blows Into Town

Family Big Shucks at Handball and Tennis, So Visitor Says.

By John R. Vosburgh.

OFFICER DANIEL A. MARBLE, the chesty cop from San Francisco whose chief claims for athletic fame are the possession of some handball ability and being the brother of Alice Marble, the famous tennis player, arrived in Washington yesterday representing, he admitted, a goodly portion of the talent entered in the National A. A. U. handball championships opening here next week.

In between expressing his belief that Eastern handballers are sissies becaues they wear gloves while playing, and making various other statements of a similar nature, Officer Marble related that the United States could neither count on his free-swinging sister for Wightman Cup service this year nor on her presence in the national championships. The No. 3 ranking woman player of the country in 1933 will play very little tennis this year, her big brother declared.

"Alice hasn't touched a racket since that pleurisy attack knocked her flat in the middle of a match in France, last May," Marble said. "Right now she is in Los Angeles recuperating from the effects of it. She isn't even going to school. Her doctor thinks she will be able to play in about two months, maybe, but she won't do any tournament playing this year."

Miss Marble, now 21 years old, was one of the world's most promising feminine racket weilders last spring before she collapsed in a match with Mme. Heinroten, of France, in a series of international matches between American and French teams. According to her brother, her recovery will throw another firebrand into the struggle for world honors now being debated by followers of Helen Jacobs and Helen Wills Moody.

"She's just like I am," declared Officer Marble, "hot-tempered. And that isn't much of a fault. Alice has got better form today than Mrs. Moody ever had, or anybody else I've seen. Wait till next year when she gets going again."

Mrs. Moody, said Marble, is definitely out of the picture. She will never come back, he declared.

"Why, she's only playing about 20 minutes a day," he pointed out. "Just taking it easy. That back injury of hers was really bad."

Looking very little like a policeman in his rather sweaty-appearing semiwhite gym suit, Officer Marble, for four years San Francisco champion, nevertheless gave forth a rapid series of officious opinions on handball in the East as compared with that of the West.

He Will Show 'Em.

The startling prediction which he mailed in with his entry, that he was coming here "to show the boys out East how handball should be played," he is all set to carry out, the officer said.

"You can bet your money on this," he asserted in a draw-over-to-the-curb tone. "I figger we athletes of the West are far superior to those in the East. Am I right? Lookit all the champions—they all come from California. Lookit your tennis players, lookit Max Baer. Why——"

After getting back to earth and handball once more this true son of California, continued:

"We play a more strenuous game of handball in the West—bigger courts, you know—faster game. Why, if it wasn't for the money, we'd have the championship out on the coast all the time. Al Banway, of San Francisco, could beat Atchesston (of Memphis, the defending champion), the best day of his life. Banway was national champion for three years. If these guys are half as good as Banway, I'll be surprised."

"An' another thing. I can't see the sissy idea of playing this game with gloves. They spoil the game. This is a game of handball and should be classified as such."

Chisholm Scores 69 On Charlottesville Links

Charlottesville, Va., March 26.—In a foursome played yesterday on the links of the Farmington Country Club, Earl R. Chisholm, of this city, registered a 69. This low score was made, despite a bad exhibition of putting throughout the match. Three putts were required on the tenth and eighteenth holes, and short putts were missed on the seventh and eleventh greens.

Chisholm had as his partner Bennett H. Barnes, who turned in a 78. Their opponents were R. F. Loving, of the Farmington Country Club, and "Benny" Loving, pro from Petersburg. The former scored an 80, while the latter registered a 73.

Tricky Passes Due on D. C. Gridirons

Black Magic Now Being Groomed; Coaches Have Necessary Material.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

I'D like to have a dollar, or even half that amount, for every lateral pass or deceptive play attempted by a local college football team next season. I feel reasonably certain that by Thanksgiving Day I'd be snubbing Andy Mellon, who has quite a collection of the filthy lucre.

The local master minds, who heretofore have played the game strictly according to Hoyle, are going in for deception on a large scale. Black magic undreamed of here in the District is brewing in the three camps where spring training is in progress, and over at the fourth the grid chefs are poring over formulae.

Not that the old standard way of cracking a rib will be completely shunned, far from it. But the gentlemen are beginning to feel the need for the spectacular in their football to improve the District's rating in grade A competition. Even George Washington, the powerful but colorless Colonials, are going in for trick stuff, I have been given to understand.

Material Abundant.

The abundant supply of better-than-average material corralled by the head hunters is one reason for this sudden turn of events. A football team of human dray horses can not afford to essay the role of show horses. The players look dumb and foolish and lose ball games, and the coach looks ridiculous in the fans' eyes, and probably feels worse than he looks.

George Washington has Leemans as the premier danseuse next season; Maryland has Guckeyson, Stonebraker and one or two others; Catholic University has a couple of freshmen suffering from bloated heads—a malady Dr. Bergman will cure in his own good time—Makofske, Secino, and one or two others; and at Georgetown Jack Hagerty has Joe Meglin and a couple of men up from the frosh who may deliver the goods.

Deceptive attacks built around tried and dependable men who know the score, can put a mighty wallop into District football, from both spectators' and players' viewpoint. It wouldn't do any harm at the box office, either.

Maryland expects to enjoy its best year in baseball and track this season, and rightly so. Burt Shipley's baseball squad isn't as bad off for pitching as he feared, while there has never been a doubt concerning the track squad's ability.

Georgetown's freshman baseball team will meet the varsity Saturday in their first game and if "Tick-Tock" Nickatockis pitches for the frosh, you can hock the family jewels that they'll win. The frosh open April 5, meeting Harvard at the Hilltop.

Umpires Gather To Organize Club

Maryland Arbiters Meet in Frederick Hotel.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., March 26.—Preliminary plans for the organization of an umpires' association were made at a meeting of officials of city and county baseball clubs at the Francis Scott Key Hotel last night. M. J. Thompson, Emmitsburg, president of the Frederick County League, embracing eight clubs; Rollin J. Atkinson, this city, president of the Tricounty Baseball League, embracing 16 teams in Frederick, Carroll and Montgomery counties; Edward M. Akers, representing the Frederick Hustlers of the old Blue Ridge League, which will play independent games this season, and A. M. Ecker, Thurmont, veteran former Blue Ridge League umpire, spoke in favor of a permanent umpires' organization.

It was pointed out that the association is not to demand increase of salary or any other advantage, but to improve umpiring in a general way. Mr. Atkinson recommended a school for umpires. It was decided to meet April 1 and organize. Bernie Brooks, well-known umpire of this city, presided, and others present included Steiner Smith, Lawrence Dorsey, Charles Staley, John Curry and Russell Etzler, county league and city club umpires.

'Gay Cockade' Real Threat In Circuit

Virginia Mare at Prime After Successes of Last Year.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., March 26.—An entry to be reckoned with on the Virginia circuit of horse shows this season is Gay Cockade, a dark bay mare, owned by W. B. Bogert, of Ben Coolyn, near Keswick.

This mare, handled last year by Mr. Morris Clark, of Orange, had a remarkably successful season, and is right now in her prime. She started last May by capturing first place in the jumping class at the Fredericksburg Horse Show, and at the Orange Show in July annexed the blue ribbon in the handicap class, with the jumps at 4 feet 6 inches; was second in the open-to-all event, and third in the touch-and-out class.

Sent to the Erie County Agricultural Society Horse Show at Buffalo late in August, Gay Cockade captured nine ribbons, winning first place in the Sweepstake Jumping class, and second place in road hacks, pair hunters, touch and out, second touch and out, and knock down and out, and was reserve champion in the champion touch and out class.

The clever jumper climaxed the season by capturing the $1,000 Royal York Jumper Stake at the Royal Winter Show in Toronto, Canada, late in November. Though two jumps were set at 9 feet, the stake attracted 23 entries. Gay Cockade was one of the two clean on the first round, and, returning to jump again, scored ½ fault to the 1½ faults of Miss Susan Ross' Robin, a Toronto entry, ridden by that capable Canadian, Miss Norah Gordon.

Gay Cockade was foaled April 25, 1925, and was registered in the American Halfbred Horse Association in Genesee, N. Y. In her career she has won many blue ribbons, notably the saddle horse championship at Richmond.

Steady Selling Brings Stocks To Lower Level

Poor Rail Earnings Discourage Buying in Dull Market.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 26.—The force of liquidation appeared to be wearing down the morale of stock buyers today and bids were scarce except at concessions, especially in the rail shares.

Wall street's forebodings of yesterday concerning possible rail reorganizations, while not confirmed by anything specific in the day's news, were intensified by the number of poor February earnings reports appearing during the session. The better appearance of weekly loadings was discounted in many quarters as reflecting mainly the fears of coal buyers over possibilities of a strike in the bituminous industry.

As in the previous stock market session, the declining trend was accompanied by a minimum of turnover. Volume in the stock exchange was only 441,800 shares. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks was .04 lower at 35.7.

Despite the lack of enthusiasm for equities the tone of corporate news was encouraging on the whole. Eastman Kodak's 1934 report appearing overnight showed share earnings of $6.28, compared with $4.76 in 1933, while American Radiator, Phelps-Dodge and Bendix were all able to report the conversion of previous net losses into profits last year. American Can declared its regular quarterly dividend of $1. Norfok & Western confirmed Wall street predictions by calling for redemption $35,000,000 of bonds not due until 1944.

Grain Futures Average Higher

Cotton Rise Followed by Declines of From 1 to 5 Points.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 26.—Prices of grain futures averaged higher today despite the extreme dullness of the market. Moderate buying influenced by higher Liverpool wheat prices gave the wheat market here a bulge of about a cent soon after the opening, but profit taking whittled the gain. Little speculative interest and hseitancy pending political and monetary developments in Europe hampered the trade.

With caution prevailing, wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ cent higher; May, 93¾-93⅞, and corn was 1⅛ down to 1 cent up; May, 77⅞-78. Oats were unchanged to ¼ higher, rye easy and barley strong. Short coverings on stop-loss orders forced May barley up 4¼ cents to 67¾ cents per bushel, within ¾ of the day's limit under trading rules.

Drought and Adjustment Program Reduces Number of All Animals on Farms to Lowest Point Recorded in This Century.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, March 26.—The decline in the Nation's inventory of farm animals during 1934, owing to the agricultural adjustment program and the drought, was considerably larger than many earlier estimates had indicated. The Department of Agriculture's year-end report on live stock numbers shows a 13 per cent decline in the number of animals on farms, the largest drop for one year on record. Never before during this century has the number of all animals on farms fallen as low as it is at present.

While all categories of farm animals have shown a decline in numbers, the drop was by no means evenly distributed. The decimation of hog supplies was most striking, the number on farms at the end of 1934 being 35 per cent lower than at the beginning. In fact, the hog supply on the farms is now the lowest in about half a century. Cattle numbers are down 11 per cent, but it must be remembered that it takes roughly twice as long to build up breeding stock in the case of cattle than in hogs.

Live stock interests express particular concern over the situation because the reduction in breeding stock, by limiting future animal production, may affect meat production and prices for a long time to come.

As viewed over a longer period of time, the cattle situation is not nearly as serious as that involving hogs. At the beginning of this year 61,000,000 head of cattle were reported on farms. The number was 64,000,000 in 1905, and 63,000,000 ten years later. By 1920, under the stimulus of high war-time prices, the supply rose to 70,000,000. Then followed a decade of depression and decline in the cattle-raising industry, which gave rise to much unrest in the West. By 1930 cattle numbers were down to 60,000,000, and at present the number is moderately above the low point of the century.

Population Increase Broadened Market.

Throughout this period, the increase in population opened a steadily expanding market for cattle products at home. However, foreign markets for beef and allied products have contracted because of trade barriers, competition from cheaper sources of supply and similar factors, so that no substantial net shortage of supply is yet indicated. Plans for a cattle control program are being wisely abandoned this year, it seems, although farmers will get benefit payments just the same.

The situation as regards hogs is very much more acute. As a result of the hog-killing program late in 1933 and the shortage and high price of corn caused by the AAA and the drought, the supply at the beginning of this year was down to 37,000,000 hogs and pigs all told. In 1905 the country had 52,000,000, and in 1920 there were 60,000,000 hogs on farms. The total did not drop below 52,000,000 after 1920 until last year.

This reduction in live stock numbers, particularly in the case of hogs, promises to cause a protracted period of higher prices for meats. Regardless of what happens to prices of other foods, the housewife must look forward to seeing a substantially larger portion of the family budget going to pay the meat bill. Already, a drop of 7½ per cent in meat consumption was reported in January, as compared with the same month a year ago.

Supply of Pork Will Be Restricted.

The problem this year will require careful handling. From the abnormally small number of hogs now on farms, it is likely a substantial proportion will be taken to supply breeding stock, so that the current supply of pork and its products must obviously suffer proportionately. On the other hand, if this is not done, and done generously, the country will face for next year another acute shortage of such products. In fact, whether it is at all possible, even with Spartan diversion of available hogs for breeding purposes this year, to restore the situation to anything like normal within the short period of a year depends in a large measure upon the age grouping of existing stock on farms and other technical factors.

Despite the severe reduction in the hog supply, the AAA reduction agreements require signatories to keep their hog litters this year 10 per cent below the 1932 and 1933 levels. If weather conditions are adverse, and if the price of corn should rise again relative to hogs, even a modest beginning may not be made this year to restock our farms with breeding hogs. Those who followed Russia's frantic efforts to replenish her live stock supplies after animals had been slaughtered freely in connection with the farm collectivization program will know how difficult it is to undo the mischief of an excessive slaughter of farm animals. The output of farm live stock can not be adjusted nearly as easily as the production of field crops. Replenishment of the Nation's animal supply, therefore, may prove a very difficult and protacted task, and meanwhile high meat prices cause hardship to consumers and may modify meat consumption habits for years to come.

Belga Declines 2c. in Prospect Of Devaluation

By the Associated Press.

The most severe decline in Belgian belgas since post-war stabilization featured foreign exchange markets yesterday. The Belgian unit dipped more than 2 cents to 20.10 in New York before steadying to around 20.40. Early devaluation of the currency was expected to follow.

In Paris the dollar was unchanged at an equivalent of 6.59 cents to the franc and in New York francs were unchanged at 6.59½ cents.

Stocks—Liquidation continued to bring lower prices. Rails again were the weakest section. Sales for the day were 441,800 shares.

Bonds — Secondary rails disturbed the entire corporate section. Poor earnings reports for the past month and adverse weather conditions in agricultural sections threw their weight on the rails. Federals were steady and little changed. Transfers increased to $11,728,000.

Curb — Volume and prices showed little intention of making any headway. Sales for the day were 93,000 shares.

Grains—Prices climbed higher despite a dull market. Higher Liverpool prices bulged quotations about a cent early to slip back on profit taking. May wheat closed at 93¾ and May corn at 77⅞.

Cotton—Irregular, advancing early and reacting sharply toward the close. Final prices steady at net declines of 1 to 5 points. May cotton closed at 11.03.

Retail Sales Here up 19.2% In Past Month

Commerce, Savings Club Is Founded to Promote Customer Relations.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Department store sales in the District during February increased 19.2 per cent over the corresponding month of 1934, according to a preliminary survey announced yesterday by the Fifth Federal Reserve Bank in Richmond.

This gain bettered by a 6.5 per cent margin the sales increase shown by the entire Fifth Federal Reserve District which includes Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, as well as Washnigton. The advance here for the first two months of 1935 was reported at 15.9 per cent, while the whole Reserve District gained but 9.3 per cent in the same period.

Collection of accounts receivable the first of the month, on the other hand, lagged slightly behind the Reserve district's average of 21.8 per cent; 27.1 per cent was turned in here before the first of March.

In Richmond collections were substantially higher with 29.9 per cent received. altimore reported 27.6 per cent perfect, while a group of other cities turned in an average of 28.9 per cent.

Stocks on hand in local department stores decreased 2.1 per cent below February of last year, but were 11.1 per cent larger than at the end of January.

Siddons Names Committee.

Frederick P. H. Siddons, president of the D. C. Bankers Association, yesterday announced the appointment of William Simmons, trust officer of the Liberty National Bank, as chairman of the hotel committee for the 1935 convention of the D. C. Bankers Association, to be held at Hot Springs, Va., May 30 to June 2.

Other members of the committee are: Archibald McLachlen, secretary and assistant treasurer of the McLachlen Banking Corporation, vice chairman; Bruce Baird, vice president and trust officer of the National Savings & Trust Co.; C. F. Jacobson, cashier of the National Metropolitan Bank; A. H. Lawson, vice president and real estate officer of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., and J. Frank White, vice president and cashier of the National Bank of Washington.

Commerce and Savings Club.

W. W. Stiver, jr., was elected president of the newly formed Bank of Commerce and Savings Employes Club at the first organization meeting, held yesterday. Founded to promote better customer relations and occasional opportunities for social get-togethers of the bank's coworkers, the plan has been enthusiastically indorsed by a number of local bankers.

Other officers of the club were named also and include Thomas J. Norris, vice president, and Philip M. Grove, secretary. It is expected that a number of similar clubs will be organized in other Washington banks in the near future. Supporters of the organization believe that by fostering a spirit of wholesome competition among a number of these clubs would create increased good will and closer cooperation among the financial institutions.

Reduced Copper Production Suggested as Cure for Plight

Research Activities Advocated by R. C. Stanley, President of International Nickel, Which Reports $18,487,478 Profit for 1934.

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, March 26.—A net profit in 1934 of $18,487,478 was reported today by the International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., compared with a net of $9,662,584. The figures are in Canadian dollars, quoted today at 99.22 cents in United States currency.

"That your company in 1934 approached its record of 1929 ($22,235,996) is due in large measure to two basic factors, one being its success in developing new uses for nickel, and the other the efficiencies realized in mines and plants as a result of the large expenditures made in recent years for mine developments and plant improvements," it was stated in the annual report by Robert C. Stanley, president.

On the world copper market, Stanley said, "repeated attempts to rationalize this industry have failed, due to a variety of reasons, such as divergent interests, by-product copper, prohibitive tariffs and other causes.

"It would seem that a curtailment agreement amongst all producers would be a practical procedure that should prove advantageous to all concerned. The record of world conferences, however, indicates how well-nigh impossible it is to find a common denominator for the copper industry.

"I am inclined to think that this industry as a whole, and all of its constituent companies as well, might intensify sales development and research activities, and inaugurate aggressive merchandising, as possibly a slower but surer cure for the ills of overproduction."

The report showed the number of shareholders in Canada decreased from 40.9 per cent in 1934 to 39.7 in 1935, while those in the United States increased from 38.4 to 39.4 per cent of the total as of March 1 in each year. The number of shares held in Canada, however, increased from 21.6 per cent to 21.8 per cent, while holdings in the United States decreased from 42.6 to 40.8 per cent.

Trade Balance $46,791,000 Off From a Year Ago

By the Associated Press.

United States exports in February were shown by Department of Commerce figures yesterday to have declined less than usual from January, while imports also fell more than customary.

Exports, valued at $163,006,000, fell 7 per cent from January, whereas the usual decrease over a long period of years is 11 per cent.

Imports, valued at $152,537,000, fell 9 per cent from January, compared with a usual decline of 2 per cent.

The excess of exports in February, the so-called favorable balance of trade, was $10,469,000, compared with a favorable balance in February, 1934, of $29,976,000.

For the first two months of this year the favorable balance was $19,699,000, against $66,490,000 in the first two months of 1934.

Mail Pay Cuts United Air Net

Reduction Is $2,973,024; Passenger and Express Revenue Gains.

United Air Lines Transport Corporation operated at a loss of $2,283,525.31 in 1934, although it substantially increased its passenger and express business, shows the annual report to stockholders made public yesterday by W. A. Patterson, president. Of this loss, $1,117,567.88 was incurred during the 90-day period when the company was deprived of all mail revenue. Additional operating losses have resulted from carriage of air mail, after restoration of mail contracts, at substantially reduced pound-mile rates.

The report contains a plea for more adequate rate of pay for carriage of air mail as United is carrying approximately 47 per cent of all air mail in the United States.

Revenue from passenger and express totaled $4,450,209.43 contrasted with $4,088,774.71 in 1933.

This gain was offset by mail pay of only $2,340,135.37, against $5,313,159.47 in 1933, although United carried approximately as much mail in nine months last year as it did the entire year of 1933. The total revenue of United last year was $6,790,344.80, a decline of $2,611,589.38 from the previous year, due to the air-mail situation.

In line with the company's policy of replacing engines after 2,500 hours of service, new 550-horsepower supercharged Wasp motors are being installed in the entire fleet.

Phelps Dodge Corporation, one of the three largest domestic copper producers, reports a net income in 1934 of $3,224,914 after charges including operating expenses, taxes, depreciation and expense of shutdown properties, but before depletion, against a net deficit in 1933 of $83,569.

The corporation, which last month acquired the United Verde Copper Co., gave 1934 production from its own mines, together with metals produced from purchased ores treated at the Douglas smelter, at 101,814,629 pounds of copper, 3,247,718 ounces of silver, and 68,889 ounces of gold.

Continental Oil Co. (U.P.) in its annual report stresses rising costs of business operation, making investors wary of new commitments. The company reported 1934 earnings of $4,875,357, equivalent to $1.03 a share, compared with $2,275,860, equivalent to 48 cents a share last year. But the report said: "The tax burden of the company increased during 1934 and it is likely, judging from the measures introduced in many of the legislatures now in session, the trend will continue."

Hahn Department Stores, Inc., which coordinates operation of a widespread group of stores, reports a net profit in 1934 of $1,127,331, compared with a net in 1933 of $24,745.

Standard Oil Co. of Ohio reports an operating loss of $1,657,190 in 1934, compared to a deficit of $823,356 the previous year. The report asserted, however, "a number of encouraging signs have begun to appear. For the first time in many years, for example, in 1935 January and February, which are the months of lowest gasoline consumption, have shown an improvement in financial results as compared with the last quarter of the previous year."

Business Looks To Washington

Legislative Doubts Are a Handicap, Says Standard Statistics.

New York, March 26.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, currently comments as follows:

"The eyes of the business world continue to be focused on Washington, and legislative trends are providing little in the way of clearing up the growing spirit of pessimism which has been in evidence for the last several months.

"Although industrial volumes continue to make a relatively satisfactory showing, the fog of uncertainty which currently shrouds the business outlook will probably encourage managements to further restrict forward planning during early future weeks. Adverse business factors of a seasonal nature will be operative during the late spring, and with political trends doing little to help sentiment, there is scant basis for adopting other than a conservative attitude toward business for the next several months at least.

"It is quite possible, of course, that the reasons for the current gloom are more imaginary than real. Much of the restrictive legislation being proposed never will be enacted. Public opposition to many of the unsound proposals, such as the public utility holding bill, is increasing. Moreover, the difficulty which Congress has encountered in enactment of even a few of the minor bills indicates that the legislators will no longer pass laws indiscriminately under the pretense of a national emergency."

They are also legal investments, in the opinion of counsel, for State and municipal officers, banks and savings banks, insurance companies, trustees and other fiduciaries in New York and New Jersey.

New York, March 26.—Speyer & Co. announced tonight the receipt of the following telegram from Frank C. Ferguson, chairman of the Port of New York Authority:

"We have no present intention of calling general and refunding bonds and in view of the importance of the whole refunding program as a practicable matter it is not likely that any call will be made before 1940."

Federal Bonds Resist General Sales Pressure

Many Rail Issues Are 1 to 2 Points Lower; Utilities Steady.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 26.—Secondary railroad issues had another sinking spell on the bond market today, which threw a scare into the entire corporate section. United States Governments were not disturbed and ended a shade higher.

A combination of poor earnings reports for February and continued adverse weather conditions in the agricultural sections of the Mid-west proved fertile pastures in which unconfirmed receivership rumors thrived and grew big.

United States Governments enjoyed the largest turnover in several days, but the demand and supply was too well balanced to allow of much progress. Several of the more active Treasury issues got up as much as 6-32ds, but the advances elsewhere were around 2-32ds and some ended unchanged.

Heaviest losers among the slippery rails were obligations of the Baltimore & Ohio, Atlantic Coast Line, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Erie, Delaware & Hudson, New York Central, Southern Railway, Katy, and Nickel Plate, most of which were 1 to 2 or more points lower.

In the utility and industrial section a more even tone prevailed. Columbia Gas 5s advanced 1¼ points to 79¼, Chile Copper 5s were ½ higher at 85, but losses of around the same amount were shown by North American Edison 5½s at 88 and Youngstown Sheet & Tube 5s at 92½. A brisk advance in some of the South and Central American bonds featured the foreign section.

Transfers aggregated $11,728,000, par value, compared with $8,279,000 on Monday.

Manufacturing Cost Down, but Overhead Rises

National Survey Makes Analysis of Figures From 1914 to 1933.

New York, March 26.—The National Industrial Conference Board made public today an advance summary of a comprehensive analysis of costs and profits in manufacture covering the 20-year period, 1914 to 1933. In brief, the findings of the board are as follows:

1. In the past 20 years manufacturing operations in this country were characterized by a generally downward trend in the proportion of material costs to total costs, unsteady movements in labor costs, a substantial increase in overhead and uncertain movement in profits.

2. Manufacturers' sales. The value of manufactured goods sold at producers' prices increased from $15,323,000,000 in 1914 to $47,289,000,000 in 1929. In 1933 it declined to $20,735,000,000.

3. Cost of materials. Of total manufacturers' receipts for goods sold to wholesalers, jobbers and retailers, the part expended for the purchase of materials, fuel and energy and containers varied from 29.6 per cent to 38.4 per cent.

4. Wages. The cost of direct labor as reflected in the wage payments varied between 24.6 per cent and 28.2 per cent of the total value of goods sold. The proportion of direct labor costs in the total increased from 1914 through 1923, when a decline set in. In 1929 wages represented 24.6 per cent of the total value of goods sold. The share of wages remained practically unchanged in 1931 and advanced to 25.4 per cent of the total in 1933.

5. Salaries showed no marked upward movement from 1914 to 1929, fluctuating between 7.2 per cent and 8.9 per cent. This proportion advanced to 12.5 per cent in 1931 and 12.4 per cent in 1933.

6. Overhead costs have absorbed an increasing proportion of the total value of goods sold since 1914. In 1929 the total was 28.9 per cent of the total value of receipts for goods, as compared with 22.3 per cent in 1919. In 1931 these costs were 36.5 per cent of receipts.

7. Profits, the residuals of manufacturers' receipts after all charges are met, were affected by conditions obtaining at any given time. In 1919 a year of shortage of goods, profits were 6.6 per cent of the receipts from the sale of goods. In 1931 a deficit of 5.5 per cent was incurred. In the years from 1919 through 1929 the post-war period leading up to the depression, the rate of profit moved neither consistently upward nor downward, but fluctuated within a fairly wide range.

Wall Street Briefs.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 26.—General Electric Co. and the Westinghouse Lamp Co. today announced reduction in prices of incandescent lamps. The former's reduction averages 21 per cent in the price list of 60 per cent of all large incandescent lamps effective April 1. The Westinghouse cut was aproximately the same on lamps comprising 60 per cent of its production.

The Railroad Credit Corporation announced another distribution for its carrier-creditors. The corporation will repay $726,391, of which $351,351 will be in cash and $375,040 in credits on obligations due the corporation. This will mark the fifteenth liquidating distribution. Total repayments aggregate $22,079,735, or 30 per cent of the fund originally made available to the corporation for the assistance of the weaker roads.

A. E. Barit, vice president and general manager of Hudson Motor Co., said today the largest weekly output for the year had been struck this week with the production schedule at 2,746 cars. Output for March will be 33 per cent above February, when total of 7,500 cars was shipped from the factory. The company has put back about 1,000 former workers on the pay roll.

Some of the February railroad statements issued to date have shown up well in net operating income, but the favorable comparisons reflect reduced charges for maintenance as an offset to increased transportation costs, including the 5 per cent increase in wages. This was true of Southern Pacific which carried into net operating income about $885,000 of the $1,285,000 increase in gross revenues over a year ago, in spite of a $680,000 increase in transportation costs.

By Morgan Baker.

THERE should be a labor representative on the Civil Service Commission in order to allay fears that the commission tends to work with administrative officials against the interests of the workers, Representative William I. Sirovich, chairman of the special House Civil Service committee, believes.

BAKER.

"As long as we have a Board of Appeals to protect the working people," Representative Sirovich said, "I am content. But, I think that in the Civil Service Commission there should be some member who represents the working class of our country, just as the President has appointed in the NRA, men who represent the working people, and by doing that we would eliminate from the minds of the men and women in the Government service the thought that the Civil Service Commission can not be entrusted to execute justice.

"I, for one, have the greatest confidence in the world in the Civil Service Commission and feel that the Civil Service Commission represents the public. I nope the time is not distant when the Civil Service Commission will have some member, who also has been a member of a union, to look after the interests of the working people."

Tennis Association Elects.

The Smithsonian Institution Tennis Association held its annual meeting yesterday and reelected the following officers:

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, president; Nicholas W. Dorsey, vice president, and Thomas F. Clark (F), secretary-treasurer. In the absence of Mr. Clark, Anthony W. Wilding acted as secretary pro tem. A committee to arrange tournaments was appointed, consisting of Dr. Florence E. Meier, Mr. Clark and Jack Halliday (C).

Leslie A. Skinner (F), War, has just obtained a patent for a rocket projectile that is regarded as a valuable addition to American defense.

War Postettes.

Miss Martha L. Blanchard (P), assistant chief clerk, Office Chief of Finance, entertained at tea this week at her home in the West View Apartment. Mrs. Lillian J. Smart, Finance, has resigned her position and is leaving for her new home at Dwight, Ill. Her office friends entertained last Saturday night in her honor. Miss Emma McKnett, Office Chief of Finance, recently enjoyed a visit with friends at Easton, Md.

Dr. Schmitt Lands.

Dr. Waldo L. Schmitt, curator of Marine Invertebrates, National Museum, has returned from an exploring trip of four months aboard the yacht Velero III in the Galapagos Islands with a collection of more than 3,000 specimens of marine life, including rare crabs and porpoises. Dr. Schmitt is spending some time in Denver before resuming work at the museum.

The expedition was headed by Capt. G. Allan Hancock, owner of the yacht, and their party was the first to investigate the mysterious depths in the Galapagos group.

Under direction of Miss Gertrude Coyle, president, the executive board of War Department Local, No. 261, NFFE, has completed its plans for an intensive membership drive. Key members in the plans are William Hoffheins, Jesse Lay, Sharpe Ireland, Walter P. Duffy, A. W. Clark, Glenn A. Speers and Pearle Cooper (C).

ON the wall of the office of the Chief of Marketing Research and Service Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, appears a large beautifully colored chart entitled "Extent of Knowledge of Distribution." A glance at the chart, then at the congested condition of the division where, as one employe said, "the clerks are compelled to wear brass plates on their elbows to keep their clothes from fraying as they squeeze through from desk to desk," impells us to observe that sometimes it does not pay to advertise.

Business Feels Spring Uplift

Autos, Clearings, Carloadings, Retail Trade Indicate Confidence.

By the Associated Press.

Despite a dust-choked Midwest, business and industry stepped forward last week into the promised land of spring trade. Hand in hand as leaders of the week's statistics, were automobile production and bank clearings.

Motor makers produced 100,065 units last week, as estimated by Cram's, the first time since 1930 that the 100,000 mark has been passed. The rise from the previous week was a little less than 3,000 units.

Bank clearings for the week ended Wednesday were the highest this year, and some analysts interpreted this to mean the general public had started its long-delayed spring buying in anticipation of this year's late Easter, although income tax payments undoubtedly were a potent factor in swelling the total.

Steel Makers Hopeful.

Unfavorable was steel action in falling from 47.1 to 46.8 per cent of capacity, a small change but a continuation of the recent decline. Consumers were drawing on their own stocks, but steel producers looked hopefully toward the railroads, where a tremendous steel need has been held in check by meager earnings.

From the previous week the figures on electric power production and freight car loadings carried their heartening message into last week by registering rises. The slight increase in lumber production, however, was less than had been expected.

Retail trade, under the impetus of favorable weather, advanced in most sections, but dust storms settled grime on many a cash register in stores stilled by the catastrophe.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Ernest Hutcheson, pianist, is making his only broadcast this season on Columbia's Concert Hall program, 10:30 this evening. Unfortunately this program will not be carried locally but may be heard on WABC, 860 kilocycles.

The program is devoted to compositions by Mendelssohn. Mr. Hutcheson's contribution is the concerto in G minor. The other selection is overture "Fingal's Cave."

In past years, Mr. Hutcheson's radio performances have, perhaps, been as closely followed as those of any other concert pianist. Music lovers and students will welcome this opportunity to hear him again.

Other musical programs:

Curtis Institute of Music program features chamber music—played by the Trio Classique, flute, violin and viola. Selections are by Handel, Beethoven, de Wailly and Georges Enesco. WJSV, 4:15 p. m.

Lily Pons sings Saint-Saens "Rossignol de Parisatys" Scott's "Lullaby" and Benedict's "Carnival of Venice." WJSV, 9 p. m.

Here and there:

Mary Pickford and troupe present "Coquette." John Mack Brown plays opposite the star, WRC, 8 p. m.

Benny Goodman and orchestra, Helen Ward, blues singer, and Roy Hendricks are on Radio City Matinee, WMAL, 2 p. m.

Guy Robertson, star of Broadway's current show, "The Great Waltz," is on Everette Marshall's spot, WJSV, 8:30 p. m.

Kate Smith presents Bobby LaBranche, society's favorite singer, who makes his radio debut, WJSV, 3 p. m.

Fred Allen's show goes into its second year with all but two of the original cast on hand. Those lost are John Brown, English character actor, and Lionel Stander, who has gone to Hollywood. More amateurs troop to the mike at 9 p. m., WRC.

Ray Nobel and his orchestra give you another program of classic jazz, WRC, 10:30 p. m.

"Your Timekeeper," WRC's morning minute-man asked his early-rising public what they thought about daylight saving time. Within three or four days he had received nearly 300 letters, which proved to his mind at least that he had an audience. Most writers were in favor of daylight saving time.

Baby Bill Bivens caused no end of flurry in WJSV studios yesterday by showing up with a suitbox under his arm and a bright green hat on his head. The suitbox contained a green suit, as light and fresh as the first buds of spring.

Controversy arose. Should Mr. Bivens wear the suit during his "Man in the Street" broadcasts? The office opinion still is divided.

Art Godfrey's amateur show will go on in the salon de nations, in the Washington Hotel, next Saturday night. Come and bring your friends.

Susie Belle on the Home Makers program is troubled with a ghost. Helpful ghost, because it gives Susie Belle (besides an awful fright) many hints for Washington housewives. WRC, 10 p. m.

Roman Colony Of Americans Totals 1,768

By the United Press.

Rome.—Americans living in the Rome area number 1,768 despite the fall in the dollar and high living costs in Italy, a survey by the consul's office showed.

United States citizens residing here on a permanent basis totaled but 200 fewer than the corresponding period last year.

Students comprise the largest classification of Americans with 745 enrolled in schools, or studying art and language.

There are 100 educational and religious workers, 35 persons engaged in writing or motion picture professions. United States Government staffs include 26 citizens.

There is one American dentist in Rome and several nurses. Of the Americans living here, 935 were classified by the consul's report as dependents.

Americans today received less than 12 lire in exchange for a dollar whereas the former exchange rate, when the United States was on the gold standard, was 19 to 20 lire per dollar.

Persons who purchased one of the popular brands of American cigarettes today paid 68 cents per package. An ordinary lunch costs a minimum of $1.20 and dinner a minimum of $1.70.

Tea for two persons, consisting of tea and four small sandwiches, costs at least $1.20 in most restaurants and hotels.

A whisky and soda sells for 40 to 60 cents.

The price of gasoline is 64 cents a gallon. The Ballila, smallest automobile manufactured in Italy, sells for $1,020. The Ballila is smaller than any low-price car made in the United States and has a wheel base slightly greater than a "Baby Austin."

Italians probably are taxed more than any other nation, even including Great Britain. The national income is less than 70,000,000,000 lire annually, while the federal budget alone approximates 20,000,000,000.

Exchange Withdrawals.

New York, March 26 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange today reported that the name of Peter J. Maloney, of Maloney, Anderson & Block, had been dropped from the list of candidates for president. Withdrawals from the list of suggestions for governing members included S. F. Callaway, of Callaway Fish & Co.; J. Russell Forgan, of Field, Glore & Co., and George Lindsay, of Speyer & Co.

April Bond Maturities.

New York, March 26 (AP).—Corporate bond maturities during April will total $38,655,933, according to Standard Statistics Co. The number of bonds and notes making up the total is 144, of which 13 amount to $1,000,000 or more.

Irate Farmers Dump Milk Bound for Dallas

Dallas, Tex., March 26 (AP).—Thousands of gallons of milk was dumped on highways leading into Dallas today by irate farmers determined to cut off the city' milk supply until distributors pay them a higher price.

Serious disorder was barely averted at a freight depot where farmers sought to prevent the unloading of a carload of milk. Police armed with tear-gas bombs rushed to the station and the agitation subsided.

Walt Mason

The Hand-Out.

One day I helped a fellow man, I gave him beef stew in a can, for he announced with dismal shrieks he hadn't eaten in three weeks. He looked as though his tale was true, his face was thin, his gills were blue; I pitied much this homeless swain, the signs of famine were so plain. When he'd devoured the wholesome stew, and all the doughnuts then in view, and sundry pies and currant tarts, and cake divided into parts, he wrung my hand and shed some brine and blessed this kindly heart of mine. "You've saved my life," I heard him say, "and never, till my dying day shall I forget the help you gave, which saved my person from the grave." And then he left, and on my door he slyly marked the figure "4," to notify whatever bum should down that quiet roadway come, that here there dwelled an easy mark, my home a pleasant place to park. And so next day three hoboes came, all tired and dusty, halt and lame, and they announced with bubbling tear, they hadn't eaten since last year. The beef stew can was then employed until it was an aching void, and they were given onions ripe, and kraut and corned beef hash and tripe. Next day five homeless pilgrims came; their anecdotes were much the same; "It is so long since we had chow, the date we can't remember now; and we will bless you to and fro, in every language that we know, if you will be our goodly host and kindly feed us quail on toast." By such sad facts it's understood why people tire of doing good. However kind a man may be, however fond of charity, his soul is charged with feelings dark when he is thought an easy mark.

D. C. Inventors To Shun Profit And Aid Public

At Least That's Announced Goal of New Utopian Research Group.

A Utopian research society, whose purpose is to make inventions and turn them to social betterment rather than to individual profit, has been organized by a group of prominent scientists and residents of Washington, many of them Government officials, it was announced last night. It will be known as Research Associates, Inc., and will have laboratories at American University and offices in the Insurance Building, 907 Fifteenth street northwest.

"The corporation springs from the rapidly growing recognition by scientists and social-minded laymen that there is too great a lag between the perfecting of ideas by scientists and their introduction into the common life of the country where their benefits may be enjoyed by the many," the announcement said.

"We believe that the present period of extreme flux in American social patterns caused by the depression offers an especially hopeful opportunity to attempt the application of processes whereby the levels of community living may be materially improved."

The new organization, an outgrowth of Research Corporation, a New York society, consists of the following personnel:

Frederick G. Cottrell, physical chemist and engineer; Chester C. Gilbert, chemical engineer; Frederick S. Brackett, physician; William McLellan, president of Potomac Electric Power Co.; F. J. Bailey, assistant to the director of the U. S. Budget Bureau; C. E. Juhlin, chief engineer, common metals division, U. S. Bureau of Mines; Dr. R. R. Sayers, senior surgeon, U. S. Bureau of Mines; Watson Davis, editor of Science Service; Dr. William C. White; Heber Blankenhorn, National Labor Relations Board, and Gardner Jackson, until recently administrative assistant, consumers' counsel, AAA.

Research Associates, Inc., which had the advice of Commissioner James M. Landis of the securities and exchange commission, expects to develop discoveries, inventions, patent rights and letters patent of scientists within the organization as well as receive by gift or purchase inventions and discoveries from outside. It is a nonprofit-making organization, incorporated under the laws of Delaware. Its aim is "to find practical application for the results of our investigation . . . so that the undertaking will be self-supporting."

Boundary Commission Postpones Hearing

The Virginia-District of Columbia Boundary Commission, whose first meeting under its second life was scheduled for yesterday, will not resume hearings until next Monday.

All three commissioners—Chairman Charlts H. Brough, William C. Gloth and Malcolm S. McConihe—were on the bench when the appointed hour of 10 a. m. came, but Virginia's plea that it was not prepared to resume presentation of testimony forced the postponement.

The commission, which officially died on March 1, was revived by President Roosevelt last week when he signed a resolution reviving the body for another nine months.

Annual Session Of Daughters Of 1812 Opens

Charlottesville Chapter Is Is Host to Virginia Delegates.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 26.—Delegates from Virginia chapters attended the annual meeting of the Virginia State Council of the Daughters of 1812, which convened today at the Monticello Hotel, with the Gen. John Smith Chapter acting as host.

After the regulation of delegates a meeting of the executive board was held, preceding the first business session, which was presided over by Mrs. William A. Porter, State regent.

Lunch was served the visiting delegates. Those present were Miss M. Ruth Burruss and Mrs. John B. Thompson, prospective members, as were special friends of the family of the late Mrs. William Watson, of Charlottesville, and her daughters, Mrs. Ella Johnson and Miss Hallie Watson.

A memorial service was held for two officers of the State council who died during the last year, Mrs. Edgar L. Greaver, of Tazewell, and Mrs. James Powell, of Bristol, past State regents. A memorial wreath was taken to the grave of Mrs. Watson in Maplewood cemetery.

Tonight's session of the council was presided over by Mrs. Bessie Dunn Miller, of Free Union, regent of the Gen. John Smith Chapter. The principal speakers were Judge Lemuel F. Smith, of the circuit court, and Mrs. William A. Porter, State president. The invocation and benediction were made by the Rev. Robert F. Gibson, D. D., rector of Christ Episcopal Church. Flag bearers were furnished by the Monticello Guard, local National Guard unit, and music was furnished by the Charlottesville Municipal Band.

Death Won't End Your Sorrow, Oshkosh Tells N.Y. Suicide Man

Don't Fool Yourself, Note From Wisconsin Begs Mysterious 'F. C. H.'

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 26.—To "F. C. H.," who somewhere in New York is awaiting All Fools' Day to carry out a plan of death for himself and for his son, went an appealing letter today not to "fool yourself."

Theodore Case, of Oshkosk, Wis., directed the letter to a man known only as F. C. H. With his wife dead, F. C. H. wrote to a New York broadcast station that he could see no reason for living, that he would not leave his son to face the world alone, and that on April 1 he intends to kill himself and his son.

Case wrote:

"Friend in distress, F. C. H.:

"If you carry out your wrong idea on All Fools Day, April 1, you will only fool yourself. Death will not stop your sorrow. That will not end until such time as God sees fit.

"Your son's life is not yours to take. Let him live, for he may be one who can save many people's lives, or do great good in this world of ours. God lets those suffer most who he thinks can do good in this world.

"The real spark of intelligence enters when people can forget their own sorrows and try to help others who are more weak than themselves.

"Pray to God. He will relieve your sorrow to such an extent that you will be able to bear it.

"If you still insist, however, on going ahead with your plan, then by all means let your son live, send him to me. We are childless. We will give him love and a home."

Gassaway in Court, Aids Cowman's Son

A hard-riding cowpuncher appeared in Police Court yesterday to recall his days on the Western range and help a friend in trouble. He was Representative Percy L. Gassaway (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Bruce Inman, of the 100 block of C street northeast, charged with disorderly conduct, was arraigned before Judge Ralph Given. Representative Gassaway stepped before the counsel table.

"I'm an attorney," he said. "Served on the bench in Oklahoma for eight years. I punched cows and rode the range with this lad's father, Rufus Inman, before the boy was born. It is a matter of pride with me. I guess he just got in the wrong place at the right time."

Inman was arrested by Policeman J. F. Reynolds, of the First Precinct, after a street flight on downtown Ninth street. Inman claimed he was attacked by several men and fought in self-defense. Judge Given postponed the case until Friday, pending appearance of a second defendant.

Democrats Name Postmaster Choice

Fifer Recommended for Staunton Position.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., March 26.—Members of the city Democratic committee got together this afternoon and after an hour and a quarter in executive session, Chairman J. Harry May announced that Robert E. Fifer, insurance man, had been unanimously indorsed for postmaster.

It is expected that Representative A. Willis Robertson, of the Seventh Virginia District, will forward Fifer's name to Postmaster General Farley without delay, recommending that he be given a temporary appointment at once, pending final confirmation for the full four-year term, as the term of Postmaster J. J. Kivlighan, Republican, expired February 14. It is likely that Fifer will be designated to take charge of the Staunton office without delay probably on or about April 1.

Postmaster Kivlighan forwarded his resignation to Farley last Saturday. Because Democrats had not agreed on a man, Kivlighan has continued in office. There were nine applicants for the postmastership four of whom were eligible for consideration by the committee.

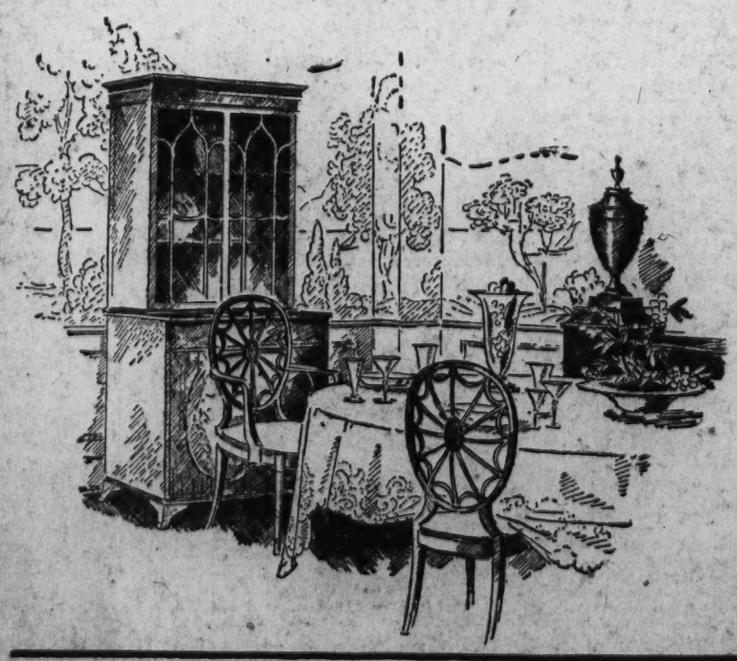
A New and Interesting Presentation of Furniture of the Popular Periods

EACH of the famous types of furniture designs, from the early American of the time of the Pilgrim Fathers to the present, has its fitting place in the furnishing of the homes of today. The names are familiar—the motifs have distinct charm and character, but nowhere has one been able to see displayed each of these schools of design in its proper grouping and consistent environment.

Heretofore the most orderly exhibit has been at best a scramble of styles and a motley medley of periods.



Beginning today, you can see here each period individually assembled in sympathetic setting—living room, dining room and bedroom groups—presenting effects as they would really appear installed in your own home. Thus you can study styles, plan furnishings—assured of their authenticity and unhampered by incongruous accompaniment.

It is a notable advance in store service—an unique exposition—interesting to every one who recognizes art as co-important with intrinsic value.

That you may review the display leisurely we have arranged to remain open

This Evening and Thursday Evening March 27 and 28—From 8 to 10 O'Clock

No sales will be made and you are personally invited to be our guest on these evening occasions.
